“Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta”

Madhya-līlā

Chapter 21

The Discourse on Sambandha-tattva: A Description of Śrī Kṛṣṇa’s Majesty and Sweetness

(English translation from the Bengali, following the Gauḍīya Maṭha edition and the Anubhāṣya, 2026)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya

Summary. In this chapter the Lord described the truth of Kṛṣṇaloka, the truth of Paravyoma, the truth of the Causal Waters and the truth of the māyic universes (brahmāṇḍas), and then told of one of Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes in Dvārakā — how He humbled Brahmā’s pride. After that the author, presenting them as Mahāprabhu’s words, wrote several sweet verses that reveal the beauty of Kṛṣṇa’s form. With this the explanation of sambandha-tattva comes to an end.

The author’s maṅgalācaraṇa as he describes the sweetness and majesty of Gaura-Kṛṣṇa —

অগত্যেকগতিং নত্বা হীনার্থাধিকসাধকম্ ।

of sweetness and majesty a drop

1 I bow to Śrī Caitanya, the only refuge of those who have no other refuge, who gives the highest treasure to those bereft of every good. Now I write of a drop of His sweetness and majesty.[1]

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Bowing to Śrī Caitanya — the refuge of those who have no refuge, the generous giver of wealth to the destitute, their benefactor — I describe a drop of His sweetness and majesty.

Anubhāṣya.
agaty-eka-gatiṁ (the sole support of those who have no refuge) hīnārthādhika-sādhakam (who abundantly fulfils the aims of the destitute, that is, of those poor in love for Kṛṣṇa) śrī-caitanyaṁ natvā (having bowed down) asya (of the Lord, Caitanyadeva) mādhuryaiśvarya-śīkaram (a drop of the majesty that lies within sweetness — or a drop of sweetness and majesty) likhāmi.

2 Glory, glory to Śrī Caitanya! Glory to Nityānanda! Glory to Advaitacandra! Glory to all the devotees of Gaura![2]

In Paravyoma are the countless Vaikuṇṭha abodes of all the forms of Viṣṇu —

সর্ব্বস্বরূপের ধাম — পরব্যোম-ধামে ।

of all the forms the abode of Paravyoma in the realm pṛthak pṛthak vaikuṇṭha, nāhika gaṇane separate separate Vaikuṇṭhas there is no counting

3 "The abode of all the Lord's forms is the realm of Paravyoma. There each form has its own Vaikuṇṭha, and they are beyond counting.

শত, সহস্র, অযুত, লক্ষ, কোটি-যোজন ।

śata, sahasra, ayuta, lakṣa, koṭi-yojana
a hundred a thousand ten thousand a hundred thousand ten million yojanas eka eka vaikuṇṭhera vistāra varṇana each single Vaikuṇṭha's extent is described

4 The extent of each Vaikuṇṭha is described in hundreds, thousands, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands and tens of millions of yojanas.

Anubhāṣya.

Vaikuṇṭha has no measure, as the māyic universes have. Vaikuṇṭha extends a hundred, a thousand, ten thousand, a hundred thousand, ten million — that is, countless — yojanas. Where there is no limitation (kuṇṭha-dharma) tied to any kind of measure, that is "Vaikuṇṭha."

In Paravyoma the container and the contained, the abode and the Lord's form, are one; the form of Bhagavān is a spiritual play of pure goodness (śuddha-sattva) —

সব বৈকুণ্ঠ — ব্যাপক, আনন্দ-চিন্ময় । পারিষদ-ষড়ৈশ্বর্য্য-পূর্ণ সব হয় ॥ ৫ ॥

saba vaikuṇṭha — vyāpaka, ānanda-cinmaya all Vaikuṇṭhas all-pervading blissful spiritual pāriṣada-ṣaḍaiśvarya-pūrṇa saba haya with associates with the six opulences full all are

5 All the Vaikuṇṭhas are all-pervading, made of bliss and spirit, and all are full of associates and of the six opulences.

অনন্ত বৈকুণ্ঠ এক এক দেশে যার । সেই পরব্যোমের কেবা গণয়ে বিস্তার ॥ ৬ ॥

ananta vaikuṇṭha eka eka deśe yāra endless Vaikuṇṭhas in each single part of which sei paravyomera kebā gaṇaye vistāra of that Paravyoma who can count the expanse

6 Who can measure the expanse of that Paravyoma, in each part of which lie endless Vaikuṇṭhas?

Goloka is the whorl (karṇikā) of Paravyoma, which is like a thousand-petalled lotus —

অনন্ত বৈকুণ্ঠ-পরব্যোম যার দলশ্রেণী । সর্ব্বোপরি কৃষ্ণলোক 'কর্ণিকার' গণি ॥ ৭ ॥

ananta vaikuṇṭha-paravyoma yāra dala-śreṇī endless Vaikuṇṭhas of Paravyoma whose petals rows sarvopari kṛṣṇaloka 'karṇikāra' gaṇi above all Kṛṣṇaloka the whorl I count

7 It is a lotus whose rows of petals are the endless Vaikuṇṭhas of Paravyoma; above them all, Kṛṣṇaloka is its whorl (karṇikā).

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The spiritual world is like a lotus. The highest (central) part of that lotus is Kṛṣṇaloka, its whorl (karṇikā); and around it on all four sides, like rows of petals, the countless Vaikuṇṭhas shine in Paravyoma.

Viṣṇu and His abode are both adhokṣaja, and so beyond the reach even of Brahmā and others —

এইমত ষড়ৈশ্বর্য্য, স্থান, অবতার । ব্রহ্মা, শিব অন্ত না পায় — জীব কোন্ ছার ॥ ৮ ॥

ei mata ṣaḍ-aiśvarya, sthāna, avatāra in this way the six opulences the abodes the avatāras brahmā, śiva anta nā pāya — jīva kon chāra
Brahmā Śiva the end do not find the jīva what a trifle

8 Such are His six opulences, His abodes and His avatāras. Even Brahmā and Śiva cannot find their end — what then of the insignificant jīva?

Anubhāṣya.
The places of Vaikuṇṭha, full of the six opulences, and the limits of the avatāras endowed with the six opulences are beyond the reach even of Brahmā, Śiva and the other lords of the māyic realm. What then to speak of the jīva, who is subject to māyā!

The transcendental Viṣṇu is adhokṣaja: the mind cannot grasp Him — (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 10.14.21)[14] —

কো বেত্তি ভূমন্ ভগবন্ পরাত্মন্ যোগেশ্বরোতীর্ভবতস্ত্রিলোক্যাম্ ।

expanding You play Yogamāyā

9 “O Bhūman, O Bhagavān, O Supreme Soul, O Lord of yoga! Who in the three worlds can know Your pastimes — where, how, how many, or when You play, spreading forth Your Yogamāyā?” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.14.21)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

“O Bhūman! O Bhagavān! O Supreme Soul! O Lord of yoga! Who can know where in these three worlds Your pastimes take place, what they are like, and when You, spreading out Yogamāyā, perform them?”

Anubhāṣya.

Brahmā stole the calves, and as a result Śrī Kṛṣṇa crushed his pride. Then Brahmā, understanding that Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the Supreme Lord, offers Him praise in the following two verses:

bhūman (Virāṭ) bhagavan, parātman, yogeśvara, bhavataḥ ūtīḥ (pastimes) kva vā, kathaṁ vā, kadā vā, kati vā yoga-māyāṁ vistārayan krīḍasi — iti trilokyāṁ kaḥ vetti? (No one knows; and so the glory of Your Yogamāyā is inconceivable — such is the sense.)

in this way Kṛṣṇa’s divine virtues are endless

10 So endless are Kṛṣṇa’s divine virtues that even Brahmā, Śiva, Sanaka and the other sages cannot find their end.

Even the most skilful counter in the universe is unable to measure Viṣṇu’s qualities — (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 10.14.7) — in time by whom or have been counted the most skilled bhū-pāṁśavaḥ khe mihikā dyu-bhāsaḥ of the earth the particles in the sky the snowflakes of the luminaries the rays

11 "In the course of time the most skilled may have counted the particles of the earth, the snowflakes in the sky and the rays of the luminaries. But who among them could count the qualities of You, the Lord of all qualities, who have descended for the good of the world?" (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.14.7)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

In time learned men have counted the specks of dust on the earth, the snowflakes in the sky, the stars and so on. But which of them can count Your qualities — You who have descended for the good of the world, You whose very form is endless qualities?

Anubhāṣya.

yaiḥ su-kalpaiḥ (by the most skilful people, over many births) vā (supposing) kālena bhū-pāṁśavaḥ (the atoms of the earth), khe (in the sky) mihikāḥ (the snowflakes), dyu-bhāsaḥ (the atoms of the rays of the luminaries in the heavens) api vimitāḥ (have been counted one by one) — of them ke (which people) asya (of the universe) hitāvatīrṇasya (who appears for its good, or who has descended to maintain it by revealing many qualities) guṇātmanaḥ (the master of the three guṇas) te (Your) guṇān api (in turn) vimātum (to count — "there are so many") īśire (were able? — to say nothing of telling of each one in particular: such is the sense). See Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 2.7.40 and 11.4.2.

Even Śeṣa Himself, singing Kṛṣṇa's qualities, finds no end to them —

ব্রহ্মাদি রহু — সহস্রবদনে 'অনন্ত' ৷ নিরন্তর গায় মুখে, না পায় গুণের অন্ত ॥ ১২ ॥

brahmādi rahu — sahasra-vadane 'ananta' Brahmā and the others leave aside with a thousand mouths Ananta nirantara gāya mukhe, nā pāya guṇera anta ceaselessly sings with His mouths does not find of the qualities the end

12 Leave aside Brahmā and the others: Ananta sings ceaselessly with His thousand mouths, yet He finds no end to Kṛṣṇa's qualities.

Anubhāṣya.

What to speak of four-faced Brahmā or five-faced Śiva! Ananta-deva sings ceaselessly with a thousand mouths, yet even He does not reach the limit of Kṛṣṇa's qualities. There is another reading: "What to speak of Brahmā and the rest — the thousand-mouthed Ananta sings ceaselessly with His mouths, yet cannot count them."

