The Vaishnava-vandanas

"Praises of the Vaishnavas": lists of the associates of Sri Chaitanya

The Sanskrit vandana attributed to Jiva Gosvami; the Vaishnava-vandana and Vaishnavabhidhana of Devakinandana Dasa; two Bengali vandanas ascribed to Vrindavana Dasa

Translated from the Sanskrit and Bengali

Translator's note

What a Vaishnava-vandana is. This is the name of verse lists of Vaishnavas — above all the associates of Sri Chaitanya Mahaprabhu, Nityananda and Advaita — which devotees recited in the morning: "Whoever, rising at dawn, reads the Vaishnava-vandana will never know torment." Unlike the biographies, the vandanas tell no story; they give names — sometimes a single word, sometimes a short characterisation: who someone was in Krishna-lila, what he was famous for, whom the Lord especially loved. They therefore complement Kavi Karnapura's Gaura-ganoddesha-dipika (1576), which matches the Lord's associates with their forms in Vraja, and the lists of the "branches of the tree of devotion" in the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Adi 9–12). Some facts are known only from the vandanas: about brahmacharis among the associates at Navadvipa, about many sannyasis around the Lord, about the deeds of Nityananda's associates.

Part 1. The Sanskrit vandana attributed to Jiva Gosvami (153 verses). The author several times calls himself
"Jiva" and signs at the end: "I, Jiva, have completed it"; the colophon calls the vandana "following the sampradaya of Madhva". It is not in the list of Jiva's works in the Bhakti-ratnakara; only two manuscripts are known, and the attribution remains disputed. B. Majumdar, who published the text in an appendix to his book Sri-Chaitanya-chariter upadan (1938/39; 2nd ed. 1959), inclined to think it was Jiva's own and that the Bengali vandanas followed it. There is no public-domain edition of this text; only the old Sanskrit text has been translated, from two independent OCR copies of Majumdar's two editions, without his notes. Corrupt places are noted in the footnotes.

Part 2. Devakinandana Dasa, the Vaishnava-vandana (147 couplets) — the most widespread Bengali vandana.
Devakinandana was a disciple of Purushottama Dasa, the son of Sadashiva Kaviraja among Nityananda's associates, and so wrote in the sixteenth century. The translation follows the edition of Atulakrishna Gosvami (Calcutta, 1910), where Devakinandana's vandana is printed together with others. The numbering of couplets agrees with Majumdar's; two couplets bracketed by the editor are numbered 16a and 42a. Raga lines and refrains (dhuya) are not numbered. Devakinandana's "great" vandana, according to Majumdar, survives only in manuscript and has not been found in a public-domain edition.

Part 3. Devakinandana Kaviraja, the Vaishnavabhidhana — a Sanskrit list of names (53 verses), following almost exactly the order of the Bengali vandana; from the same 1910 edition.

Parts 4 and 5. Two Bengali vandanas ascribed to Vrindavana Dasa. Both come from the same 1910 edition.
The "First vandana" (144 verses) is essentially made up of couplets from the Chaitanya-bhagavata: the list of Nityananda's associates and the account of the devotees going to Nilachala for the Chariot festival. To these is added the "Gopala-nirnaya", which identifies Nityananda's associates with the cowherd boys of Vraja. Vrindavana Dasa himself gave no such identifications, and six of the ten differ from the Gaura-ganoddesha, so the name of the author of the Chaitanya-bhagavata in the colophon points to the source of the lines rather than to the compiler.
The tripadi vandana (150 stanzas and couplets) is signed "Vrindavana Dasa", but its author himself praises Vrindavana Dasa, Narayani's son, and is therefore another man — the "second Vrindavana Dasa", as Majumdar calls him.
His order of names and many characterisations repeat the Sanskrit vandana of Part 1 almost word for word, but there are also details found nowhere else: the Lord's secret counsel with Nityananda about Virachandra, Parameshvara's forty jackals, Saranga's hundred and twenty snakes. The notes mark parallels with Parts 1–2, with the Chaitanya-bhagavata and with the Gaura-ganoddesha.

Principles. Only the text of the vandanas is translated — without the original or a word-for-word rendering. The Russian and English translations were made in parallel, with the same numbering and the same notes. The notes say briefly who each associate is (according to the Gaura-ganoddesha — GGD, by our numbering; the Chaitanya-charitamrita — CC; the Chaitanya-bhagavata — CB) and mark divergences between the vandanas, from GGD and from Majumdar's conclusions. Where a vandana differs from what Gaudiya Vaishnavas accept (for example, a different identification of an associate), the translation is exact and the explanation is given in a note. At the end of the book there is a consolidated index of persons: where each associate is mentioned in the five texts and in GGD.

Part 1. The Sanskrit Vaishnava-vandana attributed to Jiva Gosvami

Introduction; Gaura and His family; Nityananda, His consorts and descendants; Madhavendra, Advaita and His line; the associates at Navadvipa; the sannyasis; the Gosvamis of Vrindavana; associates in Gauda and Orissa; Nityananda's followers; conclusion: the succession from Madhavendra Puri (verses 1–153)

Introduction

1. He whose elder brother is the glorious Sanatana, like unto the Eternal, and whose younger brother is Sri Vallabha — that Sri Rupa is the true refuge of Jiva.[1]

2. Bhagavan, the son of Sri Shachi — Krishna — descended in the age of Kali with all the avataras and their devotees: the Lord absorbed in their various moods.

3. "He who utters the syllables 'Krishna' and whose lustre is not dark, accompanied by His parts, intimates, weapons and associates — in the age of Kali the intelligent worship Him with sacrifices consisting chiefly of sankirtana."[2]

4. The one God is the supreme Krishnachandra; He is the One who bears the name Krishna Chaitanya; and this God Nityananda is His own form (svarupa). Dividing Himself in two […], may He do [good] to us.[3]

5. His dear ones, Advaita and the others, are His very self; the second [after Him is Nityananda]; His many principal energies are glorious Rupa and the others. The Lord born of Shachi is a wide-spreading tree of prema: may It give shade to those scorched by the heat [of worldly existence].

6. To praise them and to remember them bestows every perfection. And this [praise] is made by a certain jiva — Jiva, who does not know which of them comes first and which after.[4]

7. Forgive my offences, O great souls whose hearts are with Krishna — saints who see no faults in others, eager to show mercy to the wretched.

8. As you are here, as [the knowers] truly know you, so may Bhagavan make [me] speak, impelled by His command.

Gaura and His family

9. I praise Shachi and Jagannatha, who are Yashoda and Nanda;[5] both their sons are Vishvarupa and the divine Vishvambhara.

