Chapter 9

The Pilgrimage to the Holy Places of the South

(English translation from the Bengali, following the Gauḍīya Maṭha edition and the «Anubhāṣya», 2026 — draft)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya

Summary. This chapter tells how Mahāprabhu set out from Vidyānagara and passed through Gautamī-gaṅgā, Mallikārjuna, Ahobala-nṛsiṁha, Siddhavaṭa, Skanda-kṣetra, Trimaṭha, Vṛddhakāśī, the place of the Buddhists, Tripati, Trimalla, Pānā-nṛsiṁha, Śiva-kāñcī, Viṣṇu-kāñcī, Trikālahastī, Vṛddhakola, Śiyālī-bhairavī, the bank of the Kāverī, and Kumbhakarṇa-kapāla. Then He reached Śrī Raṅga-kṣetra and made Śrī Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa and his family devotees of Kṛṣṇa. From Śrīraṅgam He went to Ṛṣabha hill and met Paramānanda Purī Gosāñi there. Śrī Purī Gosvāmī left for Puruṣottama, and Mahāprabhu went on toward Setubandha. On Śrī Śaila hill He spoke with Śiva and Durgā, who were living there in the guise of a brāhmaṇa and his wife. From there He passed Kāmakoṣṭhī-purī and came to Southern Mathurā, where He spoke with a renounced brāhmaṇa, a devotee of Rāma. Next He bathed in the Kṛtamālā and saw Paraśurāma on Mahendra hill. From there the Lord went to Setubandha, bathed at Dhanus-tīrtha, and saw Śrī Rāmeśvara. There He obtained an old manuscript of the Kūrma Purāṇa—the leaves about the māyā-Sītā—and brought it to the brāhmaṇa Rāmadāsa mentioned before. After this, in the land of Pāṇḍya, He visited the Tāmraparṇī, then Naya-tripadī, Ciyaḍatalā, Tila-kāñcī, Gajendra-mokṣaṇa, Pānāgaḍi, Cāmtāpura, Śrī Vaikuṇṭha, Malaya hill, Dhanus-tīrtha, and Kanyākumārī, and in the land of Mallāra He saw the Bhaṭṭathāris. He rescued Kālā Kṛṣṇadāsa from their hands. Then, on the bank of the Payasvinī, He obtained the Brahma-saṁhitā (its fifth chapter). From there He went by way of the Payasvinī, the Śṛṅgavera-purī monastery, and Matsya-tīrtha to the village of Uḍupī, where He saw Madhvācārya's Gopāla. After defeating the Tattvavādīs in debate, He passed through Phalgu-tīrtha, Trita-kūpa, Pañcāpsarā, Sūrpāraka, and Kolāpura and reached Pāṇḍarapura. There He learned from Śrī Raṅgapurī that Śaṅkarāraṇya had attained perfection (siddhi). On the bank of the Kṛṣṇaveṇvā, in a community of Vaiṣṇava brāhmaṇas, He obtained the book Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta, composed by Śrī Bilvamaṅgala. From there, by way of the Tāptī, Māhiṣmatī-pura, the bank of the Narmadā, and Ṛṣyamūka hill, He came to Daṇḍakāraṇya and delivered the seven palm trees (sapta-tāla). Then He visited many holy places—Pampā lake, Pañcavaṭī, Nāsika, Brahmagiri, Kuśāvarta (where the Godāvarī has its source), and others—and arrived in Vidyānagara. From Vidyānagara He went on by the same road as before, saw Ālālanātha, and arrived in Śrī Kṣetra.

Gaurahari delivers the people of the South, seized by non-Vaiṣṇava doctrines

1 The people of the South were like elephants seized by the crocodiles of various doctrines. Gaura freed them with the disc of His mercy and made them Vaiṣṇavas.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The people of the South, like Gajendra, had been seized by the crocodiles of many doctrines—Buddhism, Jainism, Māyāvāda, and others. Gauracandra freed them with His disc of mercy and made them Vaiṣṇavas.

Anubhāṣya.

The Lord's journey to the South —

দক্ষিণগমন প্রভুর অতি বিলক্ষণ । সহস্র সহস্র তীর্থ কৈল দরশন ॥ ৩ ॥

dakṣiṇa-gamana prabhura ati vilakṣaṇa to the south the journey of the Lord most extraordinary sahasra sahasra tīrtha kaila daraśana thousands upon thousands of holy places He made visit

3 The Lord’s journey to the south was most extraordinary: He visited thousands upon thousands of holy places.

By seeing the Lord the holy places themselves are made holy, and so the people are delivered —

সেই সব তীর্থ স্পর্শি, মহাতীর্থ কৈল । সেই ছলে সেই দেশের লোক নিস্তারিল ॥ ৪ ॥

sei saba tīrtha sparśi, mahā-tīrtha kaila

sei chale sei deśera loka nistārila
under that pretext of that land the people He delivered

4 By touching all those holy places He made them great holy places, and under that pretext He delivered the people of that land.

The Lord wandered back and forth through the South, so the geographical order is broken in the author's account; only a general direction is given here

of those holy places the order to arrange not I am able dakṣiṇa-vāme tīrtha-gamana haya pherāpheri

5 I cannot set those holy places in order, for His journey to them went right and left, back and forth.

therefore the names only I make enumeration

6 Therefore I simply list their names; I cannot describe them in their proper sequence.

Simply by seeing the Lord, people became Vaiṣṇavas —

পূর্ব্ববৎ পথে যাইতে যে পায় দরশন ।
যেই গ্রামে যায়, সে গ্রামের যত জন ॥ ৭ ॥

সবেই বৈষ্ণব হয়, কহে 'কৃষ্ণ' 'হরি' ।

all Vaiṣṇavas become say "Kṛṣṇa" "Hari" anya grāma nistāraye sei 'vaiṣṇava' kari'
other villages deliver them Vaiṣṇavas making

7–8 As before, all who saw Him on the road, and all the people of every village He came to, became Vaiṣṇavas and chanted "Kṛṣṇa" and "Hari." They in turn delivered other villages, making their people Vaiṣṇavas.

The condition of the people of the South at that time — of the south of the land the people of many kinds keha jñānī, keha karmī, pāṣaṇḍī apāra some jñānīs some karmīs unbelievers countless 9 The people of the South were of many kinds: some were jñānīs, some were karmīs, and the unbelievers were countless.

কেহ জ্ঞানী, কেহ কর্ম্মী, পাষণ্ডী অপার ॥ ৯ ॥

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Pāṣaṇḍīs: jñānīs and followers of karma-vāda who oppose pure devotion.

*By the Lord's mercy karmīs, jñānīs, and pāṣaṇḍīs become Vaiṣṇavas —*

সেই সব লোক প্রভুর দর্শনপ্রভাবে ।

their own doctrines giving up became Vaiṣṇavas

10 Such was the power of the Lord's darśana that all those people gave up their own doctrines and became Vaiṣṇavas.

Mādhvas and Śrī Vaiṣṇavas who worshiped Rāma begin to worship Kṛṣṇa —

বৈষ্ণবের মধ্যে রাম-উপাসক সব । কেহ 'তত্ত্ববাদী', কেহ হয় 'শ্রীবৈষ্ণব' ॥ ১১ ॥

the Vaiṣṇavas among of Rāma worshippers all keha 'tattvavādī', keha haya 'śrī-vaiṣṇava'
some Tattvavādīs some were Śrī Vaiṣṇavas

11 The Vaiṣṇavas there all worshipped Rāma: some were Tattvavādīs, and some were Śrī Vaiṣṇavas.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Worshipers of Rāma (rāma-upāsakas): the Rāmāt Vaiṣṇavas. Tattvavādīs: those who accept the tattva (truths) of Madhva's teaching and establish śuddha-dvaita-vāda, the doctrine of pure duality. Śrī Vaiṣṇavas: the Vaiṣṇavas of Rāmānuja's sampradāya.

Anubhāṣya.

Tattvavādīs. To distinguish the Vaiṣṇavas of Śrī Madhva from the Māyāvādīs of Śrī Śaṅkara, the Mādhva Vaiṣṇavas are called "Tattvavādīs." The ācāryas of Tattvavāda refuted nirviśeṣa-brahma-vāda—the false reasoning of kevala-advaita-vāda—and established bhagavat-tattva, the truth of Bhagavān. The Mādhva Vaiṣṇavas are Brahma Vaiṣṇavas (they belong to the Brahma-sampradāya). Therefore they do not accept that their original guru, Brahmā, was bewildered (Tenth Canto), for in his commentary Bhāgavata-tātparya Śrīman Madhvācārya left out this “pastime of Brahmā's bewilderment.” Śrī Mādhavendra Purī was one of the Śrī Mādhva Vaiṣṇavas, and he preached prema-bhakti, the final goal of Tattvavāda. Although the Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇavas are Mādhvas, they did not receive the name “Tattvavādī.”

Śrī Vaiṣṇavas. The original guru of Śrī Rāmānuja's sampradāya is “Lakṣmī,” and so they are called “Śrī Vaiṣṇavas.”

The Tattvavādīs worship Śrī Kṛṣṇa and the Śrī Vaiṣṇavas worship Lakṣmī-Nārāyaṇa, yet in both a strong worship of Śrī Rāmacandra is seen.

A present-day writer of the Tattvavādī sampradāya, Śrī Padmanābhācārya, says: “In our principal Mādhva monasteries the Deities of Śrī Rāma and Sītā are especially worshiped. In the book Adhyātma-rāmāyaṇa, in chapters 12, 13, 14, and 15, the story of the original Deities of Śrī Rāma and Sītā is told as follows. A brāhmaṇa vowed not to eat any food without first seeing Śrī Rāmacandra each day. Once, because of affairs of state, Śrī Rāmacandra could not come out before His subjects for a whole week. So the brāhmaṇa, steadfast in his vow to see Rāma, did not take even a drop of water for that week. At last, after eight days, on the ninth day, the brāhmaṇa was brought before Śrī Rāma and received His darśana. Hearing of the brāhmaṇa's steadfastness, Śrī Rāmacandra told Lakṣmaṇa, ‘Give this true devotee brāhmaṇa the pair of Rāma and Sītā Deities kept in My own house.’ The brāhmaṇa received Them from Lakṣmaṇa and served these two Deities all his life, and before leaving this world he gave Them to Śrī Hanumān. Śrī Hanumān served these two Deities for a long time, holding Them to his heart. Long afterward Bhīmasena came to Gandhamādana mountain, and when Hanumān took leave of him, he gave him these two Deities. Bhīma kept Them in the royal palace. Up to the time of the last king of that dynasty, ‘Kṣemakānta,’ these two Deities were served in the royal palace. Then They came into the possession of the Gajapati kings of Utkala and were kept in their royal treasury. Śrī Madhvācārya permitted his disciple Śrī Narahari Tīrthapāda to take the original Rāma and Sītā Deities from the royal treasury and serve Them. From the time of King Ikṣvāku these Rāma and Sītā Deities had been kept in the palace of the kings of the solar dynasty, and even before Rāmacandra's birth Daśaratha served Them. Later, while Lakṣmaṇa was serving Them, by Rāmacandra's order They were given to the brāhmaṇa mentioned above.” Three months and sixteen days before his departure Śrī Madhva obtained these two Deities and installed Them in the Uttara-rāḍhī Maṭha, the principal monastery of the village of Uḍupī. Since then the ācāryas of Śrī Madhva have been Their custodians.

In Rāmānuja's sampradāya the path of “Śrī Rāmāyaṇa-guru-karaṇa” (accepting a guru according to the Śrī Rāmāyaṇa) is current.[13] In Tirupati and elsewhere the Rāmānujīyas worship the Deity of Śrī Rāma. In the “Rāmānandī,” “Jamāyet,” or “Rāmāt” sampradāya, which came out of Rāmānuja's sampradāya, the worship of Śrī Rāma and Sītā is firmly established. The Rāmānujīyas are more devoted to Rāma than to Kṛṣṇa.

12 Upon seeing Mahāprabhu, all those Vaiṣṇavas became worshippers of Kṛṣṇa and took up the name of Kṛṣṇa.

at Gautamī-gaṅgā arriving He took a bath in the Gaṅgā

14 Reciting this verse along the way, the Lord journeyed on. He came to Gautamī-gaṅgā and bathed in the Gaṅgā there.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

In describing the Lord's pilgrimage Śrīla Kavirāja Gosvāmī does not keep to a geographical order, and he admits this himself. The order found in Govinda dāsa's Kaḍacā (?) largely agrees with geographical descriptions. Let readers look at the order in that book and judge for themselves. According to Govinda dāsa, Mahāprabhu went from Rājamahendrī to Trimanda and from there to Ḍhuṇḍirāma-tīrtha. According to this book, however, the Lord went from Rājamahendrī to Gautamī-gaṅgā and then to Mallikārjuna-tīrtha.

Anubhāṣya.

Gautamī-gaṅgā is one of the branches of the Godāvarī. On the far bank, opposite Rājamahendrī, was the āśrama of the sage Gautama, and so the Godāvarī is called Gautamī-gaṅgā.

At Mallikārjuna-tīrtha the Lord sees Śambhu, the servant of Rāma —

মল্লিকার্জ্জুন-তীর্থে যাই' মহেশ দেখিল । তাঁহা সব লোকে কৃষ্ণনাম লওয়াইল ॥ ১৫ ॥

mallikārjuna-tīrthe yāi' maheśa dekhila to Mallikārjuna-tīrtha going Maheśa He saw tāṁhā saba loke kṛṣṇa-nāma laoyāila there all the people the name of Kṛṣṇa He made take 15 He went to Mallikārjuna-tīrtha and saw Maheśa (Śiva). There He made all the people take the name of Kṛṣṇa.

Anubhāṣya.

Mallikārjuna is Śrīśailam. It lies 70 miles downstream from Kurnool, on the southern bank of the river Kṛṣṇā. In the center of a walled courtyard stands the temple of the chief deity, Śiva "Mallikārjuna." This Śiva-liṅga is renowned as one of the jyotir-liṅgas (Kurnool Manual).

Darśana* of Ahobala-nṛsiṁha —*

the servant of Rāma Mahādeva He made sight ahovala-nṛsiṁhere karilā gamana to Ahovala-nṛsiṁha He made going

16 He had darśana of Mahādeva, the servant of Rāma, and then went to Ahovala-nṛsiṁha.

Anubhāṣya.

Ahobala-nṛsiṁha: see the Anubhāṣya on Madhya 1.106.

Darśana* of the Deities of Rāma and Sītā at Siddhavaṭa —*

নৃসিংহ দেখিয়া তাঁরে কৈল নতি-স্তুতি ।
সিদ্ধবট গেলা যাঁহা মূর্ত্তি সীতাপতি ॥ ১৭ ॥

Nṛsiṁha seeing to Him He made obeisances and prayers siddhavaṭa gelā yāṁhā mūrti sītāpati to Siddhavaṭa He went where the Deity of Sītā's Lord

17 Seeing Nṛsiṁha, He offered Him obeisances and prayers. Then He went to Siddhavaṭa, where Sītā's Lord abides in His Deity form.

Anubhāṣya.

Siddhavaṭa lies 10 miles east of the town of Cuddapah. It is known by the name "Sidhout," and at some time in the past it was also known as "Southern Kāśī." The name comes from āśrama-vaṭa-vṛkṣa, the banyan tree of the āśrama (Cuddapah Manual).

There a Vaiṣṇava brāhmaṇa, a servant of Rāma, gives the Lord alms —

রঘুনাথ দেখি' কৈল প্রণতি স্তবন । তাঁহা এক বিপ্র প্রভুর কৈল নিমন্ত্রণ ॥ ১৮ ॥

raghunātha dekhi' kaila praṇati stavana Raghunātha seeing He made obeisances prayers tāṁhā eka vipra prabhura kaila nimantraṇa
there a brāhmaṇa the Lord made invitation

18 Seeing Raghunātha, He offered obeisances and prayers. There a brāhmaṇa invited the Lord to take His meal.

সেই বিপ্র রামনাম নিরন্তর লয় ।
'রাম' 'রাম' বিনা অন্য বাণী না কহয় ॥ ১৯ ॥

sei vipra rāma-nāma nirantara laya that brāhmaṇa the name of Rāma constantly takes
'rāma' 'rāma' vinā anya vāṇī nā kahaya
"Rāma" "Rāma" except other words not he speaks

19 That brāhmaṇa chanted the name of Rāma constantly. Apart from "Rāma, Rāma," he spoke no other word.

The Lord stays one day in his house and bestows mercy on him —

সেই দিন তাঁর ঘরে রহি' ভিক্ষা করি' । তাঁরে কৃপা করি' আগে চলিলা গৌরহরি ॥ ২০ ॥

tāṁre kṛpā kari' āge calilā gaurahari

20 Gaurahari stayed in his house that day and accepted His meal there. Then, after blessing him, He went on.

Darśana* of Skanda at Skanda-kṣetra and of the Deity of Vāmana at Trimaṭha —*

to Trimaṭha He came there seeing Trivikrama

21 At Skanda-kṣetra He had darśana of Skanda. Then He came to Trimaṭha and saw Trivikrama there.

Anubhāṣya.
Skanda is Kārttikeya. This holy place is within Hyderabad.

The same brāhmaṇa chants Kṛṣṇa's name in place of Rāma's —

পুনঃ সিদ্ধবট আইলা সেই বিপ্র ঘরে । সেই বিপ্র কৃষ্ণনাম লয় নিরন্তরে ॥ ২২ ॥

punaḥ siddhavaṭa āilā sei vipra-ghare again to Siddhavaṭa He came of that brāhmaṇa to the house sei vipra kṛṣṇa-nāma laya nirantare that brāhmaṇa the name of Kṛṣṇa takes constantly

22 He came back to Siddhavaṭa, to the house of that brāhmaṇa, and now the brāhmaṇa was constantly chanting the name of Kṛṣṇa.