The evidence of scripture — (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 2.7.41) —

নান্তং বিদাম্যহমমী মুনয়োঽগ্রজাস্তে মায়াবলস্য পুরুষস্য কুতোঽপরে যে ৷ গায়ন্ গুণান্ দশশতানন আদিদেবঃ

māyā-balasya puruṣasya kuto 'pare ye of the Master of māyā's power of the Person how much less others who gāyan guṇān daśa-śatānana ādi-devaḥ singing the qualities with ten hundred mouths the original Lord śeṣo 'dhunāpi samavasyati nāsya pāram
Śeṣa even now reaches not His far shore

13 "Neither I nor these sages, your elder brothers, know the end of the Supreme Person, the Master of the power of māyā — how then could others? Even Śeṣa, the original Lord, who sings His qualities with a thousand mouths, has not reached their far shore to this day." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 2.7.41)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

I, Brahmā, and the sages, your elder brothers — even we cannot know the limit of the Puruṣa, the Lord of māyā. Who else, then, will know it? The thousand-faced Ananta-deva sings His qualities on and on, yet even today He has not reached their end.

Anubhāṣya.

Brahmā tells his disciple Nārada of the deeds, purposes and opulences of Viṣṇu's līlā-avatāras, and then speaks of His unknowable, immeasurable glory of energies:

puruṣasya (of Bhagavān) viṣṇoḥ māyā-balasya (of the glory of His māyā) antam aham (I, Brahmā) na vidāmi (do not know; likewise) te (your) agra-jāḥ (elder brothers) amī munayaḥ (Sanaka and the others) do not know; daśa-śatānanaḥ (thousand-mouthed) ādi-devaḥ śeṣaḥ (Ananta, who holds up the earth) api asya (of Bhagavān) guṇān gāyan (glorifying) adhunā (now) api pāram (the limit) na samavasyati (does not ascertain, that is, does not reach; therefore) ye apare (other people — they) kutaḥ? (how could they know? — such is the sense).

Even for Kṛṣṇa Himself Kṛṣṇa's qualities are immeasurable —

তেঁহো রহু — সর্ব্বজ্ঞ-শিরোমণি শ্রীকৃষ্ণ । নিজ-গুণের অন্ত না পাঞা হয়েন সতৃষ্ণ ॥ ১৪ ॥

teṁho rahu — sarvajña-śiromaṇi śrī-kṛṣṇa
He leave aside of the omniscient the crest-jewel Śrī Kṛṣṇa nija-guṇera anta nā pāñā hayena satṛṣṇa of His own qualities the end not finding becomes full of longing

14 Leave Him aside: Śrī Kṛṣṇa Himself, the crest-jewel of the omniscient, cannot find the end of His own qualities, and so He is filled with longing.

Anubhāṣya.

Teṅho rahu: what to speak of Ananta-deva! Śrī Kṛṣṇa Himself does not reach the limit of His own qualities, and so He is full of longing.

Having rejected "not this" and described the featureless, the śrutis culminate in describing the form full of attributes — (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 10.87.41) —

দ্যুপতয় এব তে ন যযুরন্তমনন্ততয়া

dyu-pataya eva te na yayur antam anantatayā the lords of heaven even Your not reached the end because of endlessness tvam api yad-antarāṇḍa-nicayā nanu sāvaraṇāḥ
You even since within whom of universes the multitudes indeed with their coverings kha iva rajāṁsi vānti vayasā saha yac chrutayas in the sky like specks of dust revolve with time together since the śrutis tvayi hi phalanty atan-nirasanena bhavan-nidhanāḥ in You indeed bear fruit by rejecting what is not You having their end in You

15 "Because You are endless, even the lords of heaven have not reached Your end — nor do You Yourself, for within You multitudes of universes, each in its coverings, revolve together with time like specks of dust in the sky. Therefore the śrutis, rejecting all that is not You, bear their fruit and find their end in You." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.87.41)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

You are endless, and so those gods did not find Your limit. You Yourself do not find the limit of Your qualities. The universes in their coverings revolve along with time, like specks of dust in the sky. Therefore the śrutis, setting out in search of You, say of everything they point to, "This is not You." In this way everything comes to its conclusion in You. Having made sure of this, they conclude that You alone are the support of all.

Anubhāṣya.

In Janaloka, at the Brahma-satra sacrifice, before sages eager to hear, the brahmarṣi Sanandana, one of the four Kumāras, recited this praise of Bhagavān offered by the śrutis. Later the original sage Nārāyaṇa recounted the same praise to the devarṣi Nārada.

bhagavan, dyu-patayaḥ (the lords of heaven, the lords of the worlds — Brahmā and others) eva (even) te (Your) anantatayā (because You are without end) antam (the limit of Your qualities) na yayuḥ (did not reach; that is, whatever has an end is not You); (what to speak of the lords of heaven,) yat (since) tvam api (You Yourself do not reach Your own limit, being endless); nanu (oh!) yat (of You) antarā (within) sāvaraṇāḥ (in seven coverings, each ten times the one before) aṇḍa-nicayāḥ (the multitudes of universes) vayasā (by the wheel of time) khe (in the sky) rajāṁsi iva saha (all at once, not in turn) vānti (revolve); yat (because) śrutayaḥ atan-nirasanena (by ceaselessly rejecting matter) bhavan-nidhanāḥ (those whose end, whose conclusion, is in You) tvayi (in You, who are full of distinct spiritual pastimes) hi phalanti (culminate).

The description of Kṛṣṇa's wondrous pastime of herding the cows in Vraja —

সেহ রহু — ব্রজে যবে কৃষ্ণ অবতার । তাঁর চরিত্র বিচারিতে মন না পায় পার ॥ ১৬ ॥

seha rahu — vraje yabe kṛṣṇa avatāra that too leave aside in Vraja when Kṛṣṇa descended tāṁra caritra vicārite mana nā pāya pāra
His deeds in pondering the mind does not find the shore

16 Leave that aside as well. Ponder as one may the deeds of Kṛṣṇa when He descended in Vraja, the mind finds no end to them.

Because of the theft of the calves, Kṛṣṇa manifests a spiritual pastime and destroys Brahmā's pride —

প্রাকৃতাপ্রাকৃত সৃষ্টি কৈলা একক্ষণে । অশেষ-বৈকুণ্ঠজাণ্ড স্বস্বনাথ-সনে ॥ ১৭ ॥

prākṛtāprākṛta sṛṣṭi kailā eka-kṣaṇe material and transcendental creation He made in a single moment aśeṣa-vaikuṇṭhajāṇḍa sva-sva-nātha-sane countless Vaikuṇṭhas and universes with their own lords

17 In a single moment He made both the material and the transcendental creation — countless Vaikuṇṭhas and universes, each with its own lord.

Anubhāṣya.
In a single moment Kṛṣṇa created countless transcendental Vaikuṇṭhas with the lords of Paravyoma, and countless material universes with many Brahmās and others.

The supreme wonder of that pastime —

এমত অন্যত্র নাহি শুনিয়ে অদ্ভুত । যাহার শ্রবণে চিত্ত হয় অবধূত ॥ ১৮ ॥

e-mata anyatra nāhi śuniye adbhuta such elsewhere not one hears a wonder yāhāra śravaṇe citta haya avadhūta of which on hearing the heart becomes overwhelmed

18 Nowhere else does one hear of such a wonder. The mere hearing of it overwhelms the heart.

Anubhāṣya.
Avadhūta: shaken, stirred, overflowing, overwhelmed, overcome.

There is another reading: “hearing which, the mind is washed of its impurity.”

Kṛṣṇa manifests countless cows and calves —

‘কৃষ্ণবৎসৈরসংখ্যাতৈঃ’ — শুকদেব-বাণী ।
কৃষ্ণ-সঙ্গে কত গোপ — সংখ্যা নাহি জানি ॥ ১৯ ॥

‘kṛṣṇa-vatsair asaṁkhyātaiḥ’ — śukadeva-vāṇī with Kṛṣṇa’s calves countless Śukadeva’s words kṛṣṇa-saṅge kata gopa — saṁkhyā nāhi jāni with Kṛṣṇa how many cowherd boys their number not I know

19 “With Kṛṣṇa’s countless calves” — so says Śukadeva; and how many cowherd boys were with Kṛṣṇa, I do not know.

Anubhāṣya.
The first line of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 10.12.3.

এক এক গোপ করে যে বৎস চারণ । কোটি, অর্ব্বুদ, শঙ্খ, পদ্ম, তাহার গণন ॥ ২০ ॥

eka eka gopa kare ye vatsa cāraṇa
each single cowherd boy does which calves herding koṭi, arbuda, śaṅkha, padma, tāhāra gaṇana ten million a hundred million a trillion ten trillion of them the count

20 The calves that each cowherd boy herded were counted in koṭis, arbudas, śaṅkhas and padmas — tens of millions, hundreds of millions, trillions, tens of trillions.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
When Kṛṣṇa descended, Brahmā, wishing to test His glory, stole the calves and the cowherd boys. Then Kṛṣṇa, by His inconceivable power, manifested everything, both material and transcendental. By manifesting spiritual cows, cowherd boys and countless Vaikuṇṭha realities, He performed a transcendental creation. By creating countless universes, each with its own Brahmā, He performed a material creation. Whoever hears this wondrous account has the impurity of the mind washed away. The words "countless calves of Kṛṣṇa" mean that Kṛṣṇa's calves and cowherd boys appeared in countless forms.

Anubhāṣya.
"One, ten, a hundred, a thousand, ayuta, lakṣa, niyuta, koṭi, arbuda, vṛnda, kharva, nikharva, śaṅkha, padma, sāgara, antya, madhya and parārdha — each in turn ten times the one before."