10. Then I praise Vishvarupa, king among sannyasis, called Shankararanya — the wondrous elder brother of Chaitanya.[6]

11. I praise Sri Gaurachandra, whose body is made of rasa, the abode of a treasury of compassion: taking the mood of Radhika in order to relish Sri Hari, to deliver the hosts of souls stained by the filth of Kali and devoid of every [good] disposition, He joyfully appeared with throngs of His associates in Sri Navadvipa.[7]

12. I praise the goddess Lakshmipriya, and then Vishnupriya; then the divine Gadadhara, who is truly the Lord's second body.[8]

13. He is the disciple of Vidyanidhi, a mine of the rasa of devotion to the Lord; this is the steadfast Gadadhara, beloved of all the devotees.

Nityananda and His line

14. I praise Padmavati and her husband Haddipa Pandita:[9] the merciful Nityananda became their son.

15. I praise the divine Nityananda — Balabhadra, the Lord Himself, the root of bliss, the fearless one, the deliverer of the world, the guru.

16. He is both purusha and prakriti, by the distinction of outer and inner: in different bodies He serves Sri Krishna.[10]

17. I praise Sri Vasudha-devi, beloved of Nityananda Prabhu, daughter of Sri Suryadasa, awakened by the power of the Lord.[11]

18. I praise Sri Jahnavi-devi, the disciple of Sri Puri-Ishvara, whom the knowers of secrets call Ananga-manjari.[12]

19. When the Lord had taken sannyasa and gone away, by His command she serves Nityananda — His very own form — with supreme love, firm in her vow.[13]

20. Ever drawn by separation, the mistress went to Vrindavana; when she wished to see Gopinatha, He pulled the knot of her garment.

21. And the goddess whose knot had been pulled said to Him — the dawning of rasa: "Soon I will come to You — to the place beside Your feet."[14]

22. I praise Lord Virachandra — Hari, the Lord Sri Chaitanya, appearing a second time, the deliverer of the three worlds,[15]

23. devoted to the Vedic dharma and yet detached, free from egotism, without pride, self-controlled — the servant of Jahnavi here.[16]

24. The daughter of Nityananda Prabhu, whose nature is melted in Radha and Krishna, the wife of Madhava Acharya, whose form is being, consciousness and bliss,

25. the chief — Sri Prema-manjari, the excellent mother of the worlds — I praise Ganga, the giver of prema, the purifier of the three worlds.[17]

26. This Ganga, the disciple of Jahnavi, together with the purifying lords […], purifies the three worlds.[18]

27. [I praise] Madhava, the ornament of the twice-born, who appeared wishing to take as wife Ganga, who had descended [to earth] — like Madhava in form, his body full of rasa — named Prema.[19]

28. A disciple of Ishvara Puri, gone to the far shore of all the darshanas, foremost among the devotees of Vishnu, adorned with a host of good qualities,

29. the wise one examined them and, setting aside karma and knowledge, established the truth of love for Krishna — an ocean of mercy.

Madhavendra, Advaita and His line

30. The ornament of the ancient line of ascetics, lord of sages, devoted to the first guru-Lord — I praise Sri Madhavendra, who made devotion to Hari manifest.[20]

31. I praise Advaita, the merciful, the supremely compassionate — the very abode of Shambhu in person: by His austerities the son of Sri Shachi was brought here together with His associates.[21]

32. [I praise] His beloved named Sita — the primal energy of Kailasa, mother of the three worlds: pleased with her, Sri Jagannatha bestowed His grace on the three worlds.[22]

33. Among His sons, the one called Achyutananda — him I praise, supreme bliss, the beloved of Krishna Chaitanya;

34. the one called Achyuta, who knows the truth of Sri Krishna Chaitanya, servant of the steadfast Sri Gadadhara, an ocean of good qualities.

35. Those followers of Sri Advaita and [His] sons who wholly worshipped with devotion the merciful Sri Chaitanya-Hari, the son of Shachi, as the Lord of all — [are worthy of praise]. But many others were struck down by God — them we do not honour; save Achyuta, they are abandoned: I pass them over.[23]

The associates at Navadvipa

36. I praise Srivasa — Narada; Malini — the [Lord's] second mother; then Narayani-devi, who partook of the nectar of His lips.[24]

37. I praise Narayani's son — Vrindavana Dasa, the excellent, who described the qualities of Sri Nityananda and Chaitanya.[25]

38. I praise Haridasa — the abode of Brahma, who made the holy name of Hari manifest — and Jagadananda Pandita, another form of Vani.[26]

39. Then I praise Gopinatha, who offered praise to Chaitanya;[27] then Murari Gupta, the great soul, Hanuman.[28]

40. I praise Sri Chandrashekhara, ever cool as the moon; Acharyaratna; Govinda and Garuda, whose minds are with Gaura.[29]

41. I praise also Mukunda Datta, the great soul, maddened by singing the pure qualities of Sri Krishna, praised by the kinnaras.[30]

42. I praise Vasudeva Datta, full of greatness: by the touch of the breeze from his body one at once attains prema.[31]

43. Damodara and Pitambara, Jagannatha, Shankara and Narayana — these five, free from desires, I praise — saints, great souls.[32]

44. I praise Nilambara Chakravarti, renowned as the Lord's maternal grandfather, who cast the horoscope that contained what was to come.[33]

45. I praise Sri Rama Pandita, devoted to the welfare of all beings,[34] and Narayana Gupta, the great soul, the one abode of virtues.[35]

46. I praise Gangadasa, who lived in Navadvipa, the supreme guru, and Sri Vishnudasa, and the one called Sri Sudarshana.[36]

47. I praise Sadashiva, Vidyanidhi and Shrigarbha, Shrinidhi, Buddhimanta and the excellent Srila Shuklambara —

48. these six great souls, brahmacharis full of love;[37] and Sri Ramadasa, and Kavichandra, an ocean of mercy.[38]

49. I praise Vijaya the scribe,[39] and the pure Acharya Ratneshvara,[40] and the generous Shridhara, the renowned,[41] and Vanamali together with his son.[42]

50. I praise Halayudha and Vasudeva, the pure, whose hearts are with Sri Chaitanya, and Ishana Dasa, the object of Shachi-devi's affection.[43]

51. With humility I praise Shriman and Sanjaya, the merciful: their mark is supreme bliss, their hearts are given to Chaitanya.[44]