The Lord's question and the brāhmaṇa's answer —

ভিক্ষা করি' মহাপ্রভু তাঁরে প্রশ্ন কৈল ।
'কহ বিপ্র, এই তোমার কোন্ দশা হৈল ॥ ২৩ ॥

23 After taking His meal, Mahāprabhu asked him, "Tell Me, brāhmaṇa, what state has come over you?

now why constantly you take the name of Kṛṣṇa

24 Before, you chanted the name of Rāma constantly. Why do you now constantly chant the name of Kṛṣṇa?"

বিপ্র বলে, — এই তোমার দর্শন-প্রভাবে ।

tomā dekhi' gela mora ājanma-svabhāve
You seeing went away my from birth nature

25 The brāhmaṇa said, "This is by the power of seeing You. When I saw You, the nature I had from birth left me.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The habit of chanting Rāma's name had been his from birth. Now it changed, and chanting Kṛṣṇa's name became his nature.

বাল্যাবধি রামনাম গ্রহণ আমার ।

26 From childhood I have chanted the name of Rāma. But when I saw You, the name of Kṛṣṇa came to me — just once.

সেই হৈতে কৃষ্ণনাম জিহ্বাতে বসিলা । কৃষ্ণনাম স্ফুরে, রামনাম দূরে গেলা ॥ ২৭ ॥

from that time the name of Kṛṣṇa on my tongue sat kṛṣṇa-nāma sphure, rāma-nāma dūre gelā
the name of Kṛṣṇa appears the name of Rāma far went away

27 Since then the name of Kṛṣṇa has dwelt on my tongue: it is Kṛṣṇa's name that now comes forth, and the name of Rāma has gone far away.

বাল্যকাল হৈতে মোর স্বভাব এক হয় ।

bālya-kāla haite mora svabhāva eka haya from childhood time my nature one is nāmera mahimā-śāstra kariye sañcaya of the name of the glory of the scriptures I make collecting 28 From childhood I have had one habit: I collect what the scriptures say about the glory of the holy name.

The etymological meaning of the word "Rāma" —

রমন্তে যোগীনোঽনন্তে সত্যানন্দে চিদাত্মনি । ইতি রামপদেনাসৌ পরং ব্রহ্মাভিধীয়তে ॥ ২৯ ॥

ramante yogīno 'nante

the Supreme Brahman is called

29 "The yogīs delight (ramante) in the Infinite, in true bliss, in the spiritual Self; therefore the Supreme Brahman is called 'Rāma.' " (Padma Purāṇa, Śrī Rāmacandra's Śata-nāma-stotra, 8)[2]

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Yogīs delight (find bliss) in the unlimited Supreme Truth, whose nature is true bliss and spirit. Therefore the Supreme Reality, Brahman, is called by the name "Rāma."

Anubhāṣya.
yoginaḥ (those detached from sense objects) anante (in what is beyond matter) satyānande cid-ātmani (in sac-cid-ānanda) ramante. iti (therefore) rāma-padena asau (Rāmacandra) paraṁ brahma abhidhīyate (is called).

The etymological meaning of the word "Kṛṣṇa" —

কৃষির্ভূবাচকঃ শব্দো ণশ্চ নির্বৃতিবাচকঃ ।
তয়োরৈক্যং পরং ব্রহ্ম কৃষ্ণ ইত্যভিধীয়তে ॥ ৩০ ॥

kṛṣir bhū-vācakaḥ śabdo
"kṛṣ" being denoting the sound
ṇaś ca nirvṛti-vācakaḥ
"ṇa" and bliss denoting
tayor aikyaṁ paraṁ brahma of the two the union the Supreme Brahman
kṛṣṇa ity abhidhīyate Kṛṣṇa thus is called

30 "The sound 'kṛṣ' denotes being, and 'ṇa' denotes bliss. Their union, the Supreme Brahman, is called 'Kṛṣṇa.' " (Mahābhārata, Udyoga-parva, 71.4)[3]

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

The root kṛṣ means bhū, that is, attractive existence, and the word ṇa means nirvṛti, that is, supreme bliss. The suffix ṇa is added to the root kṛṣ, and the unity of the two in the word "Kṛṣṇa" denotes the Supreme Brahman.

Anubhāṣya.

kṛṣiḥ śabdaḥ bhū-vācakaḥ (which determines existence), ṇaḥ ca nirvṛti-vācakaḥ (which means bliss); tayoḥ (of the two) aikyam kṛṣṇaḥ paraṁ brahma iti abhidhīyate (is called).

The difference between the names of Rāma and Kṛṣṇa in the pastimes —

পরংব্রহ্ম দুইনাম সমান হইল । পুনঃ আর শাস্ত্রে কিছু বিশেষ পাইল ॥ ৩১ ॥

paraṁ brahma dui-nāma samāna haila of the Supreme Brahman the two names equal turned out punaḥ āra śāstre kichu viśeṣa pāila again further in the scriptures some distinction I found

31 Both names belong to the Supreme Brahman and so are equal. But in the scriptures I found a further distinction.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

If one accepts the meaning of the two verses just cited, the names of Rāma and Kṛṣṇa equally mean the Supreme Brahman. Yet scripture says something more as well; this will be told next.

Anubhāṣya.

Both names, "Rāma" and "Kṛṣṇa," are the Supreme Brahman; everything is present in them. Yet when I searched the scriptures to see how these two names, both the Supreme Brahman, differ in rasa, I understood what is special.

One name of Rāma equals a thousand names of Viṣṇu —

রাম রামেতি রামেতি রমে রামে মনোরমে । সহস্রনামভিস্তুল্যং রামনাম বরাননে ॥ ৩২ ॥

rāma rāmeti rāmeti
"Rāma Rāma Rāma" (chanting)
rame rāme manorame
I take delight in Rāma enchanting sahasra-nāmabhis tulyaṁ to the thousand names equal rāma-nāma varānane
the name of Rāma O fair-faced one

32 "O fair-faced one, chanting 'Rāma, Rāma, Rāma,' I take delight in the enchanting Rāma. The name of Rāma is equal to the thousand names (of Viṣṇu)." (Padma Purāṇa, Uttara-khaṇḍa, 72.335)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
"I delight (find bliss) in the beautiful Rāma, [chanting] 'Rāma, Rāma, Rāma.' O fair-faced one, one name of Rāma equals a thousand names of Viṣṇu."

Anubhāṣya.
he varānane (O fair-faced one), ahaṁ rāma rāmeti rāmeti (saṅkīrtya, chanting) manorame (in the enchanting) rāme rame (I find bliss). ekaṁ rāma-nāma sahasra-nāmabhiḥ (to the thousand names of Viṣṇu) tulyam.

One name of Kṛṣṇa equals three names of Rāma —

সহস্রনাম্নাং পুণ্যানাং ত্রিরাবৃত্ত্যা তু যৎ ফলম্ । একাবৃত্ত্যা তু কৃষ্ণস্য নামৈকং তৎ প্রযচ্ছতি ॥ ৩৩ ॥ sahasra-nāmnāṁ puṇyānāṁ of the thousand names holy trir-āvṛttyā tu yat phalam

by three repetitions indeed what result ekāvṛttyā tu kṛṣṇasya
by one repetition indeed of Kṛṣṇa nāmaikaṁ tat prayacchati
the name alone that gives

33 "The result obtained by reciting the thousand holy names (of Viṣṇu) three times is given by a single utterance of one name of Kṛṣṇa."

(Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

The result obtained by reciting the sacred thousand names (of Viṣṇu) three times is given by uttering the name of Kṛṣṇa once. The point is this: one name of Rāma equals a thousand names of Viṣṇu, and so the result of chanting Rāma's name three times is obtained from a single name of Kṛṣṇa.

Anubhāṣya.

puṇyānāṁ (of the sacred) sahasra-nāmnāṁ (thousand names of Viṣṇu) trir-āvṛttyā (by reciting three times) yat phalaṁ (prāpnoti, one obtains), kṛṣṇasya nāma ekaṁ ekāvṛttyā (uttered once) tat phalaṁ tu prayacchati (gives).

The glory of Kṛṣṇa's name is supreme —

এই বাক্যে কৃষ্ণনামের মহিমা অপার । তথাপি লইতে নারি, শুন হেতু তার ॥ ৩৪ ॥

ei vākye kṛṣṇa-nāmera mahimā apāra in this statement of the name of Kṛṣṇa the glory boundless tathāpi laite nāri, śuna hetu tāra still to take I could not hear the reason for that 34 This statement shows the boundless glory of the name of Kṛṣṇa. Still I could not chant it; hear the reason.

The brāhmaṇa's other reason concerning [not] taking Kṛṣṇa's name —

ইষ্টদেব রাম, তাঁর নামে সুখ পাই । সুখ পাঞা রামনাম রাত্রিদিন গাই ॥ ৩৫ ॥

iṣṭa-deva rāma, tāṁra nāme sukha pāi my chosen Deity Rāma His in the name happiness I find sukha pāñā rāma-nāma rātri-dina gāi happiness finding the name of Rāma night and day I sing

35 Rāma is my chosen Deity, and I found happiness in His name; finding that happiness, I sang the name of Rāma night and day.

Only Kṛṣṇa can give Kṛṣṇa's name, so the brāhmaṇa recognizes the Lord as Kṛṣṇa —

তোমার দর্শনে যবে কৃষ্ণনাম আইল । তাহার মহিমা তবে হৃদয়ে লাগিল ॥ ৩৬ ॥

tomāra darśane yabe kṛṣṇa-nāma āila of You at the sight when the name of Kṛṣṇa came tāhāra mahimā tabe hṛdaye lāgila its glory then in my heart took hold

36 When the name of Kṛṣṇa came to me at the sight of You, its glory took hold of my heart.

The Lord's mercy to the brāhmaṇa —

সেই কৃষ্ণ তুমি — ইহা সাক্ষাৎ নির্দ্ধারিল । এত কহি' বিপ্র প্রভুর চরণে পড়িল ॥ ৩৭ ॥

sei kṛṣṇa tumi — ihā sākṣāt nirddhārila that Kṛṣṇa You this directly I have ascertained eta kahi' vipra prabhura caraṇe paḍila
so saying the brāhmaṇa of the Lord at the feet fell 37 I have clearly understood that You are that very Kṛṣṇa." Saying this, the brāhmaṇa fell at the Lord's feet.

Darśana* of Śambhu at Vṛddhakāśī —*

তাঁরে কৃপা করি' প্রভু চলিলা আর দিনে । বৃদ্ধকাশী আসি' কৈল শিব দরশনে ॥ ৩৮ ॥

tāṁre kṛpā kari' prabhu calilā āra dine to him mercy showing the Lord departed the next day vṛddhakāśī āsi' kaila śiva daraśane to Vṛddhakāśī coming He made of Śiva sight

38 After showing him mercy, the Lord set out the next day. He came to Vṛddhakāśī and had darśana of Śiva.

Anubhāṣya.

Vṛddhakāśī: its present name is "Vṛddhācalam." It lies in the South Arcot district on the bank of the "Maṇimukha," one of the tributaries of the river Vellar. Formerly it was called "Vṛddhakāśī" (South Arcot Manual). Some call Vṛddhakāśī "Kālahastipura." Govinda, the son of Rāmānuja's mother's sister, served this Śiva for a long time.

Then the Lord stays in another village, and many people come to see Him —

তাঁহা হৈতে চলি' আগে গেলা এক গ্রামে । ব্রাহ্মণ-সমাজ তাঁহা, করিল বিশ্রামে ॥ ৩৯ ॥

tāṁhā haite cali' āge gelā eka grāme from there setting out further He went to a village brāhmaṇa-samāja tāṁhā, karila viśrāme of brāhmaṇas a community there He made rest

39 Going on from there, He came to a village where there was a community of brāhmaṇas, and He rested there.

প্রভুর প্রভাবে লোক আইল দরশনে ।

lakṣārbuda loka āise, nā yāya gaṇane hundreds of thousands and millions of people come not can be counted

40 Drawn by the Lord's power, people came to see Him — hundreds of thousands, millions, beyond counting.

On seeing the Lord, everyone becomes a Vaiṣṇava —

গোসাঞির সৌন্দর্য্য দেখি' তাতে প্রেমাবেশ । সবে 'কৃষ্ণ' কহে, 'বৈষ্ণব' হৈল সর্ব্বদেশ ॥ ৪১ ॥ of the Gosāñi the beauty seeing in it absorption in love

sabe 'kṛṣṇa' kahe, 'vaiṣṇava' haila sarva-deśa
all "Kṛṣṇa" say Vaiṣṇava became the whole land

41 Seeing the Lord's beauty and His absorption in love, everyone said "Kṛṣṇa," and the whole land became Vaiṣṇava.

The Lord refutes the arguments of all the followers of other doctrines —

তার্কিক-মীমাংসক, যত মায়াবাদিগণ ।
সাংখ্য, পাতঞ্জল, স্মৃতি, পুরাণ, আগম ॥ ৪২ ॥

42 There were logicians and Mīmāṁsakas, all the Māyāvādīs, and followers of Sāṅkhya and Pātañjala (yoga), of the smṛtis, the Purāṇas and the Āgamas.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Tārkikas: the Naiyāyikas, followers of Gautama, and the Vaiśeṣikas, followers of Kaṇāda. Mīmāṁsakas: those who establish the doctrine of Jaimini. Māyāvādīs: those who establish the doctrine of Śaṅkara. Sāṅkhya: the doctrine of Kapila. Pātañjala: the yoga-śāstra. Smṛti: the twenty saṁhitās of dharma-śāstra—those of Manu, Atri, and others. Purāṇas: the eighteen Mahā-purāṇas and the eighteen Upapurāṇas. Āgamas: the Tantra-śāstras.

all doctrines finding fault the Lord makes to pieces to pieces

43 All of them were fierce in upholding their own scriptures, but the Lord exposed the faults of every doctrine and broke them to pieces.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Śāstrodgrāha*: upholding [one's own] scriptures.

*The Lord establishes the siddhānta of bhakti: the acintya-bhedābheda of the Vedānta —*

সর্ব্বত্র স্থাপয় প্রভু বৈষ্ণবসিদ্ধান্তে ।

44 Everywhere the Lord established the Vaiṣṇava siddhānta, and no one could refute His conclusions.

*Those defeated by the Lord's irrefutable siddhānta accept the siddhānta of bhakti —*

হারি' হারি' প্রভুমতে করেন প্রবেশ । ei-mate 'vaiṣṇava' karila dakṣiṇa deśa

in this way Vaiṣṇava He made the southern land

45 Defeated again and again, they came over to the Lord's teaching, and in this way He made the South Vaiṣṇava.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The Lord's siddhānta, "by this doctrine": the Lord's doctrine, that is, the siddhānta of acintya-bhedābheda established by the Vedas, the Vedānta, and the Brahma-sūtra.

*The Buddhist ācārya, a pāṣaṇḍī, comes with his disciples —*

garva kari' āila saṅge śiṣya-gaṇa lañā pride showing they came with them disciples bringing 46 Hearing of His learning, all the unbelievers came; full of pride, they brought their disciples with them.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Pāṣaṇḍīs: this is the name for followers of doctrines that stand outside the scriptures—the Vedas, smṛti, the darśanas, the Purāṇas, the Āgamas, and so on.

His insistence in debate —

বৌদ্ধাচার্য্য মহা-পণ্ডিত নিজ নব মতে ।

bauddhācārya mahā-paṇḍita nija nava mate
a Buddhist ācārya great scholar in his own nine principles prabhura āgete udgrāha kari lāgilā balite of the Lord before insistence showing began to speak

47 A Buddhist ācārya, a great scholar of his own nine principles, began to argue for them insistently before the Lord.

Although he is not fit to be spoken with, the Lord shows mercy and refutes his arguments —

যদ্যপি অসম্ভাষ্য বৌদ্ধ অযুক্ত দেখিতে । তথাপি বলিলা প্রভু গর্ব্ব খণ্ডাইতে ॥ ৪৮ ॥

yadyapi asambhāṣya bauddha ayukta dekhite although not to be spoken with the Buddhists improper to look at tathāpi balilā prabhu garva khaṇḍāite still spoke the Lord the pride to break

48 Although the Buddhists are not to be spoken with, and it is improper even to look at them, the Lord spoke in order to break their pride.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Asambhāṣya: one not fit to be spoken with, because he opposes the Vedas and has turned away from bhakti. It is improper to see them: of one who has seen godless Buddhists and their like, scripture (the sātvata scripture) says, "Let him enter the water with his clothes on." That is, by the word of scripture it is improper to see atheistic Buddhists and their like.

*The Buddhist scriptures, which do not follow the path of śruti, the Lord refutes by logic alone —*

তর্ক প্রধান বৌদ্ধ-শাস্ত্র 'নব মতে' । তর্কেই খণ্ডিল প্রভু, না পারে স্থাপিতে ॥ ৪৯ ॥

tarka-pradhāna bauddha-śāstra 'nava mate'
on logic based Buddhist scriptures "nine principles" tarkei khaṇḍila prabhu, nā pāre sthāpite by logic itself refuted the Lord not they can establish 49 The Buddhist scriptures, with their "nine principles," rest on logic, so the Lord refuted them by logic alone, and they could not uphold them.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

The Buddhist doctrine has two paths, the hīnayāna and the mahāyāna. The starting point for following these paths is nine propositions: (1) the universe is without beginning, and therefore without an Īśvara; (2) the world is untrue; (3) [the truth is] the "I" (ahaṁ-tattva); (4) birth after birth and the other world are real; (5) only the Buddha is the means of attaining truth; (6) nirvāṇa is the supreme truth; (7) only Buddhist philosophy is [true] philosophy; (8) the Vedas were composed by human beings; (9) Buddhist life is the practice of true dharma—compassion and the like.