বেত্র, বেণু, দল, শৃঙ্গ, বস্ত্র, অলঙ্কার । গোপগণের যত তায় নাহি লেখা-পার ॥ ২১ ॥

vetra, veṇu, dala, śṛṅga, vastra, alaṅkāra canes flutes leaves horns garments ornaments gopa-gaṇera yata tāya nāhi lekhā-pāra of the cowherd boys as many as of that there is no of writing end

21 Canes, flutes, leaves, horns, garments and ornaments — however many the cowherd boys had, there is no end to writing of them.

The countless lords of Vaikuṇṭha and lords of universes manifested by Kṛṣṇa praise Kṛṣṇa —

সবে হৈলা চতুর্ভুজ বৈকুণ্ঠের পতি ।
পৃথক্ পৃথক্ ব্রহ্মাণ্ডের ব্রহ্মা করে স্তুতি ॥ ২২ ॥

sabe hailā caturbhuja vaikuṇṭhera pati
all became four-armed of Vaikuṇṭha lords pṛthak pṛthak brahmāṇḍera brahmā kare stuti of separate separate universes the Brahmās offer praise

22 All of them became four-armed lords of Vaikuṇṭha, and the Brahmās of separate universes offered them praise.

The pastime manifests from Kṛṣṇa and is withdrawn into Kṛṣṇa Himself —

এক কৃষ্ণদেহ হৈতে সবার প্রকাশে । ক্ষণেকে সবাই সেই সেই শরীরে প্রবেশে ॥ ২৩ ॥

eka kṛṣṇa-deha haite sabāra prakāśe from one Kṛṣṇa's body of all the manifestation kṣaṇeke sabāi sei sei śarīre praveśe in a moment all into that same body enter

23 All of them were manifested from Kṛṣṇa's one body, and in a moment they all entered that same body again.

Brahmā is astonished and swoons; on coming to, by Kṛṣṇa's mercy he understands Kṛṣṇa's majesty —

ইহা দেখি' ব্রহ্মা হৈলা মোহিত, বিস্মিত । স্তুতি করি' সেই পাছে করিলা নিশ্চিত ॥ ২৪ ॥

ihā dekhi' brahmā hailā mohita, vismita this seeing Brahmā became bewildered astonished stuti kari' sei pāche karilā niścita praise having offered he afterwards made a conclusion

24 Seeing this, Brahmā was bewildered and astonished. After offering praise, he came to this conclusion:

Brahmā confesses that he cannot ascertain the glory of Kṛṣṇa, who is adhokṣaja —

"যে কহে, — 'কৃষ্ণের বৈভব মুঞি সব জানোঁ' । সে জানুক, — কায়মনে মুঞি এই মানোঁ ॥ ২৫ ॥

ye kahe, — kṛṣṇera vaibhava muñi saba jānoṁ who says Kṛṣṇa's glory I all know se jānuka, — kāya-mane muñi ei mānoṁ he let him know with body and mind I this accept

25 'If someone says, "I know all of Kṛṣṇa's glory," let him know it. As for me, with body and mind I accept this:

এই যে তোমার অনন্ত বৈভবামৃতসিন্ধু । মোর বাঙ্মানসের গম্য নহে এক বিন্দু ॥ ২৬ ॥

ei ye tomāra ananta vaibhavāmṛta-sindhu
this very Your endless of glory of nectar ocean mora vāṅ-mānasera gamya nahe eka bindu my of speech and mind within reach is not one drop

26 Of this endless nectar ocean of Your glory not a single drop lies within reach of my speech and mind.'

(Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 10.14.38) —

জানন্ত এব জানন্তু কিং বহূক্ত্যা ন মে প্রভো ।

27 "Let those who know go on knowing. What use is much talk? O Lord, Your glory is beyond the reach of my mind, body and speech." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.14.38)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
"Let those who say, 'We know the truth about Kṛṣṇa,' know it; I do not wish to say much. O Lord, I say only this: Your glories lie beyond the reach of my mind, my body and my speech."

Anubhāṣya.
Brahmā stole the calves, and as a result Śrī Kṛṣṇa crushed his pride. Then Brahmā glorifies Kṛṣṇa's affection for His devotees and His being beyond the senses (adhokṣajatva):

prabho, jānantaḥ (the learned, who fancy that they know Your inconceivable, endless qualities) eva jānantu; bahūktyā (by much talk) kim? (a flood of words bears no fruit — such is the sense); tava vaibhavam me (to me, Brahmā) — manasaḥ vapuṣaḥ vācaḥ (to body, mind and speech) — na gocaraḥ (is not accessible: they have no right even to touch it).

Śrī Vṛndāvana-dhāma is non-different from Kṛṣṇa —

28 Leave aside Kṛṣṇa's own glory — who can know it? Behold instead the wondrous majesty of the land of Vṛndāvana.

In one part of Vṛndāvana are the countless millions of Vaikuṇṭhas of Paravyoma —

29 Vṛndāvana measures sixteen krośas, as the scriptures reveal; yet in a single part of it multitudes of Vaikuṇṭhas and universes float.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
In Vraja-maṇḍala there are twelve forests, which together cover eighty-four krośas. Among them the forest called Vṛndāvana extends for 16 krośas, from the border of the present town of Vṛndāvana to Nandagrāma and Vṛṣabhānupura.

Anubhāṣya.
Scripture says that Vṛndāvana extends for "sixteen krośas." In just one part of it all the Vaikuṇṭhas and the vast universes are manifest.

30 Kṛṣṇa's opulence is boundless, beyond counting. I have only pointed towards it, as one shows the moon by pointing to a branch (śākhā-candra-nyāya)."

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Śākhā-candra-nyāya, the maxim of the moon on the branch: just as one points out the moon by showing a branch of a tree, so by showing one part of some truth one can give a little knowledge of the whole. This maxim is called śākhā-candra-nyāya.

Brahmā[15] is overwhelmed as he describes Kṛṣṇa's majesty, which lies beyond speech and mind —

The age-old guardians of the worlds bring Him tribute and praise His footstool with the tips of their crowns." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 3.2.21)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
He Himself is the Lord of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva, and so no one is equal to Him or above Him. By the wealth of His own kingdom (svārājya-lakṣmī) He has every desire fulfilled. The age-old guardians of the worlds come to bring Him tribute; praising His footstool, they bow the crowns that shine on their heads, and the crowns ring out.

Anubhāṣya.
For the explanation and the kārikās on this verse, see the Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta, Pūrva-khaṇḍa, 302–323: there, refuting the opponent's view (pūrva-pakṣa) that "Śrī Kṛṣṇa is a vilāsa of Nārāyaṇa," the author sets out the conclusion (uttara-pakṣa).

After Śrī Kṛṣṇa's departure, Śrīla Uddhava, stricken with the grief of separation from Him, tells Śrī Vidura of Kṛṣṇa's childhood pastimes and His supreme majesty:

svayam (Bhagavān) tu asāmyātiśayaḥ (He who has no equal and none higher — asamordhva), try-adhīśaḥ (the Lord and Master: of the abodes Goloka, Paravyoma and Devī-dhāma; or of the abodes Gokula, Mathurā and Dvārakā; or of the three creations — the causal, the aggregate [Hiraṇyagarbha] and the individual [Virāṭ]; or of Viṣṇu, Brahmā and Śiva, the presiding lords of goodness, passion and ignorance; or of the energies — cit, jīva and māyā; or of the three vyāhṛtis — bhūḥ, bhuvaḥ and svaḥ; or of the three worlds — heaven, earth and the netherworld), svārājya-lakṣmy-āpta-samasta-kāmaḥ (who has gained every enjoyment simply by the wealth of His own supreme nature of spirit and bliss) balim̐ (tribute, or an offering) haradbhiḥ (bringing) cira-loka-pālaiḥ (by the age-old guardians of the worlds — Brahmā, Rudra and others) kirīṭa-koṭīḍita-pāda-pīṭhaḥ (He whose footstool, the throne of His feet, is praised, that is, saluted, by the tips of crowns; this connects with the next verse: "that He reported to Ugrasena pains us").

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
On the far bank of that Virajā lies Paravyoma — immortal, eternal, everlasting, endless, the supreme abode, made up of three quarters (tripād-bhūta). The meaning is this: Paravyoma is the spiritual world, and so the tripād-vibhūti — free from sorrow and fear, immortal — is eternally present in it. All the workings of māyā taken together are only Kṛṣṇa's ekapād-vibhūti.

māyika vibhūti — eka-pāda abhidhāna of māyā the opulence one quarter is called

55 The realm where His spiritual potency displays its opulence is called tripād-aiśvarya, the opulence of three quarters; the opulence of māyā is called ekapāda, one quarter.

Anubhāṣya.
Hari's abode Paravyoma and Goloka form the transcendental abode endowed with the opulences of the cit-śakti; it is called "tripād-aiśvarya." Devī-dhāma, endowed with māyic opulence, is known by the name "ekapād."

The tripād-vibhūti lies beyond māyā, and the ekapād-vibhūti is māyic — (Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta 1.563) —

is declared as one quarter because

56 "That realm is called tripād-bhūta, 'consisting of three quarters', because it is the abode of the opulence of three quarters; all the opulence of māyā is declared to be one quarter." (Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta, 1.563)[7]

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

That abode is the abode of the tripād-vibhūti, and so it is called tripād-bhūta; and all māyic opulence is only one quarter.

Anubhāṣya.

tat padam tri-pād-vibhūteḥ dhāmatvāt tri-pād-bhūtam hi (is called precisely "consisting of three quarters"), yataḥ sarvā māyikī vibhūtiḥ pādātmikā (one quarter) proktā (is said to be).

58 All the Brahmās and Rudras of the endless universes are meant by the words 'the age-old guardians of the worlds' (cira-loka-pāla).

Anubhāṣya.

The cira-loka-pālas are Brahmā, Rudra and the others who hold office in the universe and carry out long-lasting duties. The word lokapāla usually means the eight guardians of the directions: Indra, Agni, Yama, Varuṇa, Nairṛti, Vāyu, Kuvera and Śiva.