52. Garuda, Kashishvara, Jagadisha and Gangadasa, both, the sweet Krishnananda I praise, and the excellent Rama-Mukunda.[45]

53. I praise Vallabha Acharya, whose daughter Lakshmi captivates the heart: rich in virtues, he gave her to the son of Shachi, the bridegroom.[46]

54. Then I praise Sanatana Pandita, rich in virtues, who gave his daughter Vishnupriya to the son of Shachi.

55. I praise the brahmana Kashinatha, and Vanamali Acharya, who conceived and arranged the marriage of Lakshmi-devi.[47]

The sannyasis

56. Then I praise Ishvara Puri: accepting him as His guru, the Lord, called Chaitanya, considered Himself blessed.[48]

57. I praise also Sri Keshava Bharati, honoured by the sannyasis, from whom Mahaprabhu took the renunciation of dharma.[49]

58. Then I praise Ramachandra Puri, [he] to whom the Lord always yielded;[50] [I praise] Sri Puri Paramananda, called Uddhava, dear to Hari.[51]

59. Then I praise Damodara Puri, like unto Satyabhama;[52] I praise Narasimha Tirtha, then Sukhananda Puri;

60. then the one called Govindananda, and Brahmananda Puri; the one called Nrisimhananda, and Satyananda Bharati.

61. I praise Garuda Avadhuta, endowed with wondrous prema; then I praise Vishnu Puri, who composed the Bhakti-ratnavali;[53]

62. and Brahmananda Svarupa, then Krishnananda Puri; Sri Raghava Puri I praise with devotion and supreme joy;

63. I praise Vishveshvarananda, then Sri Keshava Puri; I praise then Anubhavananda and Chidananda, pure of heart.[54]

The Gosvamis of Vrindavana

64. I praise the two masters — Rupa and Sanatana, supreme bliss, detached and merciful, dwelling in Vrindavana.

65. Perfumed by even a trace of the fragrance of their lotus feet, may I, named Jiva, serve them here, birth after birth.[55]

66. Sri Rupa, endowed with the Lord's power, examining all the shastras, established the supreme truth — love for Krishna — an ocean of mercy.[56]

67. Sanatana, seeking nothing for himself, composed the Hari-bhakti-vilasa and other works — what devotees ought to do — under the name of Gopala Bhatta.[57]

68. And the wise Gopala Bhatta, living near Sanatana, devoted to the qualities of Hari, happily spent his days and nights here;

69. constantly hearing what he told of the Lord's form and qualities, he truly considered himself blessed in every way.[58]

70. I praise Raghunatha Dasa, who dwells at Radha-kunda, who knows the whole truth of Chaitanya, the best, who has given up every other feeling.[59]

71. I praise the Gosvami named Raghava, who sports at Govardhana, a great soul, wandering [there] in a special mood.[60]

72. With humility I praise Raghunatha Bhatta, teacher of the Sri Bhagavata,[61] Lokanatha Gosvami and the pure Bhugarbha Thakura.[62]

73. With joy I praise the pure Prabodhananda Sarasvati, by whom the Chandramrita was composed, whose disciple is Gopala Bhatta.[63]

74. Then I praise Kashishvara,[64] then Shuddha Sarasvati,[65] and then Raghavananda, imbued with the mood of Nityananda,[66]

75. in whose house the son of Padmavati, in play, joined a kadamba flower to a pomegranate tree.[67]

The associates in Gauda and Orissa

76. I praise Purandara — here truly equal to Angada: a certain best of brahmanas saw his tail in his house.[68]

77. I praise the best of Mishras — Kashi, dwelling in Utkala, the spotless: in his abode lived Gaurahari, worshipped by his devotion.[69]

78. Then I praise Vaninatha, whose life is Sri Jagannatha;[70] then I praise Ramananda, full of all the marks of devotion:

79. from the cloud of his mouth the merciful Chaitanya rained upon the earth the nectar — a multitude of truths about devotion to Him.[71]

80. Then I praise Vakreshvara, the heart of the Lord, who is attained with the greatest difficulty: in his presence the Lord performed kirtana in the bliss of prema.[72]

81. I praise that Sugriva Mishra — Govinda, the best of the twice-born, whose greatness in bhakti-yoga is renowned on earth:[73]

82. so that the Lord might go to the forest [of Vrindavana], he built from the land of Sri Navadvipa across the whole land of Gauda a bridge made of mind.[74]

83. I praise here Gadadhara Dasa — the daughter of Vrishabhanu, whose body is non-different from Sri Krishna, the embodiment of mahabhava.[75]

84. I praise Sadashiva the vaidya: at his mere touch even a stone at once melts — what then of the living![76]

85. I praise Shivananda Sena, devoted to firm faith and peace, who knows nothing but the Lord's feet.[77]

86. I praise that Mukunda Dasa whose son is Raghunandana — truly Kama, the husband of Rati — the one who fed Gopala.[78]

87. The devotion of Sri Mukunda Dasa is sung by people to this day: seeing a peacock feather, drawn away by love for Krishna,

88. he at once lost his senses, immersed in supreme bliss, and, unaware of the outer world, fell down from his high seat.[79]

89. With devotion I praise Narahari Dasa, who gave the play of his feelings to Chaitanya, called Madhumati — pure, blessed, seeing nothing but Krishna.[80]

90. And this Raghunandana is most worthy, the disciple of Narahari, righteous, honoured; saintly in character from childhood, pure, his heart cleansed by devotion.

91. I praise then Raghunatha Dasa,[81] Purandara Acharya, generous in deeds, and Sri Krishnadasa, slave of Hari's feet, gentle, merciful, loving the people of Bhagavan.[82]

92. I praise Paramananda Pandita, the Lord's fellow student,[83] and Devananda Pandita, the reciter of the Sri Bhagavata.[84]

93. I praise Acharyaratna, who knows the inmost essence of prema,[85] and Govinda, Madhavananda and Vasu Ghosha — treasuries of virtue.[86]

94. I praise the Dasa named Purushottama, endowed with majesty, who made the karavi flower in his ears smell like a lotus.[87]

95. I praise Abhirama Dasa, who on earth is called Shridama: a log that only many could lift he playfully made into a flute.[88]

96. I praise Sri Sundarananda, the form of the cowherd Sudama: his disciple gave the name of Hari here even to tigers.[89]

97. I praise also Sri Gauridasa — the cowherd called Subala: led by him, Advaita Thakura [came] to Utkala, to supreme bliss.[90]