50 The Buddhist ācārya put forward all nine propositions, and the Lord broke them to pieces with firm reasoning and logic.

The Buddhist ācārya is defeated, and the people laugh —

51 All the scholar-philosophers were defeated. People laughed, and the Buddhists felt shame and fear.

Anubhāṣya.

All the philosophers and paṇḍitas: the pāṣaṇḍī ācāryas of the philosophical systems who were present.

*On hearing the Vaiṣṇava siddhānta, the Buddhist ācārya understands that the Lord belongs to a Vaiṣṇava sampradāya and plots against Him —*

of the Lord before they brought "mahā-prasāda" calling it

53 They filled a plate with impure food and brought it before the Lord, calling it "mahā-prasāda."

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Impure: unfit for a Vaiṣṇava to accept.

Anubhāṣya.
A non-Vaiṣṇava may announce a thousand times, with a thousand voices, that the food he offers is "mahā-prasāda." Outwardly there may be not the slightest flaw in the way he prepares and decorates the offering. But he has no service to Viṣṇu (viṣṇu-dāsya) and no spiritual vision; that is, he has turned away from Viṣṇu, and therefore Viṣṇu never accepts the food he offers. So a pure servant of the Vaiṣṇavas will regard it as "impure" (amedhya) and will never accept or eat it!

Seeing their guru's condition, the disciples take shelter at the Lord's feet —

58 "You are the Lord Himself. Forgive our offence. Bring our guru back to life — be merciful!"

When they surrender, the Lord gives them Kṛṣṇa's name —

59 The Lord said, "All of you say 'Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa, Hari!' Say the name of Kṛṣṇa loudly into your guru's ear.

*Simply by hearing Kṛṣṇa's name sung by Caitanya's lips, an unconscious Māyāvādī jīva gains consciousness, that is, becomes a Vaiṣṇava —*

The Buddhist ācārya praises the Lord, recognizing Him as Kṛṣṇa — of the guru into the ear say all “Kṛṣṇa” “Rāma” “Hari” consciousness regaining the ācārya says “Hari” “Hari”

61 All of them said “Kṛṣṇa! Rāma! Hari!” into their guru’s ear. Regaining consciousness, the ācārya said, “Hari! Hari!”

Anubhāṣya.

All the Buddhists. The Buddhists received from the Lord's holy lips initiation (dīkṣā) into Kṛṣṇa's name. After that they were no longer the Buddhists they had been, acting like pāṣaṇḍīs: they became “Vaiṣṇavas” and began to worship Viṣṇu, practicing the dharma inherent in the nature of the jīva. The guru delivers the disciple: he awakens consciousness in the unconscious disciple, inspires him to worship Viṣṇu, and engages him in that service. This is “dīkṣā,” or divine knowledge. Here, however, the former disciples of the unconscious Buddhist ācārya gained consciousness in Kṛṣṇa's name by the Lord's mercy, uttered Kṛṣṇa's name into the ear of their guru-bruva, and did the work of an ācārya. Outwardly, guru and disciples—the Buddhist ācārya and his disciples—exchanged places. In truth, however, the one who received Kṛṣṇa's mercy, gained consciousness, and utters Kṛṣṇa's name became the “guru” (the great one), and the unconscious person became the “laghu” (the small one), that is, his disciple. This is the teaching of the Lord, the guru of the whole world.

Anubhāṣya.
Here the places the Lord visited are described almost exactly.

Tirupati, "Tirupatur," is a famous holy place in the Chandragiri taluk of North Arcot. The hill is named after Veṅkaṭeśvara—Veṅkaṭagiri, or Veṅkaṭādri; on it, at 8 miles, stands the Viṣṇu Deity, the four-armed "Bālājī," or Veṅkaṭeśvara, together with His two potencies, “Śrī” and “Bhū.” The place is also called “Veṅkaṭa-kṣetra.” In all South India it is one of the finest and richest temples. In the month of Āśvina a very large fair is held here. On the M. S. M. line there is a railway station, “Tirupati.” “Lower Tirupati” lies in the valley of Veṅkaṭācala; several temples stand there. Here are the Deities of Govindarāja and Rāmacandra. “Tirumalaya” is probably the ancient name of “Upper Tirupati.”

66 Amazing all the people by His influence, the all-merciful Lord came to Pānā-nṛsiṁha.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Pānā-nṛsiṁha: pānā is a sugar drink, that is, the sherbet offered to Nṛsiṁha at this place.

Anubhāṣya.

Pānā-nṛsiṁha (Panakal Narasiṁha) is a famous temple in the Kistna district, 7 miles from the town of Bezwada, on "Maṅgalagiri"; one reaches it by climbing 600 steps. Tradition says that when sherbet is offered to this Nṛsiṁhadeva, He accepts no more than half of it. A former Mahārāja of Tanjore gave this temple a conch said to have been used by Kṛṣṇa. In the month of March a very large fair is held here.

68 Coming to Śiva-kāñcī, He had darśana of Śiva, and by His influence He made all the Śaivas Vaiṣṇavas.

Anubhāṣya.

Śiva-kāñcī, Conjeeveram, is known as "Southern Kāśī." Here there are countless Śiva-liṅgas; among them the temple of "Ekāmbara Kailāsanātha" is very ancient.

69 Coming to Viṣṇu-kāñcī, He saw Lakṣmī-Nārāyaṇa, bowed down and offered many prayers.

Anubhāṣya.
Viṣṇu-kāñcī lies 5 miles from Conjeeveram; here are the Viṣṇu Deity "Varadarāja" and "Ananta lake."

The Lord stays there, and the people become Vaiṣṇavas —

71 After seeing Trimalaya, He went to Trikālahastī. There He saw Mahādeva and bowed down to him.

Anubhāṣya.

Trimalaya is in Tanjore, or Tauṇḍīra-maṇḍala.

"Trikālahastī" lies 21 miles northeast of Tirupati, on the southern bank of the river Suvarṇamukhī. It is also called "Śrī Kālahastī," or in common speech "Kālahastī." It is famed for the temple of "Śiva as the Vāyu-liṅga" (North Arcot Manual).

Darśana* of Śiva at Pakṣī-tīrtha and of the Deity of Śveta-varāha at Vṛddhakola-tīrtha —*

to Vṛddhakola-tīrtha then He made going

72 At Pakṣī-tīrtha He had darśana of Śiva, and then He went to Vṛddhakola-tīrtha.

Anubhāṣya.

Pakṣī-tīrtha, "Tirukaḍikuṇḍam," lies 9 miles southeast of Chingleput: a Śiva temple on a range of hills 500 feet above the plain. The hill is called Vedagiri, or Vedācalam, and the Deity Vedagirīśvara. Every day two hawks come and receive food from the attending pūjārī. Tradition says this has gone on from time immemorial (Chingleput Manual).

Vṛddhakola is a temple of the Deity Śrī Varāha, carved from a single stone. It stands about a mile south of "Balipīṭham," in "Mahābalipuram," or the "Seven Pagodas." In this temple the serpent "Śeṣa" holds an umbrella over the Viṣṇu Deity in the form of Varāha.

Darśana* of Śambhu Pītāmbara —*

73 There He saw Śveta-varāha and bowed down to Him. Then Gaurahari went to the place of Śiva Pītāmbara.

Anubhāṣya.

Pītāmbara, "Chidambaram," lies 26 miles south of the town of "Cuddalore." The Deity's name is Śiva "Ākāśa-liṅga." This huge temple stands on a plot of 39 acres and is surrounded on all sides by a road 60 feet wide (South Arcot Manual).

Darśana* of Kātyāyanī in the form of Śiyālī-bhairavī —*

of the Kāverī to the bank came of Śacī the son

74 After seeing the goddess Śiyālī-bhairavī, the son of Śacī came to the bank of the Kāverī.

Anubhāṣya.

Śiyālī lies in the Tanjore district, 48 miles northeast of the town of Tanjore: it is the chief village of the taluk of the same name. Here there is a famous Śiva temple and a huge lake. The temple is dedicated to a Śaiva named "Tirujñān Sambandhar." Tradition says that when this devotee of Śiva came to the temple as a child, Bhairavī suckled him (Tanjore Gazetteer). (See the Anubhāṣya on verse 358 of this chapter.) From there the Lord came to the Trichinopoly district, to the Coleroon, that is, to the bank of the river Kāverī.

Kāverī: "kāverī ca mahā-puṇyā" ("and the most holy Kāverī") (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 11.5.40).

Darśana* of Śambhu on the bank of the Kāverī —*

mahādeva dekhi' tāṁre karilā vandana
Mahādeva seeing to him He made homage

75 At Go-samāja He saw Śiva, and then He came to Vedāvana. There He saw Mahādeva and paid him homage.

Anubhāṣya.
Go-samāja is a holy place of the Śaivas. Vedāvana lies in the southeastern corner of the Tiruturaipundi taluk of the Tanjore district, 5 miles north of Point Calimere. In the opinion of the local brāhmaṇas, as a holy place it ranks next after Rāmeśvara (Tanjore Gazetteer).

By the Lord's mercy the Śaivas become Vaiṣṇavas —

76 Seeing Śiva Amṛta-liṅga, He paid him homage. In all the temples of Śiva, the Śaivas became Vaiṣṇavas.

77 Coming to Devasthāna, He had darśana of Viṣṇu, and there He was constantly in discussion with the Śrī Vaiṣṇavas.

78 At Kumbhakarṇa-kapāla the beautiful Gaurāṅga saw the lake, and at Śiva-kṣetra He saw Śiva.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

At Kumbhakarṇa-kapāla: seeing the lake that had formed in Kumbhakarṇa's skull.

Anubhāṣya.

Kumbhakarṇa-kapāla: kapāla means skull. This is the present town of Kumbhakonam in the Tanjore district, 20 miles northeast of the town of Tanjore. Here there are 12 Śiva temples, 4 Viṣṇu temples, and one temple of Brahmā (Tanjore Gazetteer).

Śiva-kṣetra: in the town of Tanjore there is a lake called Śiva-gaṅgā. The great local Śiva temple of Bṛhatīśvara may also be understood by this name.

After seeing Viṣṇu at Pāpanāśana, the Lord goes to Śrīraṅgam —

পাপনাশনে বিষ্ণু কৈল দরশন । শ্রীরঙ্গক্ষেত্রে তবে করিলা গমন ॥ ৭৯ ॥

pāpa-nāśane viṣṇu kaila daraśana at Pāpanāśana of Viṣṇu He made sight to Śrī Raṅga-kṣetra then He made going

79 At Pāpanāśana He had darśana of Viṣṇu, and then He went to Śrī Raṅga-kṣetra.

Anubhāṣya.

Pāpanāśana lies 8 miles southwest of Kumbhakonam (Tanjore Gazetteer). In the Tinnevelly district, 29 miles west of the town of Palamcottah, there is a town called Pāpanāśana. It is here, by a temple, that the river Tāmraparṇī comes down from the hills onto the plain (Tinnevelly Manual).

Śrī Raṅga-kṣetra. Śrīraṅgam stands near Trichinopoly on the river Kāverī, or Coleroon, in the Tanjore district, 45 krośas[14] west of Kumbhakonam. The temple of Śrī Raṅganātha is larger than any other temple in India; it has seven enclosures. The ancient names of the seven streets of Śrīraṅgam are: (1) the road of Dharma, (2) the road of Rājamahendra, (3) the road of Kulaśekhara, (4) the road of Ālināḍan, (5) the road of Tiruvikrama, (6) the Tiruviḍi road of "Māḍamāḍi Gāisa," and (7) the road of Aḍaiyāvalandān. Before the Cola king Ādikulottuṅga, Rājamahendra ruled; before him, Dharmavarmā; and earlier still Śrīraṅgam was founded. Kulaśekhara and several others, as well as Ālavandāru, lived in the temple of Śrī Raṅga. Yāmunācārya, Śrī Rāmānuja, Sudarśanācārya, and others were the chief superintendents of the service of Śrī Raṅganātha. The incarnation of Lakṣmī "Godādevī," one of the twelve perfected divya-sūris, was married to Śrī Raṅganātha and entered the body of Bhagavān. Tirumaṅgai, the incarnation of the bow, used wealth gained by robbery to build the fourth enclosure, or wall, of Śrī Raṅganātha and other buildings.

It is said that Toṇḍaraḍippoḍi Ālvār was born in the year 289 of the Kali era. While engaged in bhakti-yajña, he fell to the lure of a courtesan. Seeing His servant's plight, Śrī Raṅganātha wanted to save him and sent His golden vessel to that woman's house by one of the temple servants. Finding no golden vessel in the temple, people searched long and found it in the Ālvār's house. Seeing Raṅganātha's mercy, the devotee was freed from his delusion. Even before the appearance of Tirumaṅgai, he had laid out a tulasī garden in the third enclosure of Raṅganātha.

Śrī Rāmānuja's disciple was Kureśa; his younger son, Śrī Rāmapillāi; his son, Vāgvijaya Bhaṭṭa; and his son, Vedavyāsa Bhaṭṭa, or Śrī Sudarśanācārya. When this great soul was old, the Muslims attacked the temple of Raṅganātha and killed twelve thousand Śrī Vaiṣṇavas. Śrī Raṅganāthadeva was taken to Tirupati. The governor of Giṅgi under the kingdom of Vijayanagara, the Śrī Vaiṣṇava brāhmaṇa "Kampanna Udeyar," or "Goppaṇārya," at the request of the Śrī Vaiṣṇavas brought Śrī Raṅganāthadeva from "Tirupati" to "Siṁhabrahma" and kept Him there for three years. Then, in Śaka 1293, he reinstalled Him in Śrī Raṅga-kṣetra. On the eastern wall of the enclosure of Śrī Raṅganātha's temple this verse composed by Śrīla Vedānta-deśika is carved:

"Goppaṇārya, the mirror of fame, brought Raṅganātha from Añjana hill, whose blue peaks delight the world with their luster, and worshiped Him for some time at Ceñji.[15] Then, having slain the Tuluṣkas with their raised bows, he installed Raṅganātha with Lakṣmī and Bhū in His own city and again performed the finest worship." "Goppaṇa, a god on earth, slew with his own strength the arrogant army of the Tuluṣkas. He brought Raṅgarāja, the Lord of the universe, from the slope of Vṛṣabha hill to his capital. Then, making the land of Śrī Raṅga like the Satya-yuga, he installed Him there with Lakṣmī and Mahī, and like the lotus-born [Brahmā] he offers Him worthy worship."

After bathing, the Lord sees Raṅganātha and dances and sings —

80 He bathed in the Kāverī and saw Raṅganātha. Offering prayers and obeisances, He felt His purpose fulfilled.

Anubhāṣya.

On the devotion to Bhagavān that comes from drinking the water of the Kāverī, see Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 11.5.40.

82 A Śrī Vaiṣṇava named Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa respectfully invited the Lord.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa, his brother Trimalla Bhaṭṭa, and Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī had formerly been ācāryas in the Śrī-sampradāya. Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa's son is none other than Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī.

Anubhāṣya.

Śrī Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa was a brāhmaṇa of the Śrī-sampradāya who had settled in Śrī Raṅga-kṣetra. Śrī Raṅga is in the Tamil country, and so names like "Veṅkaṭa" and "Tirumalaya" are not found among the people there in our time. This family had probably been living in Śrīraṅgam for a short time. Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa was a Rāmānujīya Vaiṣṇava of the "Baḍa-galai" branch. One of his brothers was the tridaṇḍi-svāmī of the Rāmānujīya ācāryas, Śrīpāda Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī.

Veṅkaṭa's son was Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī; see Ādi 10.105 and the Bhakti-ratnākara, first wave.

Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa serves the Lord and asks Him to spend Cāturmāsya in his house —

111 The Lord said, "Bhaṭṭa, your goddess Lakṣmī dwells on the chest of her husband; she is the crown jewel of chaste women.

Although sheltered by Nārāyaṇa, Lakṣmī is drawn by Kṛṣṇa's sweetness and longs for His company —

The Bhaṭṭa answers simply: in Kṛṣṇa's company Nārāyaṇa's wife cannot lose her chastity —

out of playful curiosity Lakṣmī desires Kṛṣṇa’s company

116 His touch does not violate her chastity. Lakṣmī desires Kṛṣṇa’s company out of playful curiosity.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Nārāyaṇa is Kṛṣṇa's form for pastimes (vilāsa-mūrti). So although He differs from Kṛṣṇa in having four arms rather than two, in His svarūpa He is not separate from Kṛṣṇa. Nārāyaṇa has grace like Kṛṣṇa's, but He does not have pastimes full of cleverness (vaidagdhya) and the like, as Kṛṣṇa does. Kṛṣṇa Himself, in His form for pastimes, is Nārāyaṇa, and so Nārāyaṇa's wife Lakṣmī does not lose her chastity by Śrī Kṛṣṇa's touch. It is natural, then, that Lakṣmī should playfully desire Kṛṣṇa's company.

By siddhānta there is no difference at all between the svarūpas of "Nārāyaṇa" and "Kṛṣṇa." Yet when śṛṅgāra-rasa is considered, the form of Śrī Kṛṣṇa excels by virtue of rasa. This is precisely how the tattva of rasa is arranged.

Lakṣmī saw that in Kṛṣṇa's company chastity is not violated, while the greater gain —the pastimes of the rāsa—can be had only in Kṛṣṇa's company; in Nārāyaṇa's company it cannot be had.