Four-faced Brahmā experienced the unearthly majesty of Kṛṣṇa and of Dvārakā-dhāma. Brahmās and Rudras with ten, a hundred, a thousand, ten thousand, a hundred thousand and ten million faces gathered in one place, and four-faced Brahmā and Kṛṣṇa saw this assembly. Yet by Kṛṣṇa's will the great Brahmās and great Śivas who had come did not see one another. Or else the crowd of Brahmās and Śivas was so dense that they had no chance at all to see one another and converse, and no one had the leisure even to show another respect or welcome him.

Anubhāṣya.
If a universe is taken to be a hundred koṭi yojanas, half of it is fifty koṭi yojanas. Manu writes: “He Himself, by His meditation, divided that egg into two.”[19] The Sūrya-siddhānta (12.90) says: “18,712,080,864,000,000[20] — such is the circumference that encircles the hemispheres of the universe; within it the sun’s rays spread on all sides.” The Siddhānta-śiromaṇi, in the Graha-gaṇita, in the chapter Madhyamādhikāra, in the section on the order of the orbits, and likewise in the Golādhyāya, in the section Bhuvana-kośa, verse 67, says: “Those versed in jyotiṣa say that this orbit of the sky is 1,871,206,920 koṭi yojanas. Some Purāṇic sages have said that it girds the rim where the halves of the bowl of the universe meet, and others have called it the mountain that is both visible and invisible.” The orbit of the sky (kha-kakṣā) is 18,712,069,200,000,000 yojanas; some say it is the measure of the circumference where the two halves of the bowl of the universe meet.

90 The word tryadhīśvara ('Lord of the three') has yet another, hidden meaning: by the word tri ('three') Kṛṣṇa's three abodes are meant.

Kṛṣṇa's three abodes —

91 Gokula, which is called Goloka, Mathurā and Dvārāvatī (Dvārakā): in these three abodes Kṛṣṇa naturally and eternally resides.

Anubhāṣya.
In Goloka there are three chambers (prakoṣṭhas): (1) Gokula, (2) Mathurā, (3) Dvārakā. Just as Kṛṣṇa's pastimes have three chambers, so Gaura's pastimes too have three intimate chambers full of complete majesty: (1) Navadvīpa-maṇḍala, (2) Śrī Kṣetra-maṇḍala (South India?) and (3) Vraja-maṇḍala.

Kṛṣṇa Himself is the emperor of the three abodes —

96 Kṛṣṇa is eternally present with His own spiritual potency (cit-śakti), and the wealth of that potency is called the 'six opulences' (ṣaḍaiśvarya).

Anubhāṣya.
Kṛṣṇa eternally abides together with His own cit-śakti (spiritual potency), the svārājya-lakṣmī. The wealth of the Lord's cit-śakti is what is called the "six opulences" (ṣaḍ-aiśvarya). The cit-śakti is the very own potency of Kṛṣṇa, the form who possesses the cit-śakti, and she is His maidservant.

therefore in the Vedas they call (Him) Bhagavān Himself

97 That Svārājya-lakṣmī, the wealth of His own realm, keeps Him eternally fulfilled in every desire, and therefore the Vedas call Him 'Bhagavān Himself'.

Kṛṣṇa's majesty is a fathomless ocean of nectar —

কৃষ্ণের ঐশ্বর্য্য — অপার অমৃতের সিন্ধু ।
অবগাহিতে নারি' তার ছুইলুঁ এক বিন্দু ॥ ৯৮ ॥

98 Kṛṣṇa's majesty is a boundless ocean of nectar. Unable to plunge into it, I have touched but a single drop."

Setting out to describe the charm of His majesty, the Lord felt the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's form revealed (sphūrti) within His heart —

ঐশ্বর্য্য কহিতে প্রভুর কৃষ্ণস্ফূর্ত্তি হৈল । মাধুর্য্যে মজিল মন, এক শ্লোক পড়িল ॥ ৯৯ ॥

aiśvarya kahite prabhura kṛṣṇa-sphūrti haila majesty while speaking of in the Lord the manifestation of Kṛṣṇa there was mādhurye majila mana, eka śloka paḍila
in sweetness sank the mind one verse He recited

99 As the Lord spoke of majesty, Kṛṣṇa was revealed within His heart. His mind sank into sweetness, and He recited a verse.

Kṛṣṇa Himself is enchanted by the transcendent sweetness of pastimes befitting His pastimes in human form —

যন্মর্ত্ত্যলীলৌপয়িকং স্বযোগ-মায়াবলং দর্শয়তা গৃহীতম্ ।
বিস্মাপনং স্বস্য চ সৌভগর্দ্ধেঃ পরং পদং ভূষণভূষণাঙ্গম্ ॥ ১০০ ॥

yan martya-līlaupayikaṁ sva-yoga-which suited to pastimes among mortals His own yogamāyā-balaṁ darśayatā gṛhītam
-māyā's power by Him displaying was assumed vismāpanaṁ svasya ca saubhagardheḥ astonishing to Himself even of the wealth of fortune paraṁ padaṁ bhūṣaṇa-bhūṣaṇāṅgam
the supreme abode of ornaments the ornament whose limbs

100 "To display the power of His own Yogamāyā, He assumed a form suited to His pastimes among mortals — a form that astonished even Him, the supreme abode of all good fortune, whose limbs are the ornament of ornaments." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 3.2.12)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
That form of Śrī Kṛṣṇa was accepted in order to display the strength of His own cit-śakti (spiritual potency), and it is suited to pastimes in the world of mortals. It astonishes even Kṛṣṇa Himself. It is the highest abode (the culmination) of all good fortune and prosperity, and it can adorn every ornament.

Anubhāṣya.
After the departure of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Śrīla Uddhava, stricken with grief in separation from Him, glorifies before Śrī Vidura the matchless sweetness of His beauty:

yat (that form) martya-līlaupayikaṁ (suited to pastimes in the world of mortals, humanlike) sva-yoga-māyā-balaṁ (the might of His own cit-śakti) darśayatā (by Him who displays it — by Bhagavān Himself) gṛhītam (accepted), svasya ca (even to Himself) vismāpanaṁ (astonishing), saubhagardheḥ (of the abundance of good fortune) paraṁ padaṁ (the highest limit, the foundation), bhūṣaṇa-bhūṣaṇāṅgam (the form whose limbs are the ornaments of ornaments; "having shown this His own form, He left the world" — so it is construed with the preceding verse).

The two-armed, ever-youthful form holding the flute —

কৃষ্ণের যতেক খেলা, সর্ব্বোত্তম নরলীলা, নরবপু তাহার স্বরূপ ।
গোপবেশ, বেণুকর, নবকিশোর, নটবর, নরলীলার হয় অনুরূপ ॥ ১০১ ॥

kṛṣṇera yateka khelā, sarvottama nara-līlā, Kṛṣṇa's all pastimes the highest the human-like pastime nara-vapu tāhāra svarūpa
a human-like body His own form
gopa-veśa, veṇu-kara, nava-kiśora, naṭa-vara, dressed as a cowherd flute in hand freshly youthful the best of dancers nara-līlāra haya anurūpa
for the human-like pastime is fitting

101 "Of all Kṛṣṇa's pastimes the highest is His nara-līlā, His play as a human being, and a human-like form is His own true form. Dressed as a cowherd boy, flute in hand, ever freshly youthful, the finest of dancers — this form perfectly suits such play.

Anubhāṣya.

Bhagavān's pastimes are endless. There are Kṛṣṇa's pastimes in Gokula; the pastimes of Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa and others in Paravyoma; the pastimes of the puruṣa-avatāras such as Kāraṇārṇavaśāyī; the pastimes of the avatāras who come for a particular occasion (naimittika), such as Matsya and Kūrma; the pastimes of the guṇa-avatāras such as Brahmā and Śiva; the pastimes of the āveśa-avatāras such as Pṛthu and Vyāsa; the pastimes of the Paramātmā and others endowed with attributes (saviśeṣa); and the impersonal (nirviśeṣa) Brahman. When all these plays of Bhagavān are compared, Kṛṣṇa's pastimes in human form (nara-līlā) are the best of all. Kṛṣṇa's svarūpa is a human body, a cowherd's dress, a flute in hand, fresh youth (nava-kiśora) and the finest of dancers (naṭavara). Kṛṣṇa's svarūpa corresponds to His pastimes in human form. Yet it bears none of the impurity of material attributes: it is not base, mortal, impermanent, unworthy, limited, divided or confined.

A description of the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's form; Kṛṣṇa's form attracts all living beings —

কৃষ্ণের মধুর রূপ শুন, সনাতন ।
যে রূপের এক কণ, ডুবায় যে ত্রিভুবন, সর্ব্ব প্রাণী করে আকর্ষণ ॥ ১০২ ॥

kṛṣṇera madhura rūpa śuna, sanātana Kṛṣṇa's sweet form hear O Sanātana ye rūpera eka kaṇa, ḍubāya ye tribhuvana, of which form one particle floods that the three worlds
sarva prāṇī kare ākarṣaṇa
all living beings makes attraction

102 Hear, Sanātana, of Kṛṣṇa's sweet form, a single particle of which floods the three worlds and draws all living beings to itself.

Anubhāṣya.
A single particle of Kṛṣṇa's sweet form can flood the three worlds — Gokula, Mathurā and Dvārakā; or else these three worlds: the inner abode, Goloka-Vṛndāvana, the middle abode, Paravyoma, and the outer abode, Devī-dhāma. And the sweetness of His form attracts the beings of these three worlds.

Manifesting the eternal pastimes displays the power of Yogamāyā —

যোগমায়া চিচ্ছক্তি, বিশুদ্ধসত্ত্ব-পরিণতি, তার শক্তি লোকে দেখাইতে । এই রূপ-রতন, ভক্তগণের গূঢ়ধন,

ei rūpa-ratana, bhakta-gaṇera gūḍha-dhana,
this form jewel of the devotees the hidden treasure prakaṭa kailā nitya-līlā haite manifest He made the eternal pastimes from 103 Yogamāyā is the spiritual potency (cit-śakti), a transformation of pure sattva (viśuddha-sattva). To show her power to the world, He brought this jewel of a form, the hidden treasure of the devotees, into the manifest world from His eternal pastimes.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Śrī Kṛṣṇa's form is the transformation (pariṇāma) of viśuddha-sattva (pure goodness), which abides in the sandhinī of His Yogamāyā, called the cit-śakti.