98. By him the Deities of Sri Chaitanya and Nityananda were made manifest in person: by the sight of these Deities the bonds of karma are at once destroyed.[91]

99. Then I praise Parameshvara Thakura, the self-luminous: dancing, he made the jackals hear the name of Hari.[92]

100. Then I praise Pippalai, overwhelmed by a childlike mood — I praise Kamalakara Dasa, whose bliss is sankirtana.[93]

101. I praise the one called Purushottama Tirtha, the crown of rasikas;[94] then I praise Kaliya Krishnadasa, overwhelmed by prema alone.[95]

102. I praise Sharnga Thakura, who revealed his greatness: he gave snakes places in his own dwelling.[96]

103. Then I praise Makaradhvaja, beautiful, the one abode of virtues, who always sings kirtana to Krishna near the Lord.[97]

104. Then Bhagavatacharya,[98] Sri Kaviraja Mishra,[99] and then Ananta Acharya, who lived at Navadvipa.[100]

105. I praise the Pandita named Madhu[101] and the one called Govinda Acharya, who zealously described the secret of Radha and Krishna.[102]

106. Then I praise Sarvabhauma Bhattacharya — Brihaspati;[103] then Prataparudra, by whom the Lord's six arms were seen.[104]

107. I praise the brahmana Raghunatha, the physician Sri Vishnudasa; I praise also his brother — Vanamali Dasa;[105]

108. Vipradasa of Utkala and then the brahmana Haridasa: by them Hari, the son of Sri Shachi, was won over by love.[106]

109. I praise Kanai Khutiya, a treasury of the rasa of love for Krishna, whose two auspicious sons are Jagannatha and Balarama.[107]

110. I praise Jagannatha, at whose singing the trees here weep, losing themselves, and the compassionate Balarama the Oriya, to whom Baladeva and Jagannatha are subject.[108]

111. With devotion I praise the Thakura named Govindananda: for the Lord's sake he built a bridge made of mind.[109]

112. Then I praise Kashishvara, the one called Sri Simheshvara, and Shivananda Pandita, and then Chandaneshvara.[110]

113. With the highest feeling I praise Madhava Pattanayaka; then I praise Hari Bhatta and Baladeva Mahiti;

114. then Subuddhi Mishra and Shrinatha, the best of Mishras; I praise Sri Tulasi Mishra and Kashinatha Mahiti.[111]

115. Ramananda, first in the Vasu line, together with his family;[112] both Purushottama Brahmachari and the Pandita named Madhu,[113]

116. servants of the Lord Sri Chaitanya, merciful great souls. All these are full of great compassion, seeking nothing for themselves.

117. I praise the brahmana Ramachandra and Shridhara Pandita, generous in virtues;[114] I praise Yadu Kavichandra and Dhananjaya Pandita, who gave away his wealth:[115]

118. renowned is his renunciation — he gave all he had to the Lord, and this magnanimous pandita himself took only a pot [for alms] and a loincloth.[116]

119. [I praise] Pandita Sri Jagannatha, then Acharya Lakshmana; then I praise Krishnadasa and Pandita Suryadasa.[117]

120. Then I praise Krishna's flute — Vamshivadana Thakura;[118] Murari Chaitanya Dasa, who played with pythons terrible as Yama.[119]

121. I praise Jagannatha Sena, Paramananda Gupta,[120] the boy called Ramadasa[121] and then Kavichandra.

122. I praise Sri Vallabhacharya,[122] then Kamsari Sena; then I praise Bhaskara — the form of Vishvakarma.[123]

123. I praise Balarama Dasa, specially distinguished as a teacher of song, who serves Nityananda Prabhu — supreme bliss.[124]

124. I praise Mahesha Pandita, overwhelmed by madness for Krishna;[125] I praise the dancer, the Pandita — the one called Jagadisha Pandita;[126]

125. and Thakura Krishnadasa, wholly devoted to Nityananda, who with devotion kept the divine Nityananda in his house.

126. Gauridasa went there, took his Lord, spoke [a word] and led Him away: who else is so devoted to Him, so absorbed [in Him]?

127. Who can describe the greatness of Sri Krishnadasa's prema? From separation from Nityananda he was as one mad for seven months;

128. giving him His sight once more, He Himself calmed him.[127] I praise then the best of avadhutas — the one called Paramananda.[128]

129. [I praise] Anadi Gangadasa[129] and Pandita Vilasi; I praise the Dasa named Sri Yadunatha, sweet of heart.[130]

130. I praise Sri Purushottama Tirtha, Jagannatha and the one called Rama, Raghunatha Tirtha, the blessed Upendra Ashrama and Hariharananda;[131]

131. I praise Vasudeva Tirtha, then Srila Ananta Puri; and Mukunda Kaviraja, and then Rajiva Pandita.[132]

132. I praise Sri Jiva Pandita, rich in all virtues, whose devotion to the feet of Sri Chaitanya-chandra is spotless.[133]

133. I praise the one called Shishu Krishnadasa, nurtured by Sri Nityananda, whose body is full of happiness, blessed and pure.[134]

134. I praise Uddharana Datta, who together with Nityananda wandered through all the holy places — pure of soul, seeking nothing for himself.[135]

135. I praise Sri Madhava Acharya, who composed the Krishna-mangala,[136] Nrisimha Chaitanya Dasa,[137] and then Krishnadasa.

136. I praise Sri Shankara Ghosha, the auspicious, best of those who own nothing: by playing the dampha this divine [devotee] delighted the son of Shachi.[138]

137. Again and again I praise the Vaishnavas and their feet; [I praise] Shivananda Chakravarti[139] and the one called Sri Narayana.

Conclusion

138. To praise each of them and likewise to utter their names — of those who shine with special qualities and are endowed with endless virtues,

139. of the great-souled Vaishnavas, whose truth I do not know — is equal to [uttering] the name of Tirthapada[140] and is the supreme cause of purification.

140. Madhavendra has many disciples, spread over the earth: chief among them are Advaita, the bestowers of good, and [those headed by] Sankarshana Puri;

141. then those headed by Ishvara Puri, some headed by Govinda, those headed by Sri Paramananda Puri — the purifiers of the world.[141]

142. The disciples of Ishvara Puri are Gaurachandra and Jahnavi; the disciple of Sankarshana Puri is Nityananda Prabhu Himself.[142]

143. All who descended [into the world] as former devotees of Chaitanya-chandra received the mercy of Madhavendra through one door or another.