131 Whoever worships in the mood of the people of Vraja attains in Vraja the son of the king of Vraja in His pure form.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

The residents of Vraja know Him as “Nanda's son.” Any other relationship with Him—as with “Parameśvara,” the possessor of supreme majesty—they do not accept. One who worships the Supreme Truth in one of the four moods of the residents of Vraja—dāsya, sakhya, vātsalya, or madhura—finally attains Kṛṣṇa, the son of the king of Vraja, in His pure form in Vraja.

parihāsa-dvāre uṭhāya eteka vacana

140 To break this pride of his, the Lord spoke all these words in jest.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

The Śrutis tried to enter Śrī Kṛṣṇa's rāsa circle (rāsa-maṇḍala), but their desire was not fulfilled. Nor could they enter when they took up the mood of the gopīs only within their hearts. Then, taking up the mood of the gopīs both in body and in heart, they followed the gopīs and entered Śrī Kṛṣṇa's rāsa dance. Śrī Kṛṣṇa is a cowherd by birth, and only the gopīs are His beloveds. So neither in the form of a goddess full of majesty nor in the form of any other woman can "Kṛṣṇa's company" be had. The goddess Lakṣmī prayed for Kṛṣṇa's company in her own divine body, but she did not serve Him following the natural love (anurāga) of the gopīs. Therefore in a body other than a gopī's she could not obtain the pastimes of the rāsa. That is why Vyāsadeva wrote the verse "nāyaṁ sukhāpo bhagavān."

In Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa's mind there was a conceit: "Nārāyaṇa, who dwells in Paravyoma, is Himself Śrī Bhagavān; His worship is the highest of all grades of worship; therefore the worship of the Vaiṣṇavas of the Śrī-sampradāya is the highest of all." To break this empty pride, Mahāprabhu raised this question in jest.

*The Lord describes the distinctive pastimes of Kṛṣṇa and Nārāyaṇa and establishes that Kṛṣṇa is the svayaṁ-rūpa —*

Lakṣmī longs for Kṛṣṇa's sweetness, but the gopīs do not want the majesty of four-armed Nārāyaṇa —

147 Kṛṣṇa, Svayam Bhagavān, captivates the mind of Lakṣmī, but Nārāyaṇa cannot captivate the minds of the gopīs.

The gopīs disregard even Kṛṣṇa's own four-armed form —

148 What to speak of Nārāyaṇa? Śrī Kṛṣṇa Himself becomes Nārāyaṇa to make the gopīs laugh.

149 He shows a four-armed form before the gopīs, but the gopīs feel no loving attachment for that “Kṛṣṇa.”

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Śrī Nārāyaṇa has sixty qualities. Beyond these sixty Śrī Kṛṣṇa has four more unique qualities that Śrī Nārāyaṇa does not have: (1) He is distinguished by an ocean of pastimes more wonderful than all others; (2) He is surrounded by dear associates adorned with incomparable sweet prema; (3) He is absorbed in the song of His flute, which attracts the three worlds; (4) His beauty, which astonishes all moving and nonmoving beings, has no equal and no superior. Śrī Kṛṣṇa possesses these four unique qualities, and so even Lakṣmī, the embodiment of majesty, constantly thirsts for Him. The verse you recited, "siddhāntatas tv abhede 'pi," establishes that Kṛṣṇa alone is Bhagavān Himself. Only Kṛṣṇa, endowed with the qualities of Bhagavān Himself, steals Lakṣmī's heart. Śrī Nārāyaṇa lacks the four qualities that can steal the hearts of the gopīs, so He cannot steal their hearts. What to speak of Nārāyaṇa: even when Śrī Kṛṣṇa in jest manifested Himself in the form of Nārāyaṇa Himself, the gopīs felt no love (anurāga) for Him.

Here one point must be considered. Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī's Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu was composed many days after this (after the Lord's meeting with Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa). How, then, could Śrī Veṅkaṭa Bhaṭṭa recite a verse from that book as evidence? We conclude as follows. The verses that the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu and other books cite as having been in use before those books were written were current even among very ancient devotees of Kṛṣṇa. Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī used precisely those in his books. And since Śrī Rūpa's books were composed before Kavirāja Gosvāmī wrote, (Kavirāja Gosvāmī in his book) cited all these verses as quotations from those books of Śrī Rūpa. In many places Kavirāja Gosvāmī, relying only on their meaning, brought verses of the earlier Gosvāmīs into conversations.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Setting aside His joking words, Mahāprabhu finally said, "Bhaṭṭa, do not be sad." As there is no difference between "Kṛṣṇa" and "Nārāyaṇa," so there is no difference between the gopīs and Lakṣmī: Rādhikā, who contains all the Lakṣmīs, manifests many different forms in a single being. Through the gopīs Lakṣmī tastes Kṛṣṇa's company. That is, the svarūpa-śakti in the form of sweetness (mādhurya) tastes Kṛṣṇa's company in the bodies of the gopīs, and in the body of majesty (aiśvarya), as Lakṣmī, tastes Nārāyaṇa's company. In the tattva of Īśvara there is no difference. One should understand that because the moods of the devotees differ, the one spiritual form differs only in the forms of meditation—in its shapes and appearances.

south went the Lord Śrī Raṅga seeing 164 When the Cāturmāsya was over, the Lord took the Bhaṭṭa's leave, saw Śrī Raṅga and went on to the south.

The Lord consoles the Bhaṭṭa, who has followed Him —

সঙ্গেতে চলিলা ভট্ট, না যায় ভবনে ।

tāṁre vidāya dilā prabhu aneka yatane

165 The Bhaṭṭa went along with Him and would not go home; only with great effort did the Lord send him back.

166 In separation from the Lord, the Bhaṭṭa fell unconscious. Such are the playful pastimes of Śacī's son.

167 Gaurahari went on and came to Ṛṣabha hill. There He saw Nārāyaṇa and offered obeisances and prayers.

Anubhāṣya.

Ṛṣabha hill is the "Āna-gaḍamalaya-parvata" at the edge of the Madura district in South Karnāṭa, 12 miles north of Madura. The place in the grove of Kuṭakācala where Ṛṣabhadeva was burned in a forest fire is now known as "Palni Hill."

168 Paramānanda Purī was staying there for the four months. Hearing this, Mahāprabhu went to Purī Gosāñi.

169 The Lord bowed at the feet of Purī Gosāñi, and Purī Gosāñi lovingly embraced Him.

170 For three days the two of them stayed together in that brāhmaṇa's house, rejoicing in loving talks about Kṛṣṇa.

Anubhāṣya.
In the house of that brāhmaṇa: which brāhmaṇa is meant here is hard to understand.

175 Paramānanda Purī then set out for Nīlācala, and Mahāprabhu went on and came to Śrī Śaila.

Anubhāṣya.

Śrī Śaila: which Śrī Śaila is meant here cannot be determined. It is not the temple of Mallikārjuna. Perhaps it is not the Śrī Śaila in the Dharwar district either, south of Belgaum, where the beginningless liṅga "Mallikārjuna" (Madhya 9.15) resides: "On Śrī Parvata the effulgent Mahādeva lived in supreme joy with Devī, and Brahmā too with the gods" (Mahābhārata, Vana-parva, chapter 58).[21]

176 Śiva and Durgā lived there in the guise of a brāhmaṇa couple. Seeing Mahāprabhu, both were overjoyed.

Under the pretext of a meal the Lord accepts service in the house of His servant and maidservant —

178 After holding spiritual discussions with him, Mahāprabhu took his leave and came to Kāmakoṣṭhī-purī.

tāṁhā dekhā haila eka brāhmaṇa-sahite
there a meeting took place with a brāhmaṇa

179 From Kāmakoṣṭhī He came to Southern Mathurā, and there He met a brāhmaṇa.

Anubhāṣya.

Southern Mathurā is the present "Madura," on the bank of the river Vagai; it is known as a "Śiva-kṣetra." The place is full of hills and forests. Here are "Rāmeśvara," "Sundareśvara," and the goddess "Mīnākṣī." The temple of the goddess Mīnākṣī is huge and especially worth seeing. For a long time the city was under the rule of the kings of the Pāṇḍya dynasty. During the Muslim invasions the temple of "Sundara-liṅga" was largely destroyed. In A.D. 1372 "Kampanna Udeyar" took the throne of Madura. Long ago King Kulaśekhara built this city and settled brāhmaṇas in it. "Ananta-guṇa Pāṇḍya" was the eleventh descendant of Kulaśekhara.

There the Lord takes His meal in the house of a brāhmaṇa devoted to Rāma —

180 That brāhmaṇa invited Mahāprabhu. He was a devotee of Rāma, a renounced great soul.

*After bathing, the Lord comes to honor prasāda, but the brāhmaṇa has not cooked —*

in the Kṛtamālā bath taking He came to his house bhikṣā ki dibena vipra, — pāka nāhi kare meal what will give the brāhmaṇa cooking not he does 181 After bathing in the Kṛtamālā, the Lord came to his house. But what meal could the brāhmaṇa serve? He had not cooked.

Anubhāṣya.

Kṛtamālā is one of the streams of the basin of the present river "Vaigai," or "Vagai." Three streams—the "Suruli," the "Varāha-nadī," and the "Battilagundu"—flow into the river Vaigai. (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 11.5.39): "where [flow] the river Tāmraparṇī, the Kṛtamālā, and the Payasvinī."

The food is not cooked, and the brāhmaṇa fasts —

মহাপ্রভু কহে তাঁরে, — শুন মহাশয় । মধ্যাহ্ন হৈল, কেনে পাক নাহি হয় ॥ ১৮২ ॥

mahāprabhu kahe tāṅre, — śuna mahāśaya Mahāprabhu says to him listen good sir madhyāhna haila, kene pāka nāhi haya midday has come why cooking there is not

182 Mahāprabhu said to him, “Listen, good sir: it is already midday. Why has nothing been cooked?”

The brāhmaṇa's worship in the mind —

বিপ্র কহে, — প্রভু, মোর অরণ্যে বসতি । পাকের সামগ্রী বনে না মিলে সম্প্রতি ॥ ১৮৩ ॥

vipra kahe, — prabhu, mora araṇye vasati
the brāhmaṇa said O Lord my in the forest dwelling pākera sāmagrī vane nā mile samprati for cooking provisions in the forest not are found at present

183 The brāhmaṇa said, “O Lord, I live in the forest, and at present the things needed for cooking are not to be had here.

বন্য শাক-ফল-মূল আনিবে লক্ষ্মণ ।

then Sītā will do what is needed for cooking

184 Lakṣmaṇa will bring wild greens, fruits and roots, and then Sītā will do the cooking.”

Hearing this, the Lord is pleased, and the brāhmaṇa cooks —

তাঁর উপাসনা শুনি’ প্রভু তুষ্ট হৈলা ।

185 The Lord was pleased to hear of his way of worship, and the brāhmaṇa cooked in great haste.

In the third watch of the day the Lord eats, but the brāhmaṇa fasts —

প্রভু ভিক্ষা কৈল দিনের তৃতীয়প্রহরে ।

prabhu bhikṣā kaila dinera tṛtīya-prahare the Lord His meal took of the day in the third watch nirviṇṇa sei vipra upavāsa kare dejected that brāhmaṇa a fast keeps

186 The Lord took His meal in the third prahara of the day, after noon, but the brāhmaṇa, dejected, went on fasting.

The Lord asks the reason for the fast —

প্রভু কহে, — বিপ্র কাঁহে কর উপবাস । কেনে এত দুঃখ, কেনে করহ হুতাশ ॥ ১৮৭ ॥

prabhu kahe, — vipra kāṁhe kara upavāsa
the Lord said brāhmaṇa why do you keep a fast kene eta duḥkha, kene karaha hutāśa
why so much sorrow why do you give way to despair

187 The Lord said, "Brāhmaṇa, why are you fasting? Why such sorrow, why such despair?"

The brāhmaṇa grieves, thinking how Rāvaṇa kidnapped Sītādevī, and resolves to end his life —

বিপ্র কহে, — মোর জীবনে নাহি প্রয়োজন ।
অগ্নি-জলে প্রবেশিয়া ছাড়িব জীবন ॥ ১৮৮ ॥

188 The brāhmaṇa said, "I have no more use for my life. I shall enter fire or water and give it up.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Into fire or water: into fire, or into water.

192 Sītā, the beloved of the Lord, is a form of spirit and bliss; material senses have no power even to see her.

Rāvaṇa could in no way see or touch Sītā —

স্পর্শিবার কার্য্য আছুক্, না পায় দর্শন । সীতার আকৃতি-মায়া হরিল রাবণ ॥ ১৯৩ ॥

sparśibāra kārya āchuk, nā pāya darśana of touching the matter let it be not they obtain sight sītāra ākṛti-māyā harila rāvaṇa of Sītā of the form an illusory likeness carried off Rāvaṇa

193 Touching her is out of the question — they cannot even see her. What Rāvaṇa carried off was only an illusory likeness of Sītā.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Sītā is Herself the embodiment of spirit and bliss. Rāvaṇa kidnapped the māyā-Sītā, the shadow of Her spiritual form.

Rāvaṇa kidnapped Sītā's reflection, or shadow —

রাবণ আসিতেই সীতা অন্তর্দ্ধান কৈল ।
রাবণের আগে মায়া-সীতা পাঠাইল ॥ ১৯৪ ॥

194 The moment Rāvaṇa came, Sītā disappeared and sent a māyā-Sītā before him.

The reality of Vaikuṇṭha cannot be measured by matter —

অপ্রাকৃত বস্তু নহে প্রাকৃত-গোচর । বেদ-পুরাণেতে এই কহে নিরন্তর ॥ ১৯৫ ॥

aprākṛta vastu nahe prākṛta-gocara transcendental reality is not within the range of the material veda-purāṇete ei kahe nirantara
in the Vedas and Purāṇas this is said constantly

195 A transcendental reality is never within the range of the material: the Vedas and Purāṇas declare this again and again.

Anubhāṣya.

(Kaṭha Upaniṣad, second chapter, third vallī): “Beyond the senses is the mind, beyond the mind is sattva, beyond sattva is the great self, beyond the Mahat is the unmanifest. Beyond the unmanifest is the Puruṣa, all-pervading and without marks; knowing Him, a living being is freed and attains immortality. His form does not stand within sight; no one sees Him with the eyes. He is revealed to the heart, the intelligence, and the mind; those who know this become immortal.  He cannot be reached by speech, by mind, or by sight.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam

10.84.13): “One who takes as his self a corpse—a body of three elements—who takes his wife and others as his own, earthen images as worshipable, and water as a holy place, but never sees these in persons who know the truth, is indeed like a cow or an ass.”

The Lord consoles him —

বিশ্বাস করহ তুমি আমার বচনে । পুনরপি কু-ভাবনা না করিহ মনে ॥ ১৯৬ ॥

viśvāsa karaha tumi āmāra vacane faith have you in My words punarapi ku-bhāvanā nā kariha mane again wrong thoughts not do keep in your mind

196 Have faith in My words, and never again let such wrong thoughts enter your mind.”

The brāhmaṇa trusts the Lord's words and eats —

প্রভুর বচনে বিপ্রের হইল বিশ্বাস । ভোজন করিল, হৈল জীবনের আশ ॥ ১৯৭ ॥

prabhura vacane viprera haila viśvāsa
the Lord’s in the words of the brāhmaṇa arose faith bhojana karila, haila jīvanera āśa
a meal he ate arose for life hope

197 The brāhmaṇa came to believe the Lord’s words. He ate, and his hope of life returned.

Anubhāṣya.
Durvaśana: "Darbhaśayana," or the temple of Śrī Rāmacandra, 7 miles east of Ramnad, on the seashore.

Darśana* of Bhṛgurāma on Mahendra hill —*

199 In Durvaśana He had darśana of Raghunātha, and on the Mahendra hill He offered homage to Paraśurāma.

Anubhāṣya.
Mahendra-śaila is a hill near "Tinnevelly"; at its edge stands the town of "Trichinaguḍi," and to its west lies the kingdom of Travancore. Mahendra-śaila is mentioned in the Rāmāyaṇa.

*Bathing at Dhanuṣkoṭi-tīrtha, darśana of Rāmeśvara, and rest —*

Rāmeśvara seeing there He took rest

200 Coming to Setubandha, He bathed at Dhanus-tīrtha; then He saw Rāmeśvara and rested there.

Anubhāṣya.

Setubandha, Dhanus-tīrtha, and Rāmeśvara. In the sea between "Maṇḍapam" and the island of "Pāmbam" there is a path, partly sandy and partly under water. Pāmbam island is 5½ krośas long and 3 krośas wide. Four miles north of Pāmbam-bandar is the temple of "Rāmeśvara": "Starting from Devī-pattana, let them go to Setubandha." There are 24 tīrthas here; one of them is "Dhanuṣkoṭi" tīrtha. It lies 12 miles southeast of Rāmeśvara, near "Ramnad," the terminal station of the S. I. R. line. At Vibhīṣaṇa's request, before returning to Ayodhyā, Śrī Rāmacandra (according to another view, Lakṣmaṇa) broke the bridge with the tip of His bow. One who sees this Dhanus-tīrtha is not born again, and bathing at Dhanus-tīrtha brings a greater result than the agniṣṭoma and other sacrifices. In Setubandha, on Pāmbam island, is the Deity of Śiva as Rāmeśvara—that is, Śiva, the incarnation of a devotee, "whose Īśvara is Rāma."

Anubhāṣya.

Kūrma Purāṇa. The present-day Kūrma Purāṇa contains only two parts, the Pūrva-khaṇḍa and the Uttara-khaṇḍa. In fact the Kūrma Purāṇa does not have six thousand verses: it had seventeen thousand. "That auspicious [Purāṇa] of seventeen thousand [verses] consists of four saṁhitās; its seventeen thousand [verses] are connected with the Lakṣmī-kalpa." (According to the Bhāgavata.) It is the fifteenth of the eighteen mahā-purāṇas.