Anubhāṣya.
In Paravyoma and the other abodes, Yogamāyā — the cit-śakti that is the transformation of viśuddha-sattva — does not abide. To show the working of this Yogamāyā's unprecedented, extraordinary power, Kṛṣṇa manifested in the world (prapañca), from Goloka, His eternal pastimes — a jewel that the devotees keep deeply secret and hold most dear.

Kṛṣṇa's own intense longing to enjoy His form —

রূপ দেখি' আপনার, কৃষ্ণের হৈল চমৎকার, আস্বাদিতে মনে উঠে কাম।
'স্বসৌভাগ্য' যাঁর নাম, সৌন্দর্য্যাদি গুণগ্রাম, এইরূপ নিত্য তাঁর ধাম ॥ ১০৪ ॥

'sva-saubhāgya' yāṁra nāma, saundaryādi guṇa-grāma,
His own good fortune whose name beauty and the rest of qualities the host ei-rūpa nitya tāṁra dhāma
this form eternal their abode

104 Seeing His own form, Kṛṣṇa is amazed, and a desire to taste it rises in His mind. His own good fortune (sva-saubhāgya), the host of qualities beginning with beauty, has this form as its eternal abode.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Beauty and the other qualities are the supreme good fortune of the spiritual truth (cit-tattva), and they abide eternally in this very form of Kṛṣṇa.

Anubhāṣya.

Kṛṣṇa's form is so extraordinarily wondrous that it astonishes Kṛṣṇa Himself, and Kṛṣṇa's own eagerness to taste it grows. His own supreme good fortune, full of the six opulences — complete beauty, knowledge, wealth, strength, fame and renunciation — abides eternally in Kṛṣṇa alone.

The āśraya of Goloka — those who hold love — are enchanted and attracted by the form of its object (viṣaya) —

ভূষণের ভূষণ অঙ্গ, তাঁহে ললিত ত্রিভঙ্গ, তাহার উপর ভ্রূধনু-নর্ত্তন । তেরছে নেত্রান্ত বাণ, তার দৃঢ় সন্ধান, askance of the eye-corners the arrows their firm aim vindhe rādhā-gopī-gaṇa-mana pierce of Rādhā of the gopīs of the host the hearts

105 His body is the ornament of ornaments, graceful in its threefold bend (tribhaṅga), and over all this dances the bow of His brows; the arrows of His sidelong glances, firmly aimed, pierce the hearts of Rādhā and the gopīs.

Anubhāṣya.
Alaṅkāra means an ornament of the body. But the beauty of Kṛṣṇa's body is so wondrous that His body is like the ornament of ornaments! Despite such beauty of His body, the graceful pose bent in three places (lalita-tribhaṅga) seems to increase it still more. Moreover, above His eyes the bow-like brows are dancing. Fitting the arrows of His sidelong glances to the bow of His brows, Kṛṣṇa takes firm aim to pierce the hearts of Rādhā and the gopīs who follow Her.

Kṛṣṇa's form attracts even Nārāyaṇa and the Lakṣmīs of Paravyoma —

ব্রহ্মাণ্ডোপরি পরব্যোম, তাঁহা যে স্বরূপগণ, তাঁ-সবার বলে হরে মন ।

of them all by force steals the minds
pati-vratā śiromaṇi, yāṁre kahe veda-vāṇī, of chaste wives the crest-jewel whom calls the word of the Vedas
ākarṣaye sei lakṣmī-gaṇa
attracts those Lakṣmīs

106 Above the universes lies Paravyoma; this form forcibly steals the minds of all the divine forms (svarūpas) there. It attracts even the Lakṣmīs, whom the word of the Vedas calls the crest-jewels of chaste wives.

Anubhāṣya.

Kṛṣṇa's form is so captivating that — to say nothing of all the beings and gods of the material world — it forcibly steals the hearts even of Nārāyaṇa and the other forms (svarūpas) of Kṛṣṇa in Paravyoma, above the universes. Even the Lakṣmīs, whom the Vedas call the one "crest-jewel of chaste wives," are attracted by Kṛṣṇa's beauty and long for His lotus feet.

"When He shines together with Rādhā, then He is Madana-mohana" —

107 Mounted on the chariot of the gopīs' heartfelt desire, He stirs the mind of Cupid himself, and so He is called Madana-mohana. Conquering the pride of the five-arrowed god, He Himself, the new Kandarpa (nava-kandarpa), dances the rāsa with the gopīs.

Anubhāṣya.

Mounting the chariot of the gopīs' minds — their favourable disposition of heart — and accepting their service to Himself, Kṛṣṇa agitates the mind of Kandarpa himself, and so He is called "Madana-mohana." Madana is the lord of five arrows: form, taste, smell, sound and touch. With His own beauty Kṛṣṇa tramples his pride

— the pride of enchanting women. And Kṛṣṇa Himself, under the name nava-kandarpa (the new, transcendental Madana of Vraja), sports in the rāsa dance with the gopīs.

A description of the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's flute —

108 With friends equal to Himself, in the joy of grazing the cows, He sports freely in Vṛndāvana. Hearing the sound of His flute, all beings, unmoving and moving, thrill and tremble, and tears flow from them in streams.

A description of Kṛṣṇa's form —

মুক্তাহার — বকপাঁতি, ইন্দ্রধনু-পিঞ্ছ তথি,

109 His pearl necklace is a line of herons, His peacock feather the rainbow, His yellow garment a flash of lightning. Kṛṣṇa is a fresh rain cloud pouring showers of the nectar of His pastimes upon the crops of the world.

Anubhāṣya.
The pearl necklace on Kṛṣṇa's neck is like a row of white cranes; the peacock feather on Kṛṣṇa's head is like a rainbow; and Kṛṣṇa's yellow garment is like lightning. Kṛṣṇa is like a fresh cloud, and the gopīs are like the crops of the world. As a cloud rains upon the crops, Kṛṣṇa pours upon them the streams of the nectar of His pastimes and so gives them life. In the rainy season cranes fly, and the rainbow and the lightning are seen as well.

The highest bhagavattā — the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa — is described only in the Bhāgavatam —

মাধুর্য্য ভগবত্তা-সার, ব্রজে কৈল পরচার, তাহা শুক — ব্যাসের নন্দন ।

that hearing dance the devotees

110 Sweetness, the essence of Godhood (bhagavattā), He revealed in Vraja. Śuka, the son of Vyāsa, has described it in place after place in the Bhāgavata to make it known, and hearing it the devotees dance."

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

"Sweetness is the essence of bhagavattā." Complete wealth, complete strength, complete fame, complete beauty, complete knowledge and complete renunciation — these six qualities are called bhagavattā (the nature of Bhagavān). Among them complete beauty (śrī) is called "sweetness" (mādhurya). It is the essence of the six-fold bhagavattā; another name for it is "sweetness." In the form of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, bhagavattā is predominated by sweetness, and in the forms of Nārāyaṇa and others, by majesty.

Anubhāṣya.

The very essence of the bhagavattā of Bhagavān, who is full of the six opulences, is sweetness, and this sweetness was revealed in Vraja itself. Śukadeva, the son of Dvaipāyana, described for the devotees, in many places of the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, this particle of sweetness that maddens the hearts of the devotees.

While describing Kṛṣṇa's qualities, the Lord describes the good fortune of the gopīs —

কহিতে কৃষ্ণের রসে, শ্লোক পড়ে প্রেমাবেশে, প্রেমে সনাতন-হাত ধরি' ।
গোপী-ভাগ্য, কৃষ্ণ-গুণ, যে করিল বরণন, ভাবাবেশে মথুরা-নাগরী ॥ ১১১ ॥

111 Speaking of the rasa of Kṛṣṇa, the Lord, rapt in love, tenderly took Sanātana's hand and recited the verse in which the women of Mathurā, absorbed in ecstasy, described the gopīs' fortune and Kṛṣṇa's qualities.

Anubhāṣya.

The women of Mathurā, overflowing with feeling, described the extraordinary fortune of the gopīs and the transcendent qualities of Kṛṣṇa. In the same way Śrī Gaurahari, beginning to speak of "the taste of Kṛṣṇa" (kṛṣṇa-rasa), was filled with prema (love of God), took Sanātana's hand and, absorbed in love, recited that verse.

112 "What austerities did the gopīs perform, that with their eyes they drink His form — the essence of loveliness, unequalled and unsurpassed, perfect in itself, new at every moment, hard to attain, the sole abode of fame, beauty and majesty?" (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.44.14)[12]

Anubhāṣya.

See Ādi 4.156.

The gopīs float eternally on the waves of the nectar of loveliness in the ocean of the nectar of Kṛṣṇa's youth —

তারুণ্যামৃত — পারাবার, তরঙ্গ — লাবণ্যসার, তাতে সে আবর্ত্ত ভাবোদ্গম ।
বংশীধ্বনি — চক্রবাত, নারীর মান — তৃণপাত, তাহা ডুবায়, না হয় উদ্গম ॥ ১১৩ ॥

tāruṇyāmṛta — pārāvāra, taraṅga — lāvaṇya-sāra, of youth's nectar an ocean the waves the essence of loveliness
tāte se āvarta bhāvodgama
in it that whirlpool the rising of emotions vaṁśī-dhvani — cakravāta, nārīra māna — tṛṇa-pāta, the flute's sound a whirlwind of women pride grass and leaves tāhā ḍubāya, nā haya udgama that it sinks not is rising again

113 "His youth is a nectar ocean; its waves are the essence of loveliness, its whirlpools the surging of emotions. The sound of His flute is a whirlwind, and women's pride is but grass and leaves: the whirlwind sinks it, and it never rises again.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Like the waves of the great ocean of eternal youth, the essence of loveliness (lāvaṇya) is seen in Kṛṣṇa's body. In that ocean the awakening of feelings (bhāva) is the whirlpool, and the sound of the flute is the whirlwind. In such a place, once a woman's heart falls like a blade of grass, it can no longer rise.