144. The one called Madhavendra Puri is the first devotee and guru; his host are the servants of Krishna Chaitanya, the givers of bhakti.[143]

145. Some [came] through Advaita, others through Sita, through the son of Padmavati, likewise through Jahnavi;

146. some through Gadadhara, likewise through Sri Rupa; some through Sanatana, some through Haridasa;

147. some from Raghunatha Dasa, some through Vakreshvara, some through Kashishvara, and likewise through Narahari;

148. some here through Ramananda, others through Sarvabhauma; and likewise other devotees here are servants of others.

149. Therefore they took refuge in Sri Krishna Chaitanya Himself, worshipped by all, the guru of the world, who in person comprises all these forms.

150. The devotees whom Krishna brought down here — His eternal associates — those who are praised and named [here] for special reasons —

151. servants, energies, and also parts and personal forms: the distinction among them is to be learnt from the Sri Bhagavatamrita.[144]

152. And those who, seeing the distribution of prema, came here longing for it — they too are worthy of reverence: they are purified by the touch of devotion to the Supreme.

153. This Vaishnava-vandana, which gives happiness and brings the fulfilment of all aims — a reckoning of the glorious sampradaya of Madhva, bestowing devotion to Sri Krishna, full of the qualities of Sri Chaitanya Mahaprabhu, [arranged] according to the order of His devotees — I, Jiva, have completed and, having made it, laid at [their] feet.[145]

Thus ends the Vaishnava-vandana of the devotees of Chaitanya, following the sampradaya of Madhva, composed by Sri Jiva Gosvami. Obeisance to Sri Chaitanya-chandra! Obeisance to Sri Nityananda-chandra! Obeisance to Sri Advaita-chandra!

Translator's notes

1. This verse is Jiva's own signature: Rupa Gosvami, his uncle and teacher, stands between his elder brother Sanatana and his younger brother Vallabha (Anupama), Jiva's father. "Refuge of Jiva" is a pun: "the refuge of living beings (jivas)" and "the refuge of Jiva". According to Majumdar, the same verse closes Jiva's commentary on the Ujjvala-nilamani; this and the other places where "Jiva" is named (vv. 6, 65, 153) are the basis for attributing the vandana to Jiva Gosvami. The Bhakti-ratnakara does not list it among Jiva's works, and one of the two known manuscripts (according to Majumdar) lacks the first seven verses. The authorship remains disputed (see the preface).

2. Bhagavata Purana 11.5.32.

3. The second half of the verse is corrupt (the edition marks it with a question mark); the translation is approximate. The sense seems to be that Krishna appearing as Chaitanya and Nityananda are one Lord in two forms.

4. A pun: "jiva", "a living being", and the name Jiva. "Not knowing the order" is an apology for not listing the associates by seniority (cf. GGD 212).

5. GGD 37: Yashoda and Nanda became Shachi and Jagannatha Purandara.

6. Shankararanya is Vishvarupa's sannyasa name (CC Madhya 9). According to GGD 58–62 Vishvarupa is Sankarshana, who on his departure merged with Nityananda.

7. Cf. CC Adi 1.5–6 and 4: Krishna took Radha's mood and lustre in order to relish Himself. The word rendered "joyfully" is corrupt in the text.

8. According to GGD 147–153 Gadadhara Pandita is Radha (the "energy of the devotee" in the pancha-tattva, GGD 11). He received mantra from Pundarika Vidyanidhi (CB Madhya 7).

9. Haddipa (Hadai) Pandita, Nityananda's father, of Ekachakra; GGD 40 calls him Mukunda and identifies Nityananda's parents with Rohini and Vasudeva.

10. That is, Nityananda-Balarama serves Krishna both in the outer, male form (as Balarama and Shesha — cf. GGD 64; CC Adi 5) and in an inner, female form. The vandana does not say which female form is meant; below (v. 18) it calls Jahnava Ananga-manjari (cf. GGD 66).

11. Vasudha and Jahnava were daughters of Suryadasa Sarakhela (GGD 65: Varuni and Revati). "Awakened by the power of the Lord" may allude to Nityananda's healing of Vasudha, described in the Nityananda-vamsha-vistara (ch. 1).

12. "Puri-Ishvara" is Ishvara Puri: below (v. 142) the vandana plainly calls Gaurachandra and Jahnavi his disciples. This is found only in the vandanas; it is not in the CC or the CB, and chronologically it is difficult (Ishvara Puri left the world soon after the Lord's sannyasa). Ananga-manjari is Radha's younger sister; GGD 66 gives both opinions — that she is Vasudha and that she is Jahnavi.

13. That is, Nityananda married at Mahaprabhu's command (cf. Nityananda-vamsha-vistara, ch. 1).

14. Gopinatha is Madhu Pandita's Deity in Vrindavana. The tradition that Jahnava in Vrindavana was united with Gopinatha (He drew her to Himself, and to this day her Deity stands beside Him) is told here briefly: "He pulled the knot of her garment (nivi)." This is a lila of the Deity and of Ananga-manjari, Radha's sister — a sign of His intimacy, nothing worldly. Jahnava's journeys to Vrindavana are described in the Bhakti-ratnakara and the Nityananda-vamsha-vistara.

15. According to GGD 67 Virachandra is the One who lies on the ocean of milk, non-different from Chaitanya; tradition regards him as Mahaprabhu's second appearance (cf. Nityananda-vamsha-vistara, ch. 1).

16. Here Virachandra is called not Nityananda's son (as in CC Adi 11 and in Devakinandana, Part 2, v. 12) but only "the servant of Jahnavi", i.e. her disciple; Majumdar too draws attention to this.

17. Ganga is Nityananda's daughter; GGD 69: she is the river Ganga, and her husband Madhava is King Shantanu. "The chief — Sri Prema-manjari" may identify Ganga with Prema-manjari (according to GGD 187 Prema-manjari is Bhugarbha); the reading is unclear.

18. The second half of the verse is corrupt (something about Brahma-Viranchi: the Ganga, born from Vishnu's foot, purifies the three worlds).

19. Madhava Acharya, Ganga's husband (GGD 69). A pun: Ganga is both the river and Nityananda's daughter; "Madhava" is both his name and a name of Krishna. Not to be confused with Madhava Acharya, the author of the Krishna-mangala (v. 135). That he was a disciple of Ishvara Puri (v. 28) is reported only by the vandanas.

20. Madhavendra Puri is "the root of the tree of devotion" (CC Adi 9); GGD 22–25 — a link in the succession from Madhva. "To the first guru-Lord" — the reading is unclear.