207 Then the māyā-Sītā vanished in the fire, and Agni brought the real Sītā and gave her back in Rāma's presence.[7]

The Lord rejoices to hear the true conclusion and takes leaves from the Purāṇa manuscript —

212 "At the time of the ordeal the shadow Sītā entered the fire, and Agni brought Sītā and delivered her before Rāma." (Kūrma Purāṇa)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
At Sītā's request Agni created a "shadow Sītā" (chāyā-Sītā). Ten-headed Rāvaṇa carried off this shadow Sītā, while the original Sītā remained in "the abode of Agni" (vahni-pura). When Rāmacandra held the ordeal, the shadow Sītā entered the fire, and Agnideva, the god of fire, brought the original Sītā and presented her to Rāmacandra.

Anubhāṣya.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Mahāprabhu had new leaves written into the book of the Kūrma Purāṇa and brought the old leaves so that Rāmadāsa would believe. When the brāhmaṇa received these leaves, his heart rejoiced.

The brāhmaṇa sees the Lord as "Raghunātha" —

A night in the brāhmaṇa's house and bathing in the Tāmraparṇī —

in the Pāṇḍya country to the Tāmraparṇī went Gaurahari

218 Gaurahari stayed there that night, showing him mercy, and then went to the Tāmraparṇī in the Pāṇḍya country.

Anubhāṣya.

Pāṇḍya-deśa[22] is the region of the Dākṣiṇātya (the South) between the kingdoms of Kerala and Cola. Here many kings bearing the title "Pāṇḍya" ruled in Madura and Rāmeśvara. The Rāmāyaṇa says: "You will cross the great river Tāmraparṇī, where crocodiles dwell, whose islands and waters are hidden by wondrous sandal forests. Going there, O monkeys, you will see the strong gate of the Pāṇḍyas."[23]

Tāmraparṇī is the river on whose left bank Tinnevelly stands.[24] It is called "Porunai." It rises in the Western Ghats and falls into the Bay of Bengal. "Where the rivers Tāmraparṇī, Kṛtamālā, Payasvinī …" (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 11.5.39)

Anubhāṣya.

Naya Tripati is Ālvār Tirunagarī. This town lies 17 miles southeast of Tinnevelly. Around it stand nine temples of Śrīpati, that is, of Viṣṇu. At festivals all nine Deities gather in this town.

220 At the holy place of Ciyaḍatalā He saw Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, and coming to Tilakāñcī, He had darśana of Śiva.

Anubhāṣya.

Ciyaḍatalā, according to some, is "Cheratalā" near Nagercoil; it is a temple of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa.

Tilakāñcī is a temple of Śiva. Probably Tenkasi, 30 miles northeast of the town of Tinnevelly, is meant.

221 At Gajendra-mokṣaṇa-tīrtha He saw the Deity of Viṣṇu, and coming to Pānāgaḍi-tīrtha, He saw the Lord of Sītā.

Anubhāṣya.

Gajendra-mokṣaṇa. Some mistakenly give this name to "Sthāṇu-liṅga," or "Devendra-mokṣaṇa-Śiva," two miles south of Nagercoil. In truth this is a Deity of Śrī Viṣṇu.

Pānāgaḍi is "Pānāgaḍi," 30 miles south of Tinnevelly, slightly to the southwest, on the way to Trivandrum. Formerly a Deity of Śrī Rāma was here; later the Śaivas began worshiping Him as "Rāmeśvara," or "Rāmaliṅga Śiva," and do so to this day.

222 Coming to Cāmtāpura, He saw Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa; coming to Śrī Vaikuṇṭha, He had darśana of Viṣṇu.

Anubhāṣya.

Cāmtāpura is probably "Chengannur" in the kingdom of Travancore; a temple of Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa stands here.

Śrī Vaikuṇṭha is "Śrīvaikuṇṭham." It lies on the left bank of the river Tāmraparṇī, 4 miles north of Ālvār Tirunagarī and 16 miles southeast of Tinnevelly.

223 On the Malaya hill He offered homage to Agastya, and there He had darśana of Kanyākumārī.

Anubhāṣya.

Malaya Mountain is the range in the Dākṣiṇātya that stretches from Kerala to Cape Kumārikā. There are four views about Agastya. First: in the Tanjore district, at Point Calimere near Vedāraṇyam, in the village of Agastyampalli, there is a temple of the sage Agastya. Second: in the Madura district, on the summit of the Śivagiri hill, there is a temple of Subrahmaṇya (Skanda) built by Agastya. Third: some say the Pothiya mountain near Cape Kumārikā is Agastya's abode. Fourth: the peak shaped like a banana flower, on both sides of the river Tāmraparṇī, is called "Agastya-malaya."

Kanyākumārī is Cape Kumārikā.

224 Having seen Śrī Rāma at Āmlitalā, Gaurahari came to the Mallāra country, where the Bhaṭṭathāris live.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Bhaṭṭathāris: in some regions the common speech calls them "Bhāṭwārīs." They have neither house nor home. Wherever they happen to stay, they live in śirkis, that is, in simple tents. Outwardly they wear the dress of sannyāsīs, but their trade is theft and deceit. By deceit they gather many women and keep them in their śirkis; then they lure other people by showing them these women, and so swell their band. What the camps of the Bedes (nomads) are in Bengal, the śirkis of the Bhāṭwārīs are in western and southern India.

Anubhāṣya.

Mallāra-deśa is the land of Malabar. To its north lies South Kanara, to the east Coorg and Mysore, to the south Cochin, and to the west the Arabian Sea.

*In the land of Malabar: darśana of Tamāla-kārttika and of Rāma at Vetāpani, and a night's stay —*

Raghunātha seeing there He spent the night

225 After seeing Tamāla-kārttika He came to Vetāpani; there He saw Raghunātha and spent the night.

Anubhāṣya.
Tamāla-kārttika is a temple of Subrahmaṇya, or Kārttikeyadeva, 44 miles south of Tinnevelly and 2 miles south of the "Aramvallī" pass, within the Tovala tāluk.

Vetāpani is "Bhūtapaṇḍi," in the kingdom of Travancore, north of Nagercoil, within the Tovala tāluk. Formerly a Deity of Rāmacandra was in this temple. Later, it seems, He came to be worshiped under the name Rāmeśvara, or the Śiva-liṅga Bhūtanātha.

The Lord demands that the Bhaṭṭathāris give back Kṛṣṇadāsa —

Payasvinī is the "Tiruvattar" river in the kingdom of Travancore. "Where the rivers Tāmraparṇī, Kṛtamālā, Payasvinī …" (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 11.5.39)

Anubhāṣya.

The Śṛṅgeri Maṭha is in the Shimoga district of Mysore, on the left bank of the river Tuṅgabhadrā, 7 miles south of Hariharapura. Its true name is (Ṛṣya)śṛṅga-giri, or Śṛṅgavera-purī. Here stands the chief maṭha of Śaṅkarācārya in the South. Through his four disciples Śrī Śaṅkarācārya founded these maṭhas: in the north of India, at Badrikā, the Jyotir Maṭha; at Puruṣottama, the Bhogavardhana, or Govardhana, Maṭha; at Dvārakā, the Śāradā Maṭha; and in the South, the Śṛṅgeri

Maṭha. In the Śṛṅgeri Maṭha one takes eka-daṇḍa sannyāsa of three kinds: “Sarasvatī,” “Bhāratī,” and “Purī.” “The fourth, the southern āmnāya, is the maṭha at Śṛṅgerī. Its sampradāya is called Bhūrivāra, and its gotra Bhūrbhuvaḥ. Its three famous titles are Sarasvatī, Bhāratī, and Purī. Its deity is Varāha, and its holy place is said to be Rāmeśvara. Its tīrtha is called the Tuṅgabhadrā, and its śakti, it is said, is Kāmākṣikā. Its brahmacārīs are called ‘Caitanya’; its preceptor is Hastāmalaka. The lands of the southern quarter are under it: Āndhra, Drāviḍa, Karṇāṭa, Kerala, and others. One who is always devoted to the knowledge of sound (svara), speaks of svara, is a lord of poets, and destroys the worthlessness of the ocean of saṁsāra is a Sarasvatī. One who is full with the weight of knowledge, has cast off every other burden, and knows no burden of sorrow is called a Bhāratī. One who is full with the truth of knowledge, is fixed in the complete truth, and is always devoted to the Supreme Brahman is called by the name Purī.” (Maṭhāmnāya) That is: name of the maṭha, Śṛṅgerī; direction, south; lands, Āndhra, Drāviḍa, Karṇāṭa, Kerala, and others; sampradāya, Bhūrivāra; gotra, Bhūrbhuvaḥ; holy place, Rāmeśvara; mahā-vākya, or bodha, “ahaṁ brahmāsmi”; deity, Varāha; śakti, Kāmākṣī; ācārya, Hastāmalaka; titles of sannyāsa, “Sarasvatī,” “Bhāratī,” and “Purī”; brahmacārī, “Caitanya”; tīrtha, the Tuṅgabhadrā; Veda, the Yajur.

The succession of the gurus of the Śṛṅgeri Maṭha, with the years in which they took sannyāsa, is as follows: (1) Śaṅkarācārya, Śaka 22; (2) Sureśvarācārya, 30; (3) Bodhanācārya, 680; (4) Jñānadhanācārya, 768; (5) Jñānottama Śivācārya, 827; (6) Jñānagiri Ācārya, 871; (7) Siṁhagiri Ācārya, 958; (8) Īśvaratīrtha, 1019; (9) Nārasiṁha Tīrtha, 1067; (10) Vidyātīrtha Vidyāśaṅkara, 1150; (11) Bhāratīkṛṣṇa Tīrtha, 1250; (12) Vidyāraṇya Bhāratī, 1253; (13) Candraśekhara Bhāratī, 1290; (14) Narasiṁha Bhāratī, 1309; (15) Puruṣottama Bhāratī, 1328; (16) Śaṅkarānanda, 1350; (17) Candraśekhara Bhāratī, 1371; (18) Narasiṁha Bhāratī, 1386; (19) Puruṣottama Bhāratī, 1394; (20) Rāmacandra Bhāratī, 1430; (21) Narasiṁha Bhāratī, 1479; (22) Narasiṁha Bhāratī, 1485; (23) Dhanamaḍi Narasiṁha Bhāratī, 1498; (24) Abhinava Narasiṁha Bhāratī, 1521; (25) Saccidānanda Bhāratī, 1544; (26) Narasiṁha Bhāratī, 1585; (27) Saccidānanda Bhāratī, 1627; (28) Abhinava Saccidānanda Bhāratī, 1663; (29) Nṛsiṁha Bhāratī, 1689; (30) Saccidānanda Bhāratī, 1692; (31) Abhinava Saccidānanda Bhāratī, 1730; (32) Narasiṁha Bhāratī, Śaka 1739. For their samādhis, see the Vaiṣṇava-mañjuṣā-samāhṛti (issue 4). (33) Saccidānanda Śivābhinava Vidyā Narasiṁha Bhāratī, Śaka 1788.

Śaṅkarācārya was born in the Dākṣiṇātya, in the land of Kerala, in the village of Kālāḍi, in Śaka 608, on the third day of the bright fortnight of Vaiśākha. His father's name was Śivaguru. He lost his father in early childhood. Before he had even passed his eighth year he finished studying the śāstras, and on the bank of the Narmadā he took sannyāsa from Govinda. After taking sannyāsa he stayed some days with Govinda, and then with his permission went to Vārāṇasī. From there he went to Badarikāśrama, and there, at the age of twelve, he composed a commentary (bhāṣya) on the Brahma-sūtra. Later he also wrote commentaries on the ten Upaniṣads, the Gītā, the Sanatsujātīya, the Nṛsiṁha-tāpanī, and other books.

Among Śaṅkarācārya's disciples four were chief: Padmapāda, Sureśvara, Hastāmalaka, and Troṭaka. From Vārāṇasī Śaṅkarācārya went to Prayāga and met Kumārila Bhaṭṭa. Kumārila was at the point of death, so he did not debate with him himself but sent him to his chief disciple, Maṇḍana, in the city of Māhiṣmatī. There Śaṅkara defeated Maṇḍana in debate. Maṇḍana's wife, Sarasvatī, or Ubhaya-bhāratī, was the arbiter of their debate. It is said that she expressed the wish to debate with Śaṅkara on the kāma-śāstra. Śaṅkara, however, from boyhood was a brahmacārī and therefore knew nothing of the kāma-śāstra. He asked Ubhaya-bhāratī for a month's time, by yogic power entered the body of a king who had just died, studied the subject in question, and, having gained experience, asked Ubhaya-bhāratī for the debate. But she did not debate any further. At Śaṅkara's request she gave the boon that she would remain unmoving in his Śṛṅgeri Maṭha, and she took leave of this world. Maṇḍana took sannyāsa from Śaṅkarācārya and became known by the name Sureśvara. Step by step Śaṅkarācārya traveled through almost all of India, defeated in debate people of many doctrines, and brought them over to his own. He left his body at the age of thirty-three.

Matsya-tīrtha is probably the present town of “Mahé” on the seacoast of the Malabar district. Some say that Matsya-tīrtha is a wondrous whirlpool of the Macheru river near the village of Matam, 6 miles north of “Pāderu” in the Padwa tāluk of Vizagapatam (Vizagapatam Gazetteer). But that, it seems, is not what is meant here.

245 He came to the seat of Madhvācārya, where the Tattvavādīs live, and seeing "Kṛṣṇa" in Uḍupī, He became mad with love.

Anubhāṣya.

Śrī Madhvācārya. In the Dākṣiṇātya, west of the Sahyādri, lies the Kanara district. The chief town of the South Kanara district is "Mangalore," and to its north is "Uḍupī" (Udipi). In the village of Uḍupī, at Pājakā-kṣetra, in a family of Śivallī brāhmaṇas, Śrī Madhvācārya was born in Śaka 1040 (by another view, in Śaka 1160). His father was Madhyageha Bhaṭṭa and his mother Vedavidyā. As a child Madhvācārya was known by the name Vāsudeva. Several wondrous stories are told about him. As a child he came back alone and unharmed from Uḍupī to Pājakā-kṣetra. When his mother was away, he ate, before his elder sister's eyes, a whole tub of husks meant for the cows, to stop himself from crying. He hung on to the tail of a fierce bull. When a creditor sat at their door demanding a debt, he turned tamarind seeds into money and with it paid off his father's debt. In his boyhood (paugaṇḍa) Madhva vanished during a festival in the village of Neḍiūru, and later he was found again at the temple of Ananteśvara in Uḍupī. In the village of Neyampalli he pointed out the error of a brāhmaṇa named Śiva. Other incidents are also described. In his fifth year he received the upanayana initiation. An asura named "Maṇimān," mentioned in the Mahābhārata, lived there in the form of a snake. Right after his upanayana "Vāsudeva" killed that snake with his big toe. When his mother grew anxious, he reached her in a single leap. At this time he showed special skill in his studies. Entirely against his father's wishes he took sannyāsa at the age of twelve from "Acyutaprekṣa" and received the name "Pūrṇaprajña Tīrtha." After traveling through many lands of the South, he held many debates with Vidyāśaṅkara, the head of the Śṛṅgeri Maṭha. Vidyāśaṅkara's lofty position bowed before Madhva. Together with an ascetic named "Satyatīrtha," Śrī Madhva went to Badrikā. There he had Śrī Vyāsa hear his Gītā-bhāṣya and received his approval. In a short time he learned many subjects from Vyāsa. Already on the way back from Badrikā to the Ānanda Maṭha Śrī Madhva finished his commentary on the sūtras (sūtra-bhāṣya); Satyatīrtha wrote it down. From Badri Śrī Madhva went to Ganjam, in the Godāvarī region. There he met two paṇḍitas, “Śobhana Bhaṭṭa” and “Svāmī Śāstrī.” It is they who, in Śrī Madhva's succession, received the names “Padmanābha Tīrtha” and “Narahari Tīrtha.” Back in Uḍupī, one day, on his way to bathe in the sea, he composed a hymn in five chapters. Absorbed in thoughts of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, he sat on the sand and saw that a boat full of goods gathered for Dvārakā was in distress at sea. Seeing the boat sinking into the sand, he showed a mudrā to set it afloat, and the boat was able to come to shore. The boatmen wished to give him something, and he agreed to take some gopī-candana that was in the boat. He took a large lump of gopī-candana. On the way, at a place called “Baḍabandeśvara,” the lump broke, and inside was found a beautiful “Deity of the child Kṛṣṇa.” In one hand the Deity holds a churning rod for curd, in the other the churning rope. Having obtained Kṛṣṇa, he composed that very day the remaining seven chapters of his Dvādaśa-stotra. Thirty strong men could not lift this Deity of Kṛṣṇa. Then Śrī Madhva — the avatāra of the all-pervading Vāyu who dwells in Paravyoma, of Hanumān, or of Bhīmasena — himself lifted Mādhava and carried Him to his own maṭha in Uḍupī. His eight chief sannyāsī disciples were the heads of the eight maṭhas of Uḍupī. Just as the eight gopīs of Vṛndāvana serve Kṛṣṇa, so Śrī Madhvācārya himself served this child Kṛṣṇa, and after him the Śrī Madhvācāryas, the heads of the Uttararāḍhī Maṭha, have had Him served in turn through the ascetics who head the eight maṭhas. So it continues to this day.

Śrī Madhva traveled to Badrikā a second time. As he passed through the kingdom of Mahārāṣṭra, its king, named “Mahādeva,” was having his subjects dig a pond for the public good. By the king's order Śrī Madhva and his disciples too were compelled to dig earth. After a while he met the king, set the king himself to that work, and suddenly went on his way. In the region of the Gaṅgā there was a Hindu kingdom on one bank and a Muslim kingdom on the other. Their hostility had grown so fierce that no boat could be found to cross, and the enemy army on the far bank of the broad river kept blocking the way. Paying no heed to all these dangers, Śrī Madhva and all his companions joined hands and swam across the river. As soon as they climbed onto the bank, soldiers seized them. Because he had disobeyed the royal order, he was brought before the king himself. When he explained his situation, the Muslim king wished to give him half his kingdom, but Śrī Madhva did not accept it. On the road robbers attacked them, and with the strength of Bhīma he destroyed them. And when a tiger attacked “Satyatīrtha,” he tore the tiger away by force and drove it off. When he met Vyāsa he received eight śālagrāmas. Soon after this he wrote the Mahābhārata-tātparya.