Anubhāṣya.
Cakravāta is a whirlwind, round like a wheel.

Drinking the nectar of Kṛṣṇa's form, the gopīs attain the goal of life —

সখি হে, কোন্ তপ কৈল গোপীগণ ।
কৃষ্ণরূপ-সুমাধুরী, পিবি' পিবি' নেত্র ভরি', শ্লাঘ্য করে জন্ম-তনু-মন ॥ ১১৪ ॥

sakhi he, kon tapa kaila gopī-gaṇa
O friend what austerity performed the gopīs
kṛṣṇa-rūpa-sumādhurī, pibi' pibi' netra bhari', Kṛṣṇa's form's exquisite sweetness drinking drinking the eyes filling ślāghya kare janma-tanu-mana praiseworthy they make birth body mind

114 O friend, what austerity did the gopīs perform? Drinking and drinking the exquisite sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's form until their eyes are full, they make their birth, body and mind worthy of praise.

The sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's form has no equal and no superior; it is absent in Nārāyaṇa —

যে মাধুরীর ঊর্দ্ধ আন, নাহি যার সমান, পরব্যোমে স্বরূপের গণে ।
যিঁহো সর্ব্ব-অবতারী, পরব্যোম-অধিকারী, এ মাধুর্য্য নাহি নারায়ণে ॥ ১১৫ ॥

ye mādhurīra ūrdhva āna, nāhi yāra samāna, which of sweetness higher other there is not of which equal paravyome svarūpera gaṇe
in Paravyoma of the divine forms in the host yiṁho sarva-avatārī, paravyoma-adhikārī, who the source of all avatāras of Paravyoma the ruler
e mādhurya nāhi nārāyaṇe
this sweetness there is not in Nārāyaṇa

115 Among all the divine forms in Paravyoma there is nothing higher than this sweetness, nor anything equal to it. Even Nārāyaṇa, the source of all the avatāras and the ruler of Paravyoma, does not possess this sweetness.

The proof: even Lakṣmī, the consort of Nārāyaṇa, longs for Kṛṣṇa's sweetness

তাতে সাক্ষী সেই রমা, নারায়ণের প্রিয়তমা, পতিব্রতাগণের উপাস্যা ।
তিঁহো যে মাধুর্য্যলোভে, ছাড়ি' সব কামভোগে, ব্রত করি' করিলা তপস্যা ॥ ১১৬ ॥

tāte sākṣī sei ramā, nārāyaṇera priyatamā, in that the witness that Ramā of Nārāyaṇa the most beloved pativratā-gaṇera upāsyā
of the chaste wives the object of worship
tiṁho ye mādhurya-lobhe, chāḍi' saba kāma-bhoge, she who for sweetness in greed giving up all enjoyments of desire vrata kari' karilā tapasyā
a vow taking performed austerity

116 The witness to this is Ramā (Lakṣmī), Nārāyaṇa's most beloved, whom all chaste wives worship. Longing for that sweetness, she gave up every enjoyment she might desire, took a vow and performed austerities.

In His other manifestations Kṛṣṇa, by His own will and as needed, reveals a portion of His sweetness, which is perfect by itself —

সেই ত' মাধুর্য্য-সার, অন্য-সিদ্ধি নাহি তার, তিঁহো — মাধুর্য্যাদি-গুণখনি ।
আর সব প্রকাশে, তাঁর দত্ত গুণ ভাসে, যাঁহা যত প্রকাশে কার্য্য জানি ॥ ১১৭ ॥

sei ta' mādhurya-sāra, anya-siddhi nāhi tāra, that indeed of sweetness the essence from another perfection there is not of it tiṁho — mādhuryādi-guṇa-khani
He of sweetness and other qualities the mine
āra saba prakāśe, tāṁra datta guṇa bhāse, in the other all manifestations by Him given qualities shine
yāṁhā yata prakāśe kārya jāni
where as much in a manifestation the work I know

117 That is the very essence of sweetness, owing its perfection to nothing else; He is the mine of sweetness and of all other qualities. In all His other manifestations shine the qualities He grants them, as much in each as its work requires — this I know.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
This sweetness of Kṛṣṇa is ananya-siddha, that is, perfect by itself (svayaṁ-siddha): no other qualities bring it about. In His other manifestations — in the forms of Nārāyaṇa and others — this form of Kṛṣṇa manifests, according to the work each manifestation is to perform, the qualities that suit it: majesty, power and the rest.

Kṛṣṇa's sweetness and the gopīs' love are both ever new —

গোপীভাব-দরপণ, নব নব ক্ষণে ক্ষণ,

118 The gopīs' love is a mirror, new at every moment, and before it stands Kṛṣṇa's sweetness. The two vie with each other and keep growing, never turning back, and the abundance of both is ever new.

Without rāgānugā-bhakti Kṛṣṇa's sweetness is very hard to attain —

কর্ম্ম, তপ, যোগ, জ্ঞান, বিধি-ভক্তি, জপ, ধ্যান, ইহা হৈতে মাধুর্য্য দুর্ল্লভ । কেবল যে রাগমার্গে, ভজে কৃষ্ণে অনুরাগে, only who on the path of spontaneous love worships Kṛṣṇa with deep attachment tāṁre kṛṣṇa-mādhurya sulabha for him Kṛṣṇa's sweetness easy to attain

119 Through karma, austerity, yoga, knowledge, devotion according to rules (vidhi-bhakti), japa or meditation this sweetness is hard to attain. Only one who worships Kṛṣṇa with deep attachment (anurāga) on the path of spontaneous love (rāga-mārga) attains Kṛṣṇa's sweetness easily.

Anubhāṣya.
Karma, austerity, yoga, jñāna, vidhi-bhakti, japa, meditation and other practices (sādhana) do not bring one to sweetness. Kṛṣṇa's sweetness is easily attained only by one who, on the path of rāga (rāga-mārga), worships Kṛṣṇa's name with anurāga.

120 That form, whose home is Vraja, is full of majesty and sweetness, a jewel-mine of divine qualities. The majestic existence of others, their Godhood (bhagavattā), is Kṛṣṇa's gift, for He is the whole of whom all are parts (sarva-aṁśī), the shelter of all.

121 Beauty, modesty, mercy, fame, steadfastness and skilful intelligence — all these are established in Kṛṣṇa. Good nature, gentleness and generosity are found in no one but Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa does good to the whole world.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The qualities that shine in Nārāyaṇa — beauty (śrī), modesty, compassion, fame, steadiness and a skilful intelligence — are all established in Him by Kṛṣṇa. But good character, gentleness and generosity are seen in no other manifestation except Kṛṣṇa.

The eyes that drink the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's form long never to blink —

122 All who saw Kṛṣṇa found fault with the blinking of their eyes, and in Vraja the gopīs reproached the Creator." Reciting those verses and explaining their meaning, Mahāprabhu joyfully tasted their sweetness.

Anubhāṣya.

"Reproaching the blink": the covering of the eye, the eyelid, is called pakṣma. Because it lies over the eye, it hinders sight; hence the reproach.

One who drinks the honey of Kṛṣṇa's lotus face never finds the satiety common in the world of matter; the gopīs' ocean of bliss swells at every moment —

123 "Women and men drank with their eyes His face — lovely with ears graced by makara earrings and with shining cheeks, smiling playfully, an eternal festival — and were never sated. Delighted as they were, they grew angry with the maker of the blinking eyelids." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 9.24.65)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

The moon of His (Kṛṣṇa's) face, the ears adorned with makara-shaped earrings, the shining cheeks, the beauty, the playful smile — all this is a perpetual festival. Men and women drank it with their eyes and were filled with supreme joy, and they grew angry at the blinking of their eyes, which hindered their seeing.

Anubhāṣya.

Śrīla Śukadeva Mahārāja, describing the Yadu dynasty to Parīkṣit, describes the purpose of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's avatāra and the incomparably beautiful sweetness of His form, which enchants all the worlds:

yasya (of Kṛṣṇa) makara-kuṇḍala-cāru-karṇa-bhrājat-kapola-subhagaṁ (lovely with cheeks that shine, lit by the ears beautifully adorned with makara-shaped earrings), sa-vilāsa-hāsam (with a playful smile), nityotsavam (in which there is a perpetual festival — bliss) ānanam (the lotus face) nāryaḥ narāḥ ca (women and men) dṛśibhiḥ (with their eyes) pibantyaḥ (even while drinking) na tu tatṛpuḥ[22] (were not satisfied: unable to bear even the interval in which the eyes close and open, they at its maker) nimeḥ (at the Creator) kupitāḥ (were angry).

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The Kāma-gāyatrī mantra is Kṛṣṇa's svarūpa. Counting the kāma-bīja as half a syllable, it has twenty-four and a half syllables.

Anubhāṣya.
For the Kāma-gāyatrī, see Madhya 8.137. The twenty-four and a half syllables of the Kāma-gāyatrī are like twenty-four and a half moons on Kṛṣṇa's body. And it is Kṛṣṇa's svarūpa, because it contains the three truths: sambandha, abhidheya and prayojana.

The moon of Kṛṣṇa's face reigns over the twenty-four and a half moons of His body —

সখি হে, কৃষ্ণমুখ — দ্বিজরাজ-রাজ ।

126 O friend, Kṛṣṇa's face is the emperor of moons. Seated on the throne of Kṛṣṇa's body, it rules its kingdom, holding court with an assembly of moons.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Dvija-rāja-rāja means the king of the moons. The moon of Kṛṣṇa's face, having become king, sits on the throne of Kṛṣṇa's body and, together with the society of moons (His limbs and their parts), rules the kingdom of sweetness. Which moon is where is told next.

127 His two glossy cheeks, surpassing fine jewelled mirrors, I know to be two full moons. On His forehead is a half-moon, and on it a dot of sandal paste: that too I count as a full moon.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Aṣṭamī-indu means the half-moon.

128 The nails of His fingers, a company of moons, dance upon the flute, and their song is the flute's melody. Below, the moons of His toenails dance, and the jingling of His anklets is their song.