21. GGD 76: Advaita is Sadashiva; "the abode of Shambhu" (Shiva) points to the same. Advaita called the Lord by worshipping with Ganga water and tulasi leaves (CC Adi 3; CB Adi 2).

22. According to GGD 86 Sita is Yogamaya; the vandana calls her "the primal energy of Kailasa" as the consort of Advaita-Sadashiva. The end of the verse is unclear; the translation is approximate.

23. Cf. CC Adi 12: Advaita's followers divided; those who accepted the view of Achyutananda (that Chaitanya is the Supreme Lord) are recognised as true, the rest as fallen away. Achyutananda, a disciple of Gadadhara Pandita — GGD 87–88. The verse is in a long metre; its second half is partly corrupt in the text.

24. GGD 90: Srivasa is the sage Narada; GGD 42: Malini is Krishna's nurse Ambika. To Narayani, Srivasa's niece, the Lord gave the remnants of His food (CB); GGD 43: she is Kilimbika.

25. Vrindavana Dasa, author of the Chaitanya-bhagavata (GGD 109: Vedavyasa).

26. GGD 93: Haridasa is Brahma together with Prahlada. Jagadananda here is "another form of Vani" (Sarasvati, goddess of speech); so too in Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 62: "Sarasvati herself"). According to GGD 51 he is a manifestation of Satyabhama.

27. Probably Gopinatha Acharya: in Puri he argued the Lord's divinity before Sarvabhauma (CC Madhya 6); Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 21) has "counted as Brahma for his praise of the Lord", which agrees with GGD 75 (Gopinatha Acharya is Brahma).

28. GGD 91.

29. GGD 112: Chandrashekhara is Chandra (the Moon). Acharyaratna is, according to CC Adi 10, the title of this same Chandrashekhara; but GGD 103 and both vandanas name Acharyaratna separately (he is mentioned again below, v. 93). Govinda and Garuda — according to GGD 116 favourites of the Lord, in Vaikuntha Pundarikaksha and Kumuda.

30. Mukunda Datta, the singer (GGD 140: the singer of Vraja Madhukantha).

31. Vasudeva Datta, Mukunda's brother (GGD 140: Madhuvrata); cf. CC Madhya 15 on his compassion for all souls.

32. Five brothers: Damodara Pandita (GGD 159: Shaibya), Pitambara (GGD 168: Kaveri), Jagannatha, Shankara Pandita (GGD 157: Bhadra) and Narayana. In Devakinandana (Part 2, vv. 27–28) Pitambara is Damodara's elder brother, and all five are "great renunciants".

33. GGD 104: Nilambara foretold Gaura's birth and is therefore called Garga. On the newborn's horoscope — CC Adi 13–14.

34. Sri Rama Pandita, Srivasa's younger brother (GGD 90: the sage Parvata).

35. The reading is unclear: "Sri Gupta Narayana"; Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 30) has "Gupta Narayana", the Vaishnavabhidhana (Part 3, v. 12) simply Narayana after Murari Gupta. Possibly Narayana Pandita (CC Adi 10).

36. Young Nimai's teachers: Gangadasa (GGD 53, together with Sudarshana — Vasishtha), Vishnu (Pandita) and Sudarshana (CB Adi).

37. That these six were brahmacharis is reported only by the vandanas (Majumdar too points this out). Sadashiva is Sadashiva Pandita (in whose house at Navadvipa Nityananda lived); Vidyanidhi is apparently Pundarika Vidyanidhi; Shrigarbha and Shrinidhi — GGD 103 (the nine "nidhis"); Buddhimanta Khan, according to CB Adi 15, was a wealthy townsman who bore the cost of the Lord's marriage to Vishnupriya; Shuklambara — GGD 191.

38. Ramadasa and Kavichandra — in Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 33) "Ramadasa Kavichandra"; in the Vaishnavabhidhana (Part 3, v. 15) two persons. Kavichandra — GGD 171 (Manohara).

39. Vijaya Dasa, the copyist of books, to whom the Lord gave the name Ratnabahu (CC Adi 10).

40. Ratneshvara Acharya is unknown from other sources; at this place Devakinandana has Nandana Acharya (Part 2, v. 33; Majumdar notes this too).

41. Shridhara Kholaveca (GGD 133).

42. The poor brahmana Vanamali, who came with his son and saw Krishna in Gaura (GGD 114: the brahmana Sudama). Not to be confused with Vanamali Acharya (v. 55).

43. Halayudha — GGD 134 (Balarama's friend Prabala). Vasudeva — in Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 36) "Vasudeva Bhadra". Ishana — the servant in the Lord's household (CC Adi 10; CB).

44. Shriman Pandita (who carried the torch during the night kirtanas, CC Adi 10) and probably Mukunda-Sanjaya, in whose house Nimai taught (CB Adi).

45. Garuda (Pandita) — GGD 117; Kashishvara — GGD 137 (the servant Bhringara); Jagadisha (Pandita) — GGD 143; Gangadasa (the second) — GGD 111; Krishnananda — GGD 167 (Kalavati). "Rama-Mukunda" — the text has "Raya Mukunda"; Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 39) and the Vaishnavabhidhana (Part 3, v. 17) have "Sri Rama and Mukunda"; perhaps two persons.

46. Vallabhacharya, Lakshmipriya's father (GGD 44–45).

47. GGD 49–50: Vanamali was the matchmaker for the marriage with Lakshmipriya, Kashinatha for the marriage with Vishnupriya (cf. CB Adi 10 and 15). Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 42) names both as arrangers of the Lord's marriage.

48. Initiation at Gaya (CC Adi 17; CB Adi 17); GGD 23, 25.

49. Sannyasa at Katwa (CC Madhya 3; CB, end of the Madhya-khanda); GGD 52: Keshava Bharati is the sage Sandipani. "Renunciation of dharma" is sannyasa, the giving up of varnashrama.

50. The reading is unclear ("always subject to the Lord"?). Ramachandra Puri, a disciple of Madhavendra, reproached the Lord for eating much, and the Lord reduced His food (CC Antya 8); GGD 92: Vibhishana, into whom Jatila entered. Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 45): "the Lord said he belonged to Rama's host".

51. GGD 118: Paramananda Puri is Uddhava.

52. Damodara Puri is one of the eight "Puris" of GGD 97 (the eight siddhis); "like unto Satyabhama" — so also in Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 46); in GGD 51 Satyabhama is Jagadananda.