The fame of Śrī Madhva's extraordinary learning and his devotion to the Lord spread throughout India. The Śaṅkarācārya who headed the Śṛṅgeri Maṭha grew very uneasy. Śaṅkara's followers, seeing their greatness diminished, set about persecuting Madhva. The followers of Madhva were cut off from society, and attempts were made to prove that Madhva's doctrine was un-Vedic and contrary to the śāstras. Padmatīrtha, together with a Śaṅkarite paṇḍita named Puṇḍarīka Purī, engaged the ācārya in a battle of words. The books the ācārya had collected and written were stolen, but later, after great anxiety, they were found. Puṇḍarīka was defeated. Jayasiṁha, the ruler of Kumla, helped Śrī Madhvācārya recover the books. Trivikramācārya of Viṣṇumaṅgala, a paṇḍita famous throughout the land, became his disciple. His son is Śrī Nārāyaṇācārya, the author of the Śrī Madhva-vijaya. After the father passed away, the ācārya's younger brother took sannyāsa and received the name “Viṣṇutīrtha.”

Śrī Pūrṇaprajña's bodily strength had no limit. A strongman named “Kaḍañjari” boasted that he had the strength of thirty men. The ācārya pressed his big toe to the ground and told him to pull it away. Though this extraordinary strongman applied all his immense strength, he could not do it. On a stone slab in the village of Mudgeri, in the Kadur district, it is written: “The stone brought and set up by Śrī Madhvācārya with one hand.” When he rode about on the shoulders of a frail boy, the bearer felt no weight at all.

On the ninth lunar day of the bright fortnight of Māgha, while explaining his commentary on the Aitareya Upaniṣad, Śrī Madhva left this world at the age of eighty. For details, see the book Madhva-vijaya, written by Nārāyaṇa Paṇḍita, son of Trivikramācārya, a disciple of Śrī Madhva. For a brief account of that book, see the Mañjuṣā-samāhṛti (issue 2).

The ācāryas of the Mādhva Tattvavāda sampradāya call the original Mādhva maṭha in the village of Uḍupī the “Uttararāḍhī Maṭha.” The founders of the eight maṭhas of Uḍupī and the names of the maṭhas are as follows: (1) Viṣṇu Tīrtha, the Śoda Maṭha; (2) Janārdana Tīrtha, the Kṛṣṇapura Maṭha; (3) Vāmana Tīrtha, the Kanur Maṭha; (4) Narasiṁha Tīrtha, the Adamar Maṭha; (5) Upendra Tīrtha, the Puttugi Maṭha; (6) Rāma Tīrtha, the Shirur Maṭha; (7) Hṛṣīkeśa Tīrtha, the Palimar Maṭha; (8) Akṣobhya Tīrtha, the Pejavar Maṭha.

From (16) Vidyādhirāja Tīrtha comes another line of disciples: (17) Rājendratīrtha, Śaka 1254; (18) Vijayadhvaja; (19) Puruṣottama; (20) Subrahmaṇya; (21) Vyāsarāya, Śaka 1470–1520. In the succession of this maṭha there have been, down to the present day, 19 more Mādhva ascetics bearing the title "Tīrtha."

In this "para-maṭha" there have been to this day 14 more Mādhva ascetics bearing the title "Tīrtha."

Uḍupī is in the South Kanara district, on the seacoast, 36 miles north of Mangalore (South Kanara Manual and Bombay Gazetteer).

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
In the Dākṣiṇātya, in the village of Uḍupī, is the seat (gādi) of Madhvācārya. The ācāryas of this sampradāya are called “Tattvavādīs.” The Deity of the Dancing Gopāla resides there. Śrī Madhvācārya found Gopāla beneath gopī-candana in a sunken ḍiṅgā, that is, a large boat.

Madhva's disciples in succession serve the Deity of Kṛṣṇa —

The age-old enmity between those who hold to the featureless Brahman — the kevalādvaita-vādīs, or Māyāvādīs — and the śuddha-dvaita-vādīs, or Tattvavādīs, is well known.

258 The Lord said, “The scriptures declare that hearing and chanting are the ‘supreme means’ to the fruit of loving service to Kṛṣṇa.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

The Tattvavādīs, adherents of pure dualism (śuddha-dvaita), saw on Mahāprabhu the marks of sannyāsa of Śaṅkara's school and at first did not speak to the Lord. But then, seeing Him overwhelmed with prema, they recognized Him as a Vaiṣṇava and honored Him, that is, served Him. In the hearts of the Tattvavādīs lived pride in their own Vaiṣṇavism. Seeing this, the Lord smiled slightly and spoke with them. The Lord said, “I do not know well what the goal (sādhya) is and what the means (sādhana). Please be kind and teach Me.” The Tattvavāda ācārya replied, “To offer varṇāśrama-dharma to Kṛṣṇa is the best sādhana of a devotee of Kṛṣṇa. By the power of this sādhana the perfected person attains the five kinds of liberation, the best sādhya, and goes to Vaikuṇṭha.” To this the Lord said that according to the śāstras the best sādhana is hearing and chanting: by the power of this sādhana one attains the fruit, the sādhya, which is loving service to Kṛṣṇa.

Anubhāṣya.

The Tattvavādīs' "sādhana" is varṇāśrama-dharma (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 11.19.47). But the one and only "sādhana" intended by the śāstras that Mahāprabhu revealed is hearing and chanting. The Tattvavādīs' "sādhya" is to attain the five kinds of liberation and then go to Vaikuṇṭha. But the "sādhya" of the śāstras that Mahāprabhu revealed is love for Kṛṣṇa (kṛṣṇa-prema).

directly for the Lord, I consider that the highest learning." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 7.5.23–24)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Hearing about Śrī Kṛṣṇa, chanting His glories, remembering Him, serving His feet, worshiping Him, offering Him prayers, serving Him as a servant, being His friend, and surrendering one's whole self to Him — when devotion with these nine features is offered to Śrī Kṛṣṇa and carried out, every perfection is attained. This is the highest purport of the śāstras.

Anubhāṣya.

The Daitya king Hiraṇyakaśipu, whose only wealth was knowledge born of the senses, regarded the mahā-bhāgavata Prahlāda as his "son" and asked him what he had learned from the sons of his guru. In reply Śrī Prahlāda, the servant of Adhokṣaja, said:

[viṣṇoḥ] śravaṇaṁ (the touch upon the ear of sounds full of His name, form, qualities, associates, and pastimes), [viṣṇoḥ] kīrtanaṁ (uttering sounds full of His name, form, qualities, associates, and pastimes), [viṣṇoḥ] smaraṇaṁ (any remembrance at all, in the mind, of Kṛṣṇa, full of name, form, qualities, associates, and pastimes), [viṣṇoḥ] pāda-sevanam (service suited to time, place, and so on), [viṣṇoḥ] arcanaṁ (worship), [viṣṇoḥ] vandanaṁ (obeisances), [viṣṇoḥ] dāsyaṁ (the awareness "I am His servant"), [viṣṇoḥ] sakhyam (wishing Him well in the mood of a friend), [viṣṇau] ātma-nivedanam (offering everything, from the body to the pure self, to Him alone in every way) iti nava-lakṣaṇā (that which has nine features) puṁsā (by a person — first) arpitā (being offered) bhagavati viṣṇau (to Śrī Hari) addhā (directly, not through the medium of jñāna, karma, and the like) bhaktiḥ (afterwards) kriyeta (not that it is first performed and afterwards offered: this devotion is not indirect, not an offering of karma and the like; one should think, "It is only for pleasing Bhagavān," not for dharma, artha, kāma, and mokṣa. If it is performed in this way, then the performer regards pure service to Hari alone as the fruit of studying all the śāstras, and what) adhītam (he has studied), (that very thing) uttamam manye.

Love for Kṛṣṇa is the fruit of pure hearing and chanting alone —

sei pañcama puruṣārtha — puruṣārthera sīmā that the fifth goal of life of the goals of life the limit

261 From hearing and chanting arises love (premā) for Kṛṣṇa. That is the fifth goal of life, the furthest limit of all human goals.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The nine kinds of sādhana-bhakti, beginning with hearing and chanting, awaken loving devotion (prema-bhakti) to Kṛṣṇa. That is the “fifth” puruṣārtha (goal of life), and that is the limit of the puruṣārthas. The point is this: dharma, artha, kāma, and mokṣa — these four puruṣārthas are “with cheating” (sa-kaitava); only the puruṣārtha of prema is “without cheating” (a-kaitava).

Anubhāṣya.
Dharma, artha, kāma, and mokṣa — these are the four goals of life (puruṣārthas). “Love for Kṛṣṇa” is the “fifth” puruṣārtha: it lies beyond these four and is the best of all. Love for Kṛṣṇa awakens only from hearing and chanting Kṛṣṇa's name and so on. Even when one must practice other kinds of devotion, one should practice them together with kīrtana. This is Śrī Mahāprabhu's intention. It is said (Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya 22.105[27]): “Eternally perfect love for Kṛṣṇa is never something to be produced (sādhya); it rises in a heart made pure by hearing and the other practices.”

262 "One who has taken this vow, chanting the names of his beloved Lord, finds love awakening within him; his heart melts, and, heedless of the world, he laughs aloud, weeps, cries out, sings and dances like a madman." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 11.2.40)[8]

karma-nindā, karma-tyāga, sarva-śāstre kahe censure of karma renunciation of karma in all the scriptures is said karma haite prema-bhakti kṛṣṇe kabhu nahe from karma loving devotion to Kṛṣṇa ever is not

263 All the scriptures censure karma and enjoin its renunciation: loving devotion (prema-bhakti) to Kṛṣṇa never arises from karma.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Scriptures that establish karma contain, in many places, instruction in karma and praise of it, yet in the end all the śāstras censure karma and prescribe giving it up. Neither by karma nor by offering karma can loving devotion to Kṛṣṇa ever be attained. The point is this: offering karma and the like purifies the heart. When the heart is purified, by the power of the company of sādhus (sat-saṅga) faith (śraddhā) in exclusive devotion to Kṛṣṇa arises. When faith arises, sādhana-bhakti begins — hearing, chanting, and the rest. The more one is freed from anarthas while practicing devotion — hearing, chanting, and the rest — the higher prema rises. Therefore karma or offering karma by no means always and inevitably awakens devotion to Kṛṣṇa. For (pure devotion to Kṛṣṇa) depends on faith whose sign is the birth of [the eagerness] to hear, born of the company of sādhus.

Anubhāṣya.

Good karma is better than bad karma, but even from such karma loving devotion to Kṛṣṇa never arises. Karma is the cause of the jīva's gaining happiness or suffering. And from the jīva's gaining happiness or suffering, devotion cannot arise. Devotion is service for Kṛṣṇa's happiness. All the śāstras, even the śāstras of jñāna, censure the aim of one's own enjoyment and prescribe giving it up. The Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, the crown of spotless evidence, discusses and establishes only naiṣkarmya (freedom from karma) accompanied by pure knowledge, detachment, and devotion. In this Purāṇa, the best of all śāstras — at its beginning, in its middle, and at its end, everywhere — karma and jñāna whose mark is the intent to enjoy utterly trivial fruits are censured. Therefore, deeming it superfluous, we cite no verse here as evidence.

In reply to his question Śrī Bhagavān said: yāvatā pumān na nirvidyeta (as long as nirveda, detachment from talk of anything other than Kṛṣṇa, has not arisen), yāvat mat-kathā-śravaṇādau vā śraddhā na jāyate, tāvat karmāṇi (the nitya and naimittika karma, pious duties, regular and occasional) kurvīta.

to the service of Kṛṣṇa, the foe of Madhu: for them even liberation is worthless." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 5.14.44)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Mahārāja Bharata did not desire property, sons, relatives, wealth, or wife, so hard to give up, nor even royal fortune (Lakṣmī) with her kindly glance, whom the chief demigods long for. That was indeed fitting for him. For to sādhus like him, whose minds are devoted to serving Kṛṣṇa, even the liberation of nirvāṇa is worthless, to say nothing of earthly happiness.

Anubhāṣya.

Śrī Śukadeva glorifies before Mahārāja Parīkṣit the virtues of the mahā-bhāgavata Bharata — his pure service to Bhagavān: yaḥ nṛpaḥ (the royal sage Bharata) dustyajān (hard to give up) kṣiti-suta-svajanārtha-dārān (land, sons, relatives, wealth, wife, and the rest), sura-varaiḥ (even by the best of the demigods) prārthyāṁ (desired) śriyaṁ (Lakṣmī) sadayāvalokām (she whose glance is such that it awakens Bharata's kindness; or else she whose glance is full of kindness: "Let Bharata not accept the bodily hardship born of renunciation; let him stay at home, cherished by me"), na aicchat (did not desire) — that he did not desire her (his indifference to Śrī) — ucitam (was indeed fitting), (for) madhu-dviṭ-sevānurakta-manasām (of those whose minds are attached to the service of the Enemy of Madhu) mahatām abhavaḥ (freedom from rebirth, liberation) api phalguḥ (is indeed worthless).

270 "Those who are devoted to Nārāyaṇa fear nothing from any quarter; in heaven, in liberation and even in hell they see the same worth." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 6.17.28)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The devotees of Nārāyaṇa, who see heaven, liberation, and hell as of equal worth, fear nothing at all.

Anubhāṣya.
Citraketu showed disrespect to the paramahaṁsa Śambhu, and Pārvatī cursed him: "Be born as the asura Vṛtra." The sādhu Citraketu accepted it with bowed head, pleased them both, and went to his own place. Seeing this, the great Vaiṣṇava Śambhu describes to Pārvatī the conduct and nature of the devotees of Viṣṇu: sarve nārāyaṇa-parāḥ (the devotees of Viṣṇu) kutaścana na bibhyati (that is, they fear nothing), (for they) svargāpavarga-narakeṣu (in heaven and liberation, the abodes of happiness, and in hell and the other abodes of suffering) api tulyārtha-darśinaḥ (those whose nature is to see "the purpose is the same," that is, who see an equal result).

The "fear" mentioned in this verse in the words kutaścana na bibhyati, that is, akutobhaya (fearing nothing), arises from absorption in a second thing (dvitīyābhiniveśa). The "second" is māyā, perceived as something other than Kṛṣṇa, the nondual Knowledge, or other than the conscious Reality who is to be served; absorption in it is enjoyment pleasing to the senses (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 11.2.37; Bṛhad-āraṇyaka Upaniṣad 1.4.2). That enjoyment is "kāma," the desire to please one's own senses, whose mark is selfish intent. Endeavor made of it is "matsaratā" (envy), or "hiṁsā" (violence). Only one wholly devoted to Nārāyaṇa — the pure devotee — having gained "fearlessness," can say, "I see nothing here worth enjoying." (Chāndogya Upaniṣad 8.9.1) Therefore heaven, hell, or liberation — all of these are for him a “second thing,” something foreign to the self, and so unwelcome.

Karma* and jñāna are opposed to pure devotion and so are neither “sādhana” nor “sādhya” —*

O ācārya of Tattvavāda! All pure devotees give up these two, “mukti” and “karma.” How sad that you have established that very mukti as the “sādhya” and karma as the “sādhana”!

Anubhāṣya.

In the hymn Mukunda-mālā of Śrī Kulaśekhara: “Not for freedom from duality do I worship Your lotus feet, O Hari, not to escape the heavy hell of Kumbhīpāka, and not to delight in the garden of Nandana with lovely women whose bodies are soft as creepers. I pray only that in every birth I may contemplate You in the chamber of my heart.” “I have no regard for dharma, nor for heaps of wealth, nor for sensual enjoyment. O Bhagavān, let whatever must be come to pass according to my past karma. This one thing I pray for, this I hold most dear: even birth after birth may I have unwavering devotion fixed on Your lotus feet.”

not you told therefore of the goal and means the marks

272 Seeing that I am a sannyāsī, you are deceiving Me, and so you have not told Me the true nature of the goal and the means."

*The Tattvavāda ācārya is ashamed and realizes the Lord's greatness —*

শুনি' তত্ত্বাচার্য্য হৈলা অন্তরে লজ্জিত । প্রভুর বৈষ্ণবতা দেখি' হইলা বিস্মিত ॥ ২৭৩ ॥

śuni' tattvācārya hailā antare lajjita hearing the Tattva-ācārya became at heart ashamed prabhura vaiṣṇavatā dekhi' hailā vismita the Lord's Vaiṣṇavism seeing he became astonished 273 Hearing this, the ācārya of the Tattvavādīs was ashamed at heart, and seeing the Lord's Vaiṣṇava spirit, he was astonished.