Anubhāṣya.
Ṭhāṭa means abiding (sthiti); nāṭa means dance (nāṭya).

Anubhāṣya.
The moon of Kṛṣṇa's face is the king of the moons. The moons are these: (1) the moon of the face, (2) the moon of the left cheek, (3) the moon of the right cheek, (4) the moon of the sandal dot, (5–14) the moons of the fingernails, (15–24) the moons of the toenails, (24½) the half-moon on the forehead. With this society of twenty-four and a half moons, the king of the moons — Kṛṣṇa's face — sits on the royal throne of Kṛṣṇa's body and rules.

Like a kṣatriya intoxicated with play, Kṛṣṇa's lotus face pierces the gopīs' hearts —

নাচে মকর-কুণ্ডল, নেত্র — লীলা-কমল, বিলাসী রাজা সতত নাচায় ৷

the brows a bow the eyes arrows the bowstring the two ears nārī-mana-lakṣya vindhe tāya
of women's hearts the target pierces with them

129 The makara earrings dance, and the eyes, playful lotuses: the pleasure-loving king makes them dance without cease. His brows are a bow, His eyes arrows, His two ears the bowstring; with them He pierces the target, the hearts of women.

Anubhāṣya.

The moon of Kṛṣṇa's face is a king given to play (vilāsī). This moon of His face makes the makara earrings and the lotuses of His eyes dance constantly. The brows are like a bow, the eyes are its arrows, and the two ears are the bowstring drawn to them. With eyes that stretch to His ears Kṛṣṇa pierces the target — the hearts of the cowherd women.

As the most munificent one, He distributes nectar to all from the moons of His body —

এই চান্দের বড় নাট, পসারি' চান্দের হাট, বিনি-মূলে বিলায় নিজামৃত । কাঁহো স্মিত-জ্যোৎস্নামৃতে, কাঁহারে অধরামৃতে,

without price distributes its own nectar
kāṁho smita-jyotsnāmṛte, kāṁhāre adharāmṛte, some with the nectar of the moonlight of His smile some with the nectar of His lips saba loka kare āpyāyita
all people makes satisfied

130 Grand is this moon's dance: spreading out a market of moons, it gives away its own nectar without price. Some it delights with the moonlit nectar of the smile, some with the nectar of the lips; so it satisfies everyone.

Anubhāṣya.
The dance of this moon of His face surpasses everyone. Setting out the other twenty-three and a half moons as wares in a market, it distributes its own nectar free of charge. Some buyers Kṛṣṇa satisfies with the moonlit nectar of His sweet smile, some with the nectar of His lips, and all others in other ways.

A description of the ministers of the king — the moon of the face, intoxicated with amorous play — and of his pleasure-palace and the rest —

বিপুলায়তারুণ, মদন-মদ-ঘূর্ণন,

131 Its ministers are His two eyes, broad, long and reddish, which make even Madana (Cupid) reel in his intoxication. Govinda's face, full of joy, is the pleasure-house of loveliness and an elixir for the eyes of all.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Vipula means wide. The two wide eyes, reddish in hue, are the ministers of the king — Kṛṣṇa's face; they destroy the intoxication of Madana.

When the gopīs see the moon of Kṛṣṇa's face, their unsatisfied longing is ever new, ever growing, supremely wondrous and spiritual; therefore they reproach the Creator —

যাঁর পুণ্যপুঞ্জফলে, সে-মুখ-দর্শন মিলে,

দ্বিগুণ বাড়ে তৃষ্ণা-লোভ, পিতে নারে — মনঃক্ষোভ,

duḥkhe kare vidhira nindane
in sorrow makes of the Creator reproach

132 One who obtains the sight of that face as the fruit of heaps of piety — what can his two eyes drink of it? His thirst and greed grow twofold; unable to drink, his mind is agitated, and in sorrow he reproaches the Creator:

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Dui āṅkhi ki karibe pāne ("how much can two eyes drink?"): how can the viewer's two eyes drink that ocean of nectar?

Anubhāṣya.

Only from acts born of bhakti does sukṛti arise that turns one towards bhakti. How much of such a face of Kṛṣṇa can a viewer drink with two eyes? His thirst and greed grow twofold, yet he cannot drink as much as he wishes. His own incapacity and want trouble his mind deeply, and then the viewer, sorrowful at heart, begins to blame the one who created him.

The Creator does not understand the taste of Kṛṣṇa's sweetness —

না দিলেক লক্ষ-কোটি, সবে দিলা আঁখি দুটি, তাতে দিলা নিমিষ-আচ্ছাদন । বিধি — জড় তপোধন, রসশূন্য তার মন,

nāhi jāne yogya sṛjana
not he knows proper creation

133 'He did not give hundreds of thousands, millions of eyes; he gave only two, and on them he put blinking lids. The Creator is a dull ascetic; his mind is void of taste (rasa), and he does not know how to create properly.

Anubhāṣya.

The unsatisfied viewer then says with regret: "I have no hundreds of thousands, no millions of eyes — I have only two, and even these are covered with leaves. Now and then the eyelid falls for a brief moment, and then my seeing of Kṛṣṇa is interrupted again. So Vidhi, the maker of bodies, is utterly foolish. He gave up the service of seeing Kṛṣṇa and took to trivial austerity, and so he is not at all a knower of rasa (rasajña). He is a mere doer of dry tasks such as creation and knows nothing at all of how and where things should be arranged."

Advice and instruction to the Creator —

যে দেখিবে কৃষ্ণানন, তার করে দ্বি-নয়ন, mora yadi bola dhare, koṭī āṁkhi tāra kare, my if word he takes millions of eyes for him he makes tabe jāni yogya sṛṣṭi tāra

134 For one who is to see Kṛṣṇa's face he makes only two eyes — such injustice from the Creator! If he would take my advice and make millions of eyes for such a one, then I would know his creation to be proper.'

Anubhāṣya.

"Had he accepted my advice and given millions of eyes to the one who beholds Kṛṣṇa's face, I would have known Vidhi to be skilled in the work of creation."

The Lord, filled with the feeling of the gopīs, longs for the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's body, the sweetness of His face and the sweetness of His smile —

135 The sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's body is an ocean, His very sweet face the moon, and His exceedingly sweet smile its fine rays." The Lord's mind clung to these three; greedily He tasted them and, waving His hand, recited a verse.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

E-tine lāgila mana ("the mind clung to these three"): the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's body is like an ocean, His most sweet face is like the moon risen from that ocean, and His exceedingly sweet smile is like the rays of that moon. To these three the mind clung.

Anubhāṣya.

Ordinarily, the first glance sees the ocean of sweetness that is Kṛṣṇa's body; the second, closer glance sees the most sweet moon of His face, which stands above the ocean of His body; and the third, closest glance sees the rays of the moon of His face — His gentle smile, sweeter than sweetness itself. The sweetness of these three rose in the Lord step by step as He recited the verse, and a transformation (vikāra) appeared in Him: He began to wave His hand.

The degrees of sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's body, face and smile in the eyes of the gopīs —

136 "Sweet, sweet is the form of this Lord; sweet, sweet is His face, sweet indeed; and this gentle smile, fragrant with honey — ah, it is sweet, sweet, sweet, sweet!" (Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta, 92)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The body of this Kṛṣṇa is sweet; His face is sweeter still; and His gentle smile, fragrant with honey, is sweeter yet. Oh! Everything about Him is sweet.

Anubhāṣya.
asya vibhoḥ (of this Kṛṣṇa) vapuḥ (the form, or the body) madhuraṁ madhuraṁ (compared with the beauty of all the other forms besides such a svayaṁ-rūpa, exceedingly sweet); (Kṛṣṇa's) vadanaṁ (and) madhuraṁ madhuraṁ madhuram (compared with Kṛṣṇa's body, sweeter still); aho, etat madhu-gandhi (fragrant with honey) mṛdu-smitam (and the gentle smile) madhuraṁ madhuraṁ madhuraṁ madhuram (compared with Kṛṣṇa's body and face, the sweetest of all).

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

When all three disorders (doṣas) arise in the bodily constituents (dhātus), it is called sannipāta. My mind has been struck by three blows — the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's body, the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's face and the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's smile — and there is no doubt that it suffers from the disease of sannipāta. Thirsting, it runs towards that ocean of the rasa of beauty. The physician for ordinary sannipāta does not let the patient drink even a drop of water. In the same way, my disease has no physician but Kṛṣṇa — yet He does not let me drink even a drop from the ocean of the nectar of His beauty. That is the sorrow (the ill fate)!

Anubhāṣya.

The Lord, steeped in the feeling of the gopīs in the rasa of separation (vipralambha), thirsts so intensely to taste Kṛṣṇa's sweetness that even while tasting Kṛṣṇa's boundless sweetness He is not satisfied. This lack of satisfaction is transcendental, supremely wondrous and ever increasing. Therefore, out of strong emotion and longing, He laments and grieves that He cannot taste Kṛṣṇa's sweetness even in a small measure.

Kṛṣṇa's body is sweet, Kṛṣṇa's face sweeter, Kṛṣṇa's smile the sweetest —

কৃষ্ণাঙ্গ — লাবণ্যপূর, মধুর হৈতে সুমধুর, তাতে যেই মুখ সুধাকর ।
মধুর হৈতে সুমধুর, তাহা হৈতে সুমধুর, তাঁর যেই স্মিত জ্যোৎস্না-ভর ॥ ১৩৮ ॥

kṛṣṇāṅga — lāvaṇya-pūra, madhura haite sumadhura, Kṛṣṇa's body of loveliness a flood than sweet sweeter
tāte yei mukha sudhākara on it which the face the moon
madhura haite sumadhura, tāhā haite sumadhura,
than sweet sweeter than that sweeter
tāṁra yei smita jyotsnā-bhara
His which smile of moonlight the fullness

138 Kṛṣṇa's body is a flood of loveliness, sweeter than sweetness itself. On it is His moonlike face, sweeter than sweet and sweeter still; and His smile is the full flood of that moon's light.