53. The Bhakti-ratnavali is an anthology of verses on devotion from the Bhagavata, compiled by Vishnu Puri. Narasimha Tirtha, Nrisimhananda, Satyananda Bharati, Chidananda — GGD 100 (the nine yogendras); Sukhananda, Govinda, Krishnananda, Raghava, Keshava — GGD 97 (the eight "Puris"); Garuda Avadhuta — GGD 101.

54. At this place the second line of Devakinandana's couplet (Part 2, v. 52) is missing in the edition; cf. Vaishnavabhidhana (Part 3, v. 22): "Sri Sacchidananda and Anubhavananda".

55. The author's signature (see note to v. 1). Cf. the end of Jiva's commentary on the Bhagavata (Laghu-toshani), where he likewise names himself.

56. I.e. in the Bhakti-rasamrita-sindhu and other books (CC Madhya 19 — the Lord's instructions to Rupa at Prayaga).

57. CC Madhya 1 calls the Hari-bhakti-vilasa a work of Sanatana; the book, however, is issued under the name of Gopala Bhatta. The vandana explains this by Sanatana's humility.

58. Gopala Bhatta as a boy saw the Lord at Shrirangam (CC Madhya 9; GGD 184).

59. GGD 185–186.

60. Raghava Gosvami (Pandita) of Govardhana — GGD 162 (Champakalata), author of the Bhakti-ratna-prakasha; guide of Srinivasa and Narottama in Vraja (Bhakti-ratnakara).

61. CC Antya 13: Raghunatha Bhatta recited the Bhagavata in Rupa Gosvami's assembly; GGD 185.

62. GGD 187: Bhugarbha is Prema-manjari, Lokanatha is Lila-manjari.

63. The Chandramrita is the Chaitanya-chandramrita (see ../chaitanya-chandramrita/). Prabodhananda — GGD 163 (Tungavidya). That Gopala Bhatta was his disciple (and nephew) is also reported by the Bhakti-ratnakara.

64. Here, among the people of Vrindavana, probably Kashishvara Gosvami (GGD 166: Shashirekha); Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 59) has "renowned in the Mathura-mandala".

65. Shuddha Sarasvati is unknown from the CC and CB; he appears in Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 60) and in the Vaishnavabhidhana.

66. Apparently Raghava Pandita of Panihati (at this place Devakinandana, Part 2, v. 63, has "Pandita Raghava").

67. CB Antya 5: in Raghava's house at Panihati Nityananda wished for kadamba flowers — and they blossomed on a lemon (jambira) tree. Here the tree is a pomegranate; Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 84) ascribes the miracle to Sundarananda.

68. GGD 91: Purandara (Pandita) is Angada, Vali's son, of Rama's army. So too in Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 64).

69. GGD 193: Kashi Mishra is Sairandhri (Kubja). The Lord lived in his house in Puri (CC Madhya 10).

70. Vaninatha (Pattanayaka), Ramananda Raya's brother, who served the Lord in Puri (CC Madhya 10; Antya 9).

71. The Lord's conversations with Ramananda Raya on the Godavari (CC Madhya 8); GGD 120–124.

72. CC Adi 10: Vakreshvara danced without a break for seventy-two praharas, and the Lord Himself sang for him; GGD 71–72 (the vyuha Aniruddha).

73. GGD 91: Sugriva is Govindananda; the vandana calls him "Sugriva Mishra — Govinda". Below (v. 111) the bridge of mind is ascribed to Govindananda separately.

74. I.e. when the Lord intended to go to Vrindavana by way of Gauda (CC Madhya 1 and 16), this devotee built a bridge for Him in his mind — according to Majumdar, this is found only in the vandanas. "The forest" is Vrindavana.

75. GGD 154–155: Gadadhara Dasa is Chandrakanti, a manifestation of Radha's splendour, and Purnananda entered into him; on him in the mood of a gopi — CB Antya 5. The vandana calls him "the daughter of Vrishabhanu", apparently in the sense of his absorption in Radha's mood; in GGD (147–153) Radha in Gaura-lila is Gadadhara Pandita.

76. Sadashiva Kaviraja — GGD 156 (Chandravali).

77. Shivananda Sena, father of Kavi Karnapura (GGD 4, 176).

78. Mukunda Dasa of Shrikhanda (GGD 175: Vrinda-devi), Narahari's brother; his son Raghunandana is according to GGD 70 the vyuha Pradyumna, i.e. Kamadeva. According to tradition the boy Raghunandana fed sweets to the Deity of Gopinatha (Gopala), and He ate from his hands.

79. CC Madhya 15: the court physician Mukunda, seeing a fan of peacock feathers above the king's head, remembered Krishna and fell unconscious from his high seat.

80. GGD 177: Narahari Sarakara is Madhumati.

81. Probably Raghunatha the vaidya, "Upadhyaya" (Part 3, v. 28); not to be confused with Raghunatha Dasa Gosvami (v. 70).

82. Krishnadasa — perhaps Krishnadasa of Akaihat (in Devakinandana at this place, Part 2, v. 79).

83. Paramananda is called "the Lord's fellow student" also in Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 79 — "Paramananda Puri") and in the Vaishnavabhidhana (Part 3, v. 30).

84. GGD 106: Devananda Pandita is the sage Bhaguri. His offence and forgiveness are described in the CB (Madhya- and Antya-khandas).

85. See note to v. 40.

86. The Ghosha brothers, kirtana singers (GGD 188).

87. Purushottama Dasa (Nagara Purushottama), son of Sadashiva Kaviraja (CC Adi 11; GGD 131), is Devakinandana's guru, who describes this miracle in more detail (Part 2, vv. 87–94).

88. GGD 126: Abhirama is Shridama, who carried a log that only thirty-two men could lift.

89. GGD 127: Sundarananda is Sudama. The word rendered "tigers" (dvipin — leopard, tiger) is not quite clear in the text.

90. GGD 128: Gauridasa Pandita is Subala. That Gauridasa brought Advaita to Utkala (Orissa) is reported only by the vandanas (cf. Devakinandana, Part 2, v. 99).

91. The Deities of Gaura-Nitai manifested to Gauridasa at Ambika-Kalna (cf. the padas on Gauridasa in ../padas/).

92. GGD 132: Parameshvara Dasa is Krishna's friend Arjuna.

93. GGD 128: Kamalakara Pippalai is Mahabala.

94. Unclear: in Devakinandana at this place (Part 2, v. 97) — "Ratnakara's son Purushottama, who lives in Nadia". The word "Tirtha" may be corrupt here (below, v. 130, there is a sannyasi Purushottama).