Anubhāṣya.
The Tattva ācārya. From the succession of gurus of the Uttararāḍhī Maṭha (see the Anubhāṣya to number 247[28]) it is known that in Śrī Mahāprabhu's time the Madhvācārya there was Śrī Raghuvīrya Tīrtha.[29]

*The Tattvavāda ācārya accepts the Lord's view —*

আচার্য্য কহে, — তুমি যেই কহ, সেই সত্য হয় । সর্ব্বশাস্ত্রে বৈষ্ণবের এই সুনিশ্চয় ॥ ২৭৪ ॥

ācārya kahe, — tumi yei kaha, sei satya haya the ācārya said You what say that true is sarva-śāstre vaiṣṇavera ei suniścaya in all the scriptures of the Vaiṣṇavas this the firm conclusion

274 The ācārya said, "What You say is true; in all the scriptures this is the firm conclusion of the Vaiṣṇavas.

*By Ānandatīrtha's order, devotion mixed with karma is practiced in the Tattvavāda sampradāya —*

তথাপি মধ্বাচার্য্য ঐছে করিয়াছে নির্ব্বন্ধ । সেই আচরিয়ে সবে সম্প্রদায় সম্বন্ধ ॥ ২৭৫ ॥

tathāpi madhvācārya aiche kariyāche nirbandha nevertheless Madhvācārya thus has made the rule sei ācariye sabe sampradāya sambandha that we practise all of the sampradāya for the connection

275 Yet Madhvācārya laid down this rule, and because of our connection with his sampradāya we all follow it."

Anubhāṣya.
The Sadācāra-smṛti says: " Having duly accomplished by dharma what serves as the means of worship, all the varṇas and āśramas always worship Viṣṇu alone. The sage Ānandatīrtha drew out the words of Vyāsa and set them down, auspiciously and in brief, on the subject of sadācāra."

*The Lord does not honor the karmīs and jñānīs —*

প্রভু কহে, — কর্ম্মী, জ্ঞানী, দুই ভক্তিহীন । তোমার সম্প্রদায়ে দেখি সেই দুই চিহ্ন ॥ ২৭৬ ॥

prabhu kahe, — karmī, jñānī, dui bhakti-hīna
the Lord said the karmī the jñānī both devoid of devotion tomāra sampradāye dekhi sei dui cihna
in your sampradāya I see those two signs

276 The Lord said, "The karmī and the jñānī are both devoid of devotion, and in your sampradāya I see the signs of both.

The "Vaiṣṇavism" of the Tattvavādīs is only the fruit of their accepting the personal nature of the One they worship, that is, His spiritual pastimes —

সবে, এক গুণ দেখি তোমার সম্প্রদায়ে ।
'সত্যবিগ্রহ ঈশ্বরে' করহ নিশ্চয়ে ॥ ২৭৭ ॥

sabe, eka guṇa dekhi tomāra sampradāye only one merit I see in your sampradāya
'satya-vigraha īśvare' karaha niścaye
'the Lord's form is real' you hold firmly

277 I see only one merit in your sampradāya: you firmly hold that the Lord's form is real (satya-vigraha)."

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

The Lord said, "O ācārya of the Tattvavādīs, the conclusions of your sampradāya are for the most part opposed to pure devotion. Still, I see in your sampradāya one great virtue: you accept the true and eternal form (vigraha) of the Lord." The point is this: My parama-guru Śrī Mādhavendra Purī, relying on this chief conclusion, accepted the Mādhva-sampradāya.

The Lord comes to Phalgu-tīrtha —

এইমত তাঁর ঘরে গর্ব্ব চূর্ণ করি' । ফল্গুতীর্থে তবে আইলা শ্রীগৌরহরি ॥ ২৭৮ ॥ ei-mata tāṁra ghare garva cūrṇa kari' in this way his (lit. in his house) pride crushing phalgu-tīrthe tabe āilā śrī-gaurahari to Phalgu-tīrtha then came Śrī Gaurahari

278 Having thus crushed the ācārya's pride, Śrī Gaurahari then came to Phalgu-tīrtha.

Anubhāṣya.

Tāṙa ghare* means tāṅhāke (him). Even today, on the Howrah–Amta line, in places like "Mājhu," and in Burdwan toward Katwa, the colloquial language regularly uses the word ghare together with the genitive ending -r of the pronouns tat, yuṣmad, and asmad in the sense of the accusative, singular and plural. For example, tādera ghare, tomādera ghare, and āmādera ghare mean tāhādigake (them), tomādigake (you), and āmādigake (us). In East Bengal, in the accusative of these words, and only in the plural, the word gore is used, a corruption of ghare, but the genitive ending -r is not added to them. For example, instead of tomādigake ḍākiyāche ("you are being called"), the colloquial language of East Bengal says tomāgore ḍākche.

Darśana* of Viśālākṣī at Tritakūpa; the Lord comes to Pañcāpsarā-tīrtha —*

at Tritakūpa of Viśālākṣī He had darśana pañcāpsarā-tīrthe āilā śacīra nandana

279 At Tritakūpa He had darśana of Viśālākṣī, and then the son of Śacī came to Pañcāpsarā-tīrtha.

Anubhāṣya.

Pañcāpsarā-tīrtha. Indra sent five apsarās — Latā, Budbudā, Samīcī, Saurabheyī, and Varṇā — to break the austerities of Śātakarṇi (by another view, of Māṇḍakarṇi; by a third, of the sage Acyuta). They were cursed and lived in a lake in the form of crocodiles. Later Śrī Rāmacandra saw this lake. From the words of Nārada it is known that Arjuna, coming here on pilgrimage, freed the five apsarās from birth as crocodiles. Since then this lake has become a holy place (tīrtha).

Darśana* of Śiva at Gokarṇa; the Lord comes to Dvaipāyani and Sūrpāraka-tīrtha —*

গোকর্ণে শিব দেখি' আইলা দ্বৈপায়নি । সূর্পারক তীর্থে আইলা ন্যাসিশিরোমণি ॥ ২৮০ ॥

in Gokarṇa Śiva seeing He came to Dvaipāyani sūrpāraka tīrthe āilā nyāsi-śiromaṇi to Sūrpāraka holy place came the crown jewel of sannyāsīs

280 After seeing Śiva in Gokarṇa He came to Dvaipāyani, and then the crown jewel of sannyāsīs came to the holy place of Sūrpāraka.

Anubhāṣya.

Gokarṇa lies in the Bombay Presidency, in North Kanara, 20 miles southeast of Karwar. It is famous for the temple of the Śiva-liṅga Mahābaleśvara. Many pilgrims gather here (Bombay Gazetteer).

Sūrpāraka is the place called “Sopārā” in the Thana district, 26 miles north of Bombay. From very ancient times until the Middle Ages it was the capital of the Konkan (Bombay Gazetteer).

Darśana* of Lakṣmī, Bhagavatī, Gaṇeśa, and Pārvatī at Kolāpura —*

in Kolāpura Lakṣmī seeing He sees Kṣīra-bhagavatī lāṅga-gaṇeśa dekhi’ dekhena cora-pārvatī
Lāṅga-gaṇeśa seeing He sees Cora-pārvatī

281 In Kolāpura He saw Lakṣmī and then Kṣīra-bhagavatī; He saw Lāṅga-gaṇeśa and then Cora-pārvatī.

Anubhāṣya.

Kolāpura is a native state within the Bombay Presidency. To its north lies Satara, to the east and south Belgaum, and to the west Ratnagiri. The river “Urṇā” flows here. Formerly Kolāpura had about 250 temples. Of these six are now famous: (1) the temple of Ambābāī, or Mahālakṣmī; (2) the temple of Viṭhobā; (3) the temple of Ṭemblāī; (4) the temple of Mahākālī; (5) the temple of Phiraṅgāī, or Pratyaṅgirā; and the temple of Yallammā (Bombay Gazetteer).

*The Lord comes to Pāṇḍarapura on the bank of the Bhīmā and has darśana of Viṭhṭhaladeva —*

tathā haite pāṇḍarapure āilā gauracandra from there to Pāṇḍarapura came Gauracandra viṭhṭhal-ṭhākura dekhi’ pāilā ānanda
Viṭhṭhala Ṭhākura seeing He felt bliss

282 From there Gauracandra came to Pāṇḍarapura, and seeing Viṭhṭhala Ṭhākura, He was filled with bliss.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Pāṇḍarapura is the town of "Pāṇḍupura," or "Pāṇḍarapura," on the bank of the river Bhīmā. Research shows that here Mahāprabhu bestowed His mercy on Tukārāmācārya by giving him harināma. Tukārāma himself acknowledged this in his abhaṅgas. From Tukārāma, kīrtana with mṛdaṅgas and other instruments spread through that region.

Anubhāṣya.

Pāṇḍarapura, or Pandharpur, is a subdivision of the Sholapur district in the Bombay Presidency, 38 miles due west of the town of Sholapur. Here resides Viṭhṭhala, or Viṭhobā-deva Ṭhākura — a four-armed Deity of Śrī Nārāyaṇa. The town stands on the bank of the river Bhīmā. In the fifteenth century of the Śaka era a famous Vaiṣṇava sādhu named "Tukārāma" lived here.

The Lord dances and sings; a meal in the house of a Vaiṣṇava brāhmaṇa —

there a brāhmaṇa Him made invitation

283 In ecstatic love He sang and danced at length in kīrtana, and a brāhmaṇa there invited Him.

There the Lord learns that Śrī Raṅga Purī is staying nearby —

284 With great affection the brāhmaṇa served the Lord a meal, and after the meal the Lord received some good news there.

285 A disciple of Mādhava Purī (Mādhavendra Purī) named Śrī Raṅga Purī was staying in a brāhmaṇa's house in that village.

The Lord goes to Śrī Raṅga Purī and bows down to him —

শুনিয়া চলিলা প্রভু তাঁরে দেখিবারে ।

286 Hearing this, the Lord set out to see him, and He found him sitting in the brāhmaṇa's house.

287 In ecstatic love He offered him prostrate obeisances; tears, horripilation and trembling came over Him, and sweat streamed from all His limbs.

Seeing the Lord's emotions, Purī concludes that He is connected with Mādhavendra Purī —

দেখিয়া বিস্মিত হৈলা শ্রীরঙ্গ-পুরীর মন ।
'উঠহ শ্রীপাদ' বলি' বলিলা বচন ॥ ২৮৮ ॥

dekhiyā vismita hailā śrī-raṅga-purīra mana seeing amazed became of Śrī Raṅga Purī the mind
'uṭhaha śrīpāda' bali' balilā vacana
'rise Śrīpāda' saying he spoke words

288 Seeing this, Śrī Raṅga Purī was amazed at heart, and he said, "Rise, Śrīpāda!

শ্রীপাদ, ধর মোর গোসাঞির সম্বন্ধ । তাহা বিনা অন্যত্র নাহি এই প্রেমার গন্ধ ॥ ২৮৯ ॥

śrīpāda, dhara mora gosāñira sambandha Śrīpāda You hold with my Gosāñi a connection tāhā vinā anyatra nāhi ei premāra gandha that without elsewhere there is not of this love the fragrance

289 Śrīpāda, You must have a connection with my Gosāñi, Mādhavendra Purī; without it there is not even a trace of such love anywhere."

Anubhāṣya.
Before Śrīpāda Mādhavendra Purī, down to Śrīpāda Lakṣmīpati Tīrtha, the worship of Kṛṣṇa alone was the custom. Only from Śrīla Mādhavendra did love for Kṛṣṇa descend into the world in the rasa of separation (vipralambha), rooted in exclusive service to Śrī Rādhā. For "he is the first sprout of the wish-fulfilling tree of bhakti" (Ādi 9.10). Only a devotee in whom taste (ruci) has awakened and who is bound to Śrīla Mādhavendra by dear ties is eligible for this love for Kṛṣṇa. See also Madhya 2.83.

Gosāñira means "of Śrī Gurudeva," the crown of the family of akiñcana paramahaṁsas, whose only shelter is Kṛṣṇa. Only one who has conquered the six urges is truly called a "gosvāmī." That is why Śrī Mādhavendra Purīpāda, who had left home, is referred to here by the word gosvāmī. This shows that the word gosvāmī is not tied to blood or semen, nor bound to the dharma of the gṛhavrata or to the sacrifices of the gṛhamedhī by succession in a seminal line. Yet out of a wish to oppose the Vaiṣṇavas, the word gosvāmī has unjustly ended up today as a caste title by birth, and so it has become a cause of disease for those who use it without the right to it.

Raṅga Purī embraces the Lord, and both weep with love —

এত বলি' প্রভুকে উঠাঞা কৈল আলিঙ্গন ।

290 Saying this, he raised the Lord and embraced Him, and clasping each other around the neck, they both wept.

Both grow calm, learn about each other, and love arises between them —

Asking the Lord's birthplace, Śrī Raṅga Purī hears the name "Navadvīpa" —

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Mahāprabhu's elder brother, Śrīmad Viśvarūpa, took sannyāsa and received the name “Śaṅkarāraṇya Svāmī.” While traveling through the land, he attained perfection (siddhi) at the holy place of Pāṇḍarapura, that is, he entered the spiritual abode. This news was given to Mahāprabhu by Śrī Raṅga Purī, a disciple of Mādhavendra Purī and a godbrother of Īśvara Purī.

Kṛṣṇaveṇvā. At Mahābaleśvara in the Sahyādri hills the two streams of the river Kṛṣṇā arise. Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura lived on the bank of this river. Instead of "Veṇvā," some say "Vīṇā," some "Veṇī" or "Sinā," and some "Bhīmā."

Anubhāṣya.

The Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta is a book of songs in 112 verses composed by Śrī Ṭhākura Bilvamaṅgala. Two or three different song books are known under this title. This book has two commentaries studied by Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇavas, by Śrī Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī and by Śrī Caitanyadāsa Gosvāmī.

307 Nothing in the three worlds equals the Karṇāmṛta, for from it comes the knowledge of pure love for Kṛṣṇa.

*The fruit of reading the Karṇāmṛta for a reader in whom taste has awakened*

সৌন্দর্য্য-মাধুর্য্য-কৃষ্ণলীলার অবধি ।

308 Only one who constantly reads the Karṇāmṛta knows the furthest limit of Kṛṣṇa's beauty, sweetness and pastimes.

*The Lord obtains two books: (1) on siddhānta and (2) on rasa —*

Anubhāṣya.
The Brahma-saṁhitā: see the Anubhāṣya to verse 237.

Darśana* of holy places on the banks of the Tāptī and the Narmadā; the Lord comes to Māhiṣmatīpura —*

তাপী স্নান করি' আইলা মাহিষ্মতীপুরে । নানা তীর্থ দেখি তাঁহা নর্ম্মদার তীরে ॥ ৩১০ ॥

nānā tīrtha dekhi tāṁhā narmadāra tīre various holy places seeing there of the Narmadā on the bank

310 After bathing in the Tāpī He came to Māhiṣmatīpura, and there He saw many holy places on the bank of the Narmadā.

Anubhāṣya.

The Tāptī, present name "Tāpī," rises in the Multai hills of Central India and falls into the Western Sea in the northern part of Saurāṣṭra.

Māhiṣmatīpura is "Chuli Maheshwar." The Mahābhārata, Sabhā-parva, in the account of Sahadeva's conquest of the quarters (chapter 31, verse 21), says: " Then, taking the jewels, he went to the city of Māhiṣmatī. There that bull among men fought with King Nīla." Formerly this was the place of Kārtavīrya Arjuna, in the Broach district of Gujarat.

Darśana* of Dhanus-tīrtha and bathing in the Nirvindhyā; then the Lord comes to Ṛṣyamūka Mountain, to Daṇḍakāraṇya —*

ধনুস্তীর্থ দেখি' করিলা নির্ব্বিন্ধ্যে স্নানে । ঋষ্যমূক-গিরি আইলা দণ্ডকারণ্যে ॥ ৩১১ ॥

ṛṣyamūka-giri āilā daṇḍakāraṇye to the Ṛṣyamūka hill He came to Daṇḍakāraṇya

311 He saw Dhanus-tīrtha and bathed in the Nirvindhyā; then He came to the Ṛṣyamūka hill and the Daṇḍakāraṇya forest.

Anubhāṣya.

The river Nirvindhyā lies near Ujjayinī, to its northeast, west of the river Pārā and south of the river Pāvanī.

Ṛṣyamūka. Some say that Ṛṣyamūka Mountain is the mountain near the village of Hampi in the Bellary district, beside the narrowest pass on the bank of the Tuṅgabhadrā; it extends into the Nizam's state. According to some, it lies in the Central Provinces and is now called "Rampa"; according to others, it is "Anamalaya" in the kingdom of Travancore; and according to still others, the river Pampā flows out of Ṛṣyamūka Mountain and joins the Tuṅgabhadrā near Anagundi.

Daṇḍakāraṇya. Over the broad tract along the banks of the Godāvarī — from Khandesh in the north to Ahmednagar in the south, and in between as far as "Nasik" and "Aurangabad" — there was a vast forest called "Daṇḍakāraṇya."

The deliverance of the "Sapta-tāla" —

'সপ্ততাল-বৃক্ষ' দেখে কানন-ভিতর । অতি বৃদ্ধ, অতি স্থূল, অতি উচ্চতর ॥ ৩১২ ॥

'saptatāla-vṛkṣa' dekhe kānana-bhitara
the 'seven palm trees' He sees within the forest ati vṛddha, ati sthūla, ati uccatara very old very thick very tall

312 In the forest He saw the "seven palm trees" — very old, very thick and very tall.

Anubhāṣya.

Sapta-tāla. To show Sugrīva, the king of the monkeys, that He was able to kill Vāli, Śrī Rāmacandra boldly struck down the seven palm trees. This episode is described in the Rāmāyaṇa, Kiṣkindhā-kāṇḍa, sargas 11 and 12.

313 Seeing the seven palms, the Lord embraced them, and they vanished in their very bodies.

The people recognize the Lord as the avatāra Rāma —

শূন্যস্থল দেখি' লোকের হৈল চমৎকার । লোকে কহে, এ সন্ন্যাসী — রাম-অবতার ॥ ৩১৪ ॥

śūnya-sthala dekhi' lokera haila camatkāra aiche śakti kāra haya, vinā eka rāma?

such power whose is except one Rāma

315 The palms have gone in their very bodies to the abode of Śrī Vaikuṇṭha. Who but Rāma alone has such power?"

Bathing in Lake Pampā and resting at Pañcavaṭī —

প্রভু আসি' কৈল পম্পা-সরোবরে স্নান । পঞ্চবটী আসি' তাঁহা করিল বিশ্রাম ॥ ৩১৬ ॥

prabhu āsi' kaila pampā-sarovare snāna
the Lord coming took in Lake Pampā a bath pañcavaṭī āsi' tāṁhā karila viśrāma to Pañcavaṭī coming there He took rest

316 The Lord came and bathed in Lake Pampā; then He came to Pañcavaṭī and rested there.

Anubhāṣya.