Anubhāṣya.
Tāra means "of the moon of Kṛṣṇa's face." The gentle smile on Kṛṣṇa's face is like the full light of the moon that delights the gopīs.

All three worlds are bathed in the moonlight of that smile —

মধুর হৈতে সুমধুর, তাহা হৈতে সুমধুর,
তাহা হৈতে অতি সুমধুর ।
আপনার এক কণে, ব্যাপে সব ত্রিভুবনে, দশদিক্ ব্যাপে যার পূর ॥ ১৩৯ ॥

madhura haite sumadhura, tāhā haite sumadhura,
than sweet sweeter than that sweeter
tāhā haite ati sumadhura than that far sweeter
āpanāra eka kaṇe, vyāpe saba tribhuvane, by its own one particle pervades all the three worlds
daśa-dik vyāpe yāra pūra
the ten directions pervades whose flood

139 Sweeter than sweet, sweeter still, and sweeter even than that, the smile pervades all the three worlds with a single particle of itself, and its flood fills the ten directions.

Anubhāṣya.

Although that smile appears only on one side of His beautiful face, it pervades Goloka, Paravyoma and Devī-dhāma and fills the ten directions with light.

The sweetness of the flute of Kṛṣṇa, the embodiment of play, maddens all three worlds —

স্মিত কিরণ-সুকর্পূরে, পৈশে অধর-মধুরে, সেই মধু মাতায় ত্রিভুবনে ।
বংশীছিদ্র আকাশে, তার গুণ শব্দে পৈশে, ধ্বনিরূপে পাঞা পরিণামে ॥ ১৪০ ॥

smita kiraṇa-sukarpūre, paiśe adhara-madhure, of the smile the rays' fine camphor enters the lips' sweetness
sei madhu mātāya tribhuvane that honey maddens the three worlds
vaṁśī-chidra ākāśe, tāra guṇa śabde paiśe, of the flute's holes into the sky its quality into sound enters dhvani-rūpe pāñā pariṇāme
of sound in the form attaining transformation

140 The fine camphor of the rays of His smile enters the sweetness of His lips, and that honey maddens the three worlds. Entering the sky within the holes of the flute, it passes into sound, the sky's own quality, and is transformed into melody.

Anubhāṣya.

Smita-kiraṇa-sukarpūre: in the camphor of the rays of His slight smile. Paiśe means "enters."

Kṛṣṇa's flute maddens all who are of pure goodness (śuddha-sattva) in the universes, in Paravyoma and in Goloka — especially those who hold the śṛṅgāra-rasa —

সে ধ্বনি চৌদিকে ধায়, অণ্ড ভেদি, বৈকুণ্ঠে যায়, বলে পৈশে জগতের কাণে ৷
সবা মাতোয়াল করি', বলাৎকারে আনে ধরি', বিশেষতঃ যুবতীর গণে ॥ ১৪১ ॥

se dhvani caudike dhāya, aṇḍa bhedi, vaikuṇṭhe yāya, that sound in all directions runs the universe piercing to Vaikuṇṭha goes bale paiśe jagatera kāṇe
by force enters of the world the ears sabā mātoyāla kari', balātkāre āne dhari', all maddened making by force brings seizing viśeṣataḥ yuvatīra gaṇe especially of young women the host

141 That sound runs in all directions; piercing the shell of the universe, it reaches Vaikuṇṭha and forces its way into the ears of the world. Maddening all, it seizes them and brings them by force — above all the young women.

Anubhāṣya.

Aṇḍa bhedi' ("piercing the egg of the universe"): breaking through the material realm, the universe, the sound goes to transcendental Vaikuṇṭha and forcibly enters the ears of the world of the gopīs.

The power of the sweetness of the flute —

ধ্বনি — বড় উদ্ধত, পতিব্রতার ভাঙ্গে ব্রত, পতি-কোল হৈতে টানি' আনে ৷ বৈকুণ্ঠের লক্ষ্মীগণে, যেই করে আকর্ষণে,

of Vaikuṇṭha the Lakṣmīs which makes attraction
tāra āge kebā gopī-gaṇe
of it before what to speak of the gopīs

142 That sound is most insolent: it breaks the vow of chaste wives and pulls them from their husbands' laps. It attracts even the Lakṣmīs of Vaikuṇṭha — what then of the gopīs?

নীবি খসায় পতি-আগে, গৃহধর্ম্ম করায় ত্যাগে, বলে ধরি' আনে কৃষ্ণস্থানে । লোকধর্ম্ম, লজ্জা, ভয়, সব জ্ঞান লুপ্ত হয়,

nīvi khasāya pati-āge, gṛha-dharma karāya tyāge, the waist-knot loosens before the husband household duty makes give up bale dhari' āne kṛṣṇa-sthāne
by force seizing brings to Kṛṣṇa's place
loka-dharma, lajjā, bhaya, saba jñāna lupta haya, social duty modesty fear all awareness lost becomes aiche nācāya saba nārī-gaṇe
thus makes dance all the women

143 It loosens the knots of their skirts before their husbands and makes them give up their household duties; seizing them by force, it brings them to Kṛṣṇa. Social duty, modesty, fear — all awareness is lost. So it makes all the women dance.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
Nīvi is the cord with which the skirt (ghāgrā) is tied at the waist.

It stops every sound other than the sounds of Kṛṣṇa —

কানের ভিতর বাসা করে, আপনে তাঁহা সদা স্ফুরে, অন্য শব্দ না দেয় প্রবেশিতে ৷
আন কথা না শুনে কাণ, আন বলিতে বোলয় আন, এই কৃষ্ণের বংশীর চরিতে ॥ ১৪৪ ॥

kānera bhitara vāsā kare, āpane tāṁhā sadā sphure, of the ears within a dwelling it makes itself there always sounds
anya śabda nā deya praveśite other sound not allows to enter āna kathā nā śune kāṇa, āna balite bolaya āna, other talk not hear the ears one thing to say says another ei kṛṣṇera vaṁśīra carite
this of Kṛṣṇa's flute the conduct

144 It makes its home within the ears and ever sounds there by itself, letting no other sound enter. The ears hear no other talk; meaning to say one thing, one says another. Such is the way of Kṛṣṇa's flute."

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Kānera bhitara vāsā kare ("it makes its home within the ears"): "We gopīs — the sound of the flute has made its home within our ears," that is, it seems always to be ringing in our ears.

Anubhāṣya.

The sound of Kṛṣṇa's flute makes its home in the gopīs' ears and, revealing itself there (sphūrti) on its own, keeps the gopī almost mad. Then no other sound can enter her ears, and, her mind elsewhere, she cannot answer as she should. That sound of the flute leaves the gopī utterly absent to everything else.

The Lord returns to external awareness; He seeks no honour for Himself and gives honour to another (amānī and mānada) —

পুনঃ কহে বাহ্যজ্ঞানে, আন কহিতে কহিলুঁ আনে, কৃষ্ণ-কৃপা তোমার উপরে ।
মোর চিত্ত-ভ্রম করি', নিজৈশ্বর্য্য-মাধুরী, মোর মুখে শুনায় তোমারে ॥ ১৪৫ ॥

punaḥ kahe bāhya-jñāne, āna kahite kahiluṁ āne, again says in outer consciousness other to say I said other kṛṣṇa-kṛpā tomāra upare Kṛṣṇa's mercy you upon mora citta-bhrama kari', nijaiśvarya-mādhurī,
My bewilderment of mind making of His own majesty the sweetness
mora mukhe śunāya tomāre through My mouth makes hear you

145 Then, returning to outer consciousness, the Lord said again, "Meaning to say one thing, I have said another. Kṛṣṇa's mercy is upon you: bewildering My mind, He has made you hear the sweetness of His own majesty through My mouth.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

In this ecstasy of love, while speaking of the truth of Kṛṣṇa, Mahāprabhu lost external awareness and brought in a composition on rasa (rasa-sandarbha), but this is not the place to describe it. Therefore He says: "I meant to speak of one thing, and I am speaking of another. Kṛṣṇa, in His mercy, bewildered My mind and let you hear of His own majesty and sweetness."

Thus ends the twenty-first chapter of the "Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya."

The Lord, filled with the feeling of the gopīs, proclaims that His heart has been overcome by Kṛṣṇa's sweetness, and speaks of its good fortune —

আমি ত' বাউল, আন কহিতে আন কহি । কৃষ্ণের মাধুর্য্যস্রোতে আমি যাই বহি' ॥ ১৪৬ ॥

āmi ta' bāula, āna kahite āna kahi
I indeed a madman other to say other I say kṛṣṇera mādhurya-srote āmi yāi vahi' of Kṛṣṇa's in the stream of sweetness I go carried away

146 I am a madman: meaning to say one thing, I say another. I am carried away in the stream of Kṛṣṇa's sweetness."

The Lord falls silent for a moment —

তবে মহাপ্রভু ক্ষণেক মৌন করি' রহে । মনে এক করি' পুনঃ সনাতনে কহে ॥ ১৪৭ ॥

tabe mahāprabhu kṣaṇeka mauna kari' rahe then Mahāprabhu for a moment silence keeping remains mane eka kari' punaḥ sanātane kahe
the mind one making again to Sanātana speaks

147 Then Mahāprabhu remained silent for a moment; collecting His mind, He spoke to Sanātana again.

One who hears of Kṛṣṇa's sweetness is immersed in the happiness of love for Kṛṣṇa —

কৃষ্ণের মাধুরী আর মহাপ্রভুর মুখে । ইহা যেই শুনে, সেই ভাসে প্রেমসুখে ॥ ১৪৮ ॥

kṛṣṇera mādhurī āra mahāprabhura mukhe Kṛṣṇa's sweetness and from Mahāprabhu's mouth
ihā yei śune, sei bhāse prema-sukhe
this whoever hears he floats in the happiness of love

148 Whoever hears this — Kṛṣṇa's sweetness from Mahāprabhu's own mouth — floats in the happiness of love.

Anubhāṣya.
Thus ends the twenty-first chapter of the "Anubhāṣya."