Pampā. "Ṛṣyamūka, covered with flowering trees, lies before the Pampā." Some say that "Pampā" is the ancient name of the river Tuṅgabhadrā itself. According to another view, the village of Hampi, the ancient and famous capital of Vijayanagara, was first known as the holy place Pampā. According to a third view, "Lake Pampā" is a lake on the bank of the Tuṅgabhadrā near Anagundi, toward Hyderabad.

According to a fourth, Lake Pampā is the Pambe river of Travancore. According to a fifth, the river is called a lake because its water is still.

Pañcavaṭī is a forest in Daṇḍakāraṇya, now within the town of "Nasik." Here Lakṣmaṇa cut off Śūrpaṇakhā's nose. In the town of Nasik resides the Mahādeva named "Tryambaka" (Bombay Gazetteer).

*After darśana of Śiva at Nasik, the Lord comes to Brahmagiri and then to Kuśāvarta —*

নাসিকে ত্র্যম্বক দেখি' গেলা ব্রহ্মগিরি । কুশাবর্ত্তে আইলা যাঁহা জন্মিলা গোদাবরী ॥ ৩১৭ ॥

nāsike tryambaka dekhi' gelā brahmagiri
in Nāsika Tryambaka seeing He went to Brahmagiri kuśāvarte āilā yāṁhā janmilā godāvarī to Kuśāvarta He came where was born the Godāvarī

317 In Nāsika He saw Tryambaka and went on to Brahmagiri; then He came to Kuśāvarta, where the Godāvarī has its source.

Anubhāṣya.

Kuśāvarta. The main streams of the Godāvarī arise in a region called Kuśaṭṭa in the Western Ghats, or Sahyādri; it lies near Nasik. According to some, it lies at the foot of the Vindhya range.

Having sanctified many holy places along the banks of the seven branches of the Godāvarī, the Lord comes to Vidyānagara —

সপ্ত গোদাবরী আইলা করি' তীর্থ বহুতর । পুনরপি আইলা প্রভু বিদ্যানগর ॥ ৩১৮ ॥

sapta godāvarī āilā kari' tīrtha bahutara to Sapta Godāvarī He came visiting holy places very many punarapi āilā prabhu vidyānagara
once again came the Lord to Vidyānagara

318 Visiting a great many holy places, He came to Sapta-godāvarī, and from there the Lord came once again to Vidyānagara.

Anubhāṣya.

From the source of the Godāvarī the Lord passed through the northern part of present-day Hyderabad, by way of "Bastar," and came to Kaliṅga, in the Northern Circars.

323 The Lord told him the whole story of His pilgrimage and gave him the two manuscripts, the Karṇāmṛta and the Brahma-saṁhitā.

*Both books confirm the siddhānta and the judgments on rasa that Rāya*

had spoken —

324 The Lord said, “These two books bear witness to that very rasa — the conclusions about love (prema-siddhānta) that you spoke to Me.”

Seeing the Lord, Rāya rejoices and keeps a copy of both books —

326 “The Gosāñi has come!” — a clamour rose in the village, and all the people came to see the Lord.

Anubhāṣya.

Seeing outsiders, Rāya and the Lord go each about his own affairs —

332 The Lord said, “It is for this very reason that I have come here: I shall take you with Me to Nīlācala.”

Rāya sends the Lord ahead to Purī and promises to follow —

Anubhāṣya.
Bhikṣā karāñā means having fed Śrīman Mahāprabhu.

The Lord tells of His pilgrimage, and everyone stays up all night listening —

355 With Sārvabhauma and His own associates He stayed awake all night, telling the story of His pilgrimage.

The Lord praises Sārvabhauma and Rāya —

356 The Lord said, "I have travelled to so many holy places, yet I have not seen a single Vaiṣṇava equal to you.

357 Rāmānanda Rāya alone gave Me great happiness." The Bhaṭṭācārya said, "That is why I asked You to meet him."

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

In the eighth act of the Śrī Caitanya-candrodaya-nāṭaka the conversation of Sārvabhauma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya is written thus.

Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya: "Sārvabhauma, I have traveled so far, yet I have met no one like you — only Rāmānanda Rāya, and he is truly extraordinary."

Sārvabhauma: "My Lord, that is why I said You must certainly see him."

Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya: "I did see a few Vaiṣṇavas, but they too are only worshipers of Nārāyaṇa. Others are Tattvavādīs, and they are of the same kind: their doctrine is not faultless. The rest are mostly Śaivas, and the pāṣaṇḍīs are very powerful and numerous. But, Bhaṭṭācārya, only Rāmānanda's view is dear to Me."

In this book the Lord's pilgrimage is described only briefly —

তীর্থযাত্রা-কথা এই কৈলুঁ সমাপন । সংক্ষেপে কহিলুঁ, বিস্তার না যায় বর্ণন ॥ ৩৫৮ ॥

tīrtha-yātrā-kathā ei kailuṁ samāpana the story of the pilgrimage this I have made the conclusion saṅkṣepe kahiluṁ, vistāra nā yāya varṇana in brief I have told it in full not can be described 358 Thus I conclude the story of the pilgrimage. I have told it in brief; it cannot be described in full.

Anubhāṣya.

In verse 74 of this chapter, instead of the reading “having had darśana of Bhairavī Devī at Śiyālī,” it should be “having had darśana of Śrī Bhū-varāha at Śiyālī.” Near Śiyālī and Chidambaram stands the famous temple of “Śrīmuṣṇam.” The Deity of Śrī Bhū-varāhadeva resides there. Near Śiyālī, in the South Arcot district, in the Chidambaram tāluk, it is “Śrī Bhū-varāhadeva” who resides, not “Bhairavī Devī.”

The author's longing to describe Caitanya's pastimes —

অনন্ত চৈতন্যলীলা কহিতে না জানি । লোভে লজ্জা খাঞা, তার করি টানাটানি ॥ ৩৫৯ ॥ ananta caitanya-līlā kahite nā jāni endless the pastimes of Caitanya to tell not I know how lobhe lajjā khāñā, tāra kari ṭānāṭāni out of greed shame swallowing at them I make tugging

359 I do not know how to describe Caitanya’s endless pastimes; yet out of greed I have cast off all shame and reach out for them.

Anubhāṣya.

Lajjā khāñā means casting off all shame; tāra means of Śrī Caitanya's pastimes.

360 Whoever hears the story of the Lord's pilgrimage obtains the treasure of deep love at Caitanya's feet.

Anubhāṣya.

The pañcopāsakas (worshipers of five deities) attribute worshipability to things manifest in the world and accessible to the knowledge of the material senses. But the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanyadeva do not call "the highest goal" (paramārtha) what is known by such sense-born (akṣaja) knowledge devoted to pleasing the senses. The Māyāvādī ahaṅgrahopāsakas, who worship themselves as God, cut off the hands, feet, and so on of the Supreme Reality and, deluded, call an indefinable "sky-flower" adhokṣaja. Sometimes by the word upāsya (object of worship) they mean a featureless state devoid of variety and "covered by darkness," or the wild dance (tāṇḍava) of inertness. Śrī Gaurasundara, on the basis of the teaching of inconceivable oneness and difference (acintya-bhedābheda) established by the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, showed the futility of the experience of such karmīs, jñānīs, and yogīs. In doing so He everywhere saw only Bhagavān — the Reality in which the name, form, qualities, and pastimes of the nondual Knowledge are revealed. The way non-Vaiṣṇavas see Śiva and various other gods, or Śākyasiṁha ("Dharma," "Saṅgha," and "Buddha"), is not Vaiṣṇava vision. To make this known Mahāprabhu saw only the adhokṣaja. External, sense-born (akṣaja) vision stands in complete opposition to seeing the adhokṣaja by the soul's own faculty (ātma-vṛtti). This is what the servants of Gaura must follow. The prākṛta-sahajiyās say that seeing Gopījana-vallabha in the hearts of the gopīs, Kṛṣṇa's associates, is "the same as" or "equal to" seeing various gods such as "Mahāmāyā," an instrument of enjoyment — and so fall into the pit of vivarta. Argumentative haitukas, unable to grasp the path of śruti, become "henotheists," or pañcopāsakas. They meditate on the five worshipable gods as one among the many manifestations of power in the external world, believe one of the five to be “Parameśvara,” and, though the others are of the same kind, rank them lower and disregard them. This seeing of symbols (pratīka) of the featureless Brahman throughout the universe is “pañcopāsanā.” Such vision belongs to idolatry (pauttalikatā-vāda)[31], that is, to the worship of images (pratimā-pūjā); later it turned into the Māyāvādīs' “nirviśeṣa-vāda.” Only from a famine of seeing Kṛṣṇa does a jīva become a non-Vaiṣṇava — a pañcopāsaka, and sometimes an atheist. But Mahāprabhu, as it is said, “sees the moving and the nonmoving but does not see their forms; everywhere the form of His worshipable Lord appears.”[30]

*Firm faith in Kṛṣṇa Caitanya and hari-saṅkīrtana with a heart free of cheating are the jīva's only highest dharma —*

চৈতন্যচরিত শুন শ্রদ্ধা-ভক্তি করি’ ।
মাৎসর্য্য ছাড়িয়া, মুখে বল ‘হরি’ ‘হরি’ ॥ ৩৬১ ॥

caitanya-carita śuna śraddhā-bhakti kari’ Caitanya’s deeds hear faith and devotion having mātsarya chāḍiyā, mukhe bala ‘hari’ ‘hari’ envy giving up with the mouth say ‘Hari’ ‘Hari’

361 Hear the deeds of Caitanya with faith and devotion; give up envy and say with your lips, “Hari! Hari!”

Apart from this, “there is no other path to the goal”[32] —

এই কলিকালে আর নাহি কোন ধর্ম্ম । বৈষ্ণব, বৈষ্ণবশাস্ত্র, এই কহে মর্ম্ম ॥ ৩৬২ ॥

ei kali-kāle āra nāhi kona dharma in this Kali age other there is not any dharma vaiṣṇava, vaiṣṇava-śāstra, ei kahe marma
the Vaiṣṇavas the Vaiṣṇava scriptures this declare the heart of the matter

362 In this age of Kali there is no other dharma: this is the heart of the matter, as the Vaiṣṇavas and the Vaiṣṇava scriptures declare.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

With natural compassion for other jīvas — that is, giving up altogether any hostility toward them (attempts, rooted in the urge to enjoy, to turn them away from Kṛṣṇa) — say with your lips, “Hari! Hari!” (Apart from this) in the age of Kali there is no other dharma: to serve pure Vaiṣṇavas and to read the scriptures of pure Vaiṣṇavas is the jīva's only dharma.

Thus ends the ninth chapter of the “Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.”

Anubhāṣya.

The essence carried by the Vaiṣṇavas and by all the Vaiṣṇava scriptures is this: when a jīva hears Śrī Caitanya's pastimes with faith and devotion, no envy (mātsarya) can remain in him. In the age of Kali, for the pure jīva free from envy, the only eternal dharma is to take shelter of Śrī Gaura's feet and chant harināma. The Vaiṣṇava is the pure devotee, the mahājana, or the experience of the wise (vidvad-anubhava); the Vaiṣṇava scripture is śruti, or the testimony of revelation (śabda-pramāṇa). To follow both is to stand on the path of śruti. For anyone who seeks the ultimate good there is no other means. (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 11.19.17) — “Śruti, direct perception, tradition, and inference are the four sources of knowledge (pramāṇas). Seeing that the pramāṇas have no stability and that they disagree, one becomes detached.”

The pastimes of Śrī Śrī Caitanyacandra have no equal and none higher; their depth, and the author's humility —

চৈতন্যচন্দ্রের লীলা — অগাধ, গম্ভীর । প্রবেশ করিতে নারি, — স্পর্শি রহি’ তীর ॥ ৩৬৩ ॥

caitanya-candrera līlā — agādha, gambhīra of Caitanya-candra the pastimes fathomless deep praveśa karite nāri, — sparśi rahi’ tīra entry to make I cannot I touch remaining on the shore

363 The pastimes of Caitanya-candra are fathomless and deep. I cannot enter them; I only touch them, standing on the shore.

Only by deepening in Caitanya does one attain love for Kṛṣṇa —

চৈতন্যচরিত শ্রদ্ধায় শুনে যেই জন । যতেক বিচারে, তত পায় প্রেমধন ॥ ৩৬৪ ॥

caitanya-carita śraddhāya śune yei jana Caitanya's deeds with faith hears who person yateka vicāre, tata pāya prema-dhana
as much as he reflects so much obtains the treasure of love

364 Whoever hears the deeds of Caitanya with faith gains the treasure of love: the more he reflects on them, the more he gains.

Anubhāṣya.

Thus ends the ninth chapter of the "Anubhāṣya."

Notes

1. The same verse as Ādi 4.2; translation as there. ↩
2. The verse explains the name "Rāma" by its derivation: from the root ram, "to delight" (ramante, "they delight"). ↩
3. Source as in the edition: a verse of the Mahābhārata (Udyoga-parva, 71.4) quoted by Śrīdhara Svāmī. ↩
4. The same verse as Ādi 2.67 and Ādi 5.79; translation as there. ↩
5. The same verse as 117. ↩
6. The same verse as Ādi 17.281; translation as there. ↩

7. The Gauḍīya Maṭha edition reads «অগ্নে», “in the fire”; another reading has «অগ্নি», “Agni” (made the māyā-Sītā vanish). The translation follows the edition; so too in verse 212, where the shadow Sītā enters the fire. ↩
8. The same verse as Ādi 7.94; translation as there. ↩
9. The same verse as Madhya 8.62; translation as there. ↩
10. The same verse as Madhya 8.63; translation as there. ↩
11. The same verse as Ādi 4.207; translation as there. ↩
12. The first line is the same as Madhya 1.120. ↩
13. Unclear expression (“śrī-rāmāyaṇa-guru-karaṇa-panthā”); the translation is tentative. ↩
14. The edition prints “৪ ৫ ক্রোশ” (the two digits only slightly spaced apart, as in a justified line); read as 45. The unit (krośa) is as in the edition. ↩
15. The edition prints “…শ্রেণ্যামারাধ্য…” (śreṇyām ārādhya); the word śreṇyām gives no clear sense here; from the context (the governor of Giṅgi is mentioned above), probably ceñjyām, “at Ceñji,” that is, Giṅgi; the translation is tentative. ↩
16. So in the edition (“ভাঃ ৪।৩১।৩২”). In the usual numbering of the Fourth Canto of the Bhāgavatam (Bhaktivedanta edition) chapter 31 has thirty-one verses, so there is no verse 4.31.32; the edition presumably divides the verses differently, or the reference is inexact. Not corrected. ↩
17. The edition numbers this section “২০২,” an obvious misprint for 102: it stands between sections 94–96 and 105 and in content belongs to verse 102. ↩
18. So in the edition (“আদি ৫ম পঃ ২২৭”). The subject here is Lakṣmī, captivated by Kṛṣṇa's beauty and engaged in austerities; this is treated in Ādi 5.223 in our numbering (where the Anubhāṣya also gives the story from the Padma Purāṇa). Ādi 5.227 in our numbering is the verse on Nityānanda's mercy. Not corrected. ↩
19. So in the edition (“মধ্য ৮ম পঃ ১৪৭”). The verse kasyānubhāvo 'sya na deva vidmahe… is Madhya 8.146 (both in our numbering and in the edition itself; the edition refers to 8.146 in its Anubhāṣya to verses 111–116). Madhya 8.147 is a different verse. Not corrected. ↩
20. So in the edition (checked against the scan). The verse “ete cāṁśa-kalāḥ puṁsaḥ” is cited at Ādi 2.67; “Madhya” seems to have been printed in place of “Ādi.” ↩
21. So in the edition (“বন-পর্ব্বে ৫৮ অঃ”). This verse (śrī-parvate mahādevo devyā saha mahā-dyutiḥ…) is in the pilgrimage section of the Vana-parva; according to an online text (the vulgate) it is Vana-parva 83.17—not checked against the printed edition. Not corrected. ↩

22. The edition prints the section number as “১১৮” (118); by content it belongs to verse 218. ↩
23. Rāmāyaṇa, Kiṣkindhā-kāṇḍa. ↩
24. Literally, “Tāmraparṇī is situated on the left bank of the Tinnevelly river.” ↩
25. So in the edition (“শ্রুত”); perhaps śruti is meant. ↩
26. Unclear in the scan: one digit of the year is blotted (“১:৬৩”); probably 1763, the same as for the next ācārya. ↩
27. The edition reads “মধ্য ২২ পঃ ১০৫”; in Vṛndāvana Candra Dāsa's translation this verse is Madhya 22.104. ↩
28. The edition's cross-reference reads “২৪৭ সংখ্যার অনুভাষ্য” (the Anubhāṣya to number 247). The succession list of the Uttararāḍhī Maṭha is in the Anubhāṣya to verse 245 (section 245–247; see above). ↩
29. So in the edition (“রঘুবীর্য্যতীর্থ”); in the succession list and in the subheading to verse 254, “Raghuvarya.” ↩
30. Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya 8.273 (numbering of Vṛndāvana Candra Dāsa's translation); the edition quotes it with a slight variant. ↩
31. “Idolatry” (pauttalika-vāda) here is a term of Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura: it refers to the worship of worldly symbols of the featureless Brahman (pañcopāsanā), not to the worship of the Deity (arcā-vigraha), who is not an “image.” ↩
32. Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 3.8. ↩