95. Kala Krishnadasa — GGD 132 (Lavanga); CC Adi 11.

96. Saranga Thakura (Sharngadhara, Sarangamurari) — GGD 172 (Nandimukhi). The story of the snakes is known only from the vandanas.

97. Makaradhvaja Kara — GGD 141 (the actor Chandramukha); GGD 168 names Makaradhvaja and Sukeshi.

98. Bhagavatacharya (Raghunatha), author of the Krishna-prema-tarangini — GGD 194–207.

99. Kaviraja Mishra is unknown from the CC and CB; he appears in Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 102) and in the Vaishnavabhidhana.

100. Ananta Acharya of Navadvipa; GGD 165 (Sudevi) — Anantacharya Gosvami (Majumdar distinguishes two Ananta Acharyas).

101. Madhu Pandita — probably the one who served the Deity of Gopinatha in Vrindavana (cf. v. 20). The reading is unclear; according to Majumdar, it may be an epithet of Govinda Acharya.

102. GGD 41: Govinda Acharya, composer of songs and verses, is Paurnamasi. Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 103): "who composed the wondrous dhamali of Radha and Krishna".

103. GGD 119.

104. I.e. according to the vandanas the Lord showed Prataparudra His six-armed form (so also Devakinandana, Part 2, v. 105). According to CC Madhya 6 the six-armed form was shown to Sarvabhauma; grammatically the verse may refer to both.

105. In Devakinandana (Part 2, vv. 106–107): the brahmana Yadunatha, Vipradasa the Oriya, the brahmana Haridasa, the physician Vishnudasa, whose singing delighted the Lord, and his brother Vanamali Dasa.

106. Cf. CC Antya 10 (the Oriya devotees).

107. Kanai Khutiya — in CC Madhya 15 he played Nanda at the Nandotsava festival in Puri.

108. Probably the Oriya poets Jagannatha Dasa and Balarama Dasa (cf. Devakinandana, Part 2, vv. 110–111). The vandana calls them sons of Kanai Khutiya.

109. Cf. vv. 81–82. "Thakura Govindananda" is according to GGD 91 the same Sugriva.

110. Oriya associates of the Lord in Puri (CC Madhya 10 and Antya 10 — lists of the devotees of Puri).

111. Oriya associates in Puri. Shrinatha Mishra — GGD 171 (Chitrangi); Subuddhi Mishra — GGD 194–207; Tulasi Mishra, Madhava Pattanayaka, Hari Bhatta, Baladeva and Kashinatha Mahiti — cf. CC Antya 10 and Madhya 10.

112. Ramananda Vasu of Kulinagrama (GGD 173; CC Madhya 10, 16).

113. See note to v. 105.

114. In Devakinandana at this place (Part 2, v. 117) and in the Vaishnavabhidhana — "Shrikara Pandita"; Shridhara has already been named above, in v. 49.

115. Yadunatha Kavichandra, a poet (cf. the padas in ../padas/); Dhananjaya Pandita — GGD 127 (Krishna's friend Vasudama).

116. So also in Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 118): "giving everything to the Lord, he took a pot in his hand".

117. Suryadasa Sarakhela, father of Vasudha and Jahnava (v. 17; GGD 65).

118. GGD 179: Vamshivadana is Krishna's flute.

119. CC Adi 11: Murari Chaitanya Dasa slapped tigers on the cheek and played with snakes. The reading "terrible as Yama" is uncertain.

120. Jagannatha Sena and Paramananda Gupta, compiler of the Krishna-stavavali — GGD 194–207.

121. Probably Ramadasa, the younger son of Shivananda Sena (GGD 145), or (in Devakinandana, Part 2, v. 122) "the boy Ramadasa".

122. Here, among associates of Nityananda and of Gauda, Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 123) has "Sri Vallabha Sena". Majumdar sees in this place of Jiva's vandana a mention of Vallabha Bhatta (founder of the Pushti-marga), later omitted by Devakinandana — but this is only his conjecture.

123. GGD 114: Bhaskara Thakura is Vishvakarma (the sculptor who made the Deity of Nityananda and others).

124. Balarama Dasa, a kirtana poet among Nityananda's associates (cf. the padas in ../padas/).

125. GGD 129: Mahesha Pandita is Krishna's friend Mahabahu.

126. GGD 143: Jagadisha Pandita, lover of dance, is the dancer of Vraja Chandrahasa.

127. The story of Krishnadasa of Badagachhi, in whose house Nityananda stayed, of Gauridasa leading Nityananda away and of the seven months of separation is known only from this vandana. Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 127) merely speaks of Krishnadasa's faith in Nityananda.

128. Paramananda Avadhuta, an associate of Nityananda (Part 2, v. 128).

129. "Anadi" is apparently a name or epithet; so too in Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 129).

130. Yadunatha Dasa — cf. CC Adi 11 and 12 (several Yadunathas).

131. Sannyasis: GGD 100–101 (Jagannatha and Rama Tirtha, Purushottama, Gopendra Ashrama); the rest — GGD 97 and the vandanas.

132. Rajiva Pandita is unknown from other sources; possibly a corruption of the next name, "Sri Jiva Pandita".

133. Jiva Pandita — GGD 169 (Indira).

134. Shishu ("child") Krishnadasa, an associate of Nityananda.

135. GGD 129: Uddharana Datta is Subahu. That he went with Nityananda to all the holy places is, according to Majumdar, reported only by the vandanas.

136. Madhava Acharya (Kavivallabha), author of the Bengali Krishna-mangala; not to be confused with Ganga's husband (v. 27). GGD 169: Madhavacharya is Madhavi.

137. In Devakinandana (Part 2, v. 135) two persons: "Nrisimha and Sri Chaitanya Dasa" (Majumdar notes this too).

138. GGD 142: Shankara Ghosha, skilled in playing the dampha (tambourine-drum), is the mridanga drummer of Vraja Sudhakara.

139. GGD 183: Shivananda Chakravarti, who lived in Vrindavana, is a manifestation of Lavanga-manjari.

140. Tirthapada — "He whose feet are a holy place", a name of the Lord.

141. Cf. CC Adi 9 (the tree of devotion whose root is Madhavendra Puri; its branches Ishvara Puri, Paramananda Puri and others). Sankarshana Puri and Govinda (Puri) are disciples of Madhavendra according to the vandana.

142. That Jahnavi was a disciple of Ishvara Puri and Nityananda a disciple of Sankarshana Puri is reported only by this vandana. According to a widespread tradition Nityananda's guru was Lakshmipati Tirtha (cf. GGD 22 and note 8 to our translation of GGD).

143. I.e. Madhavendra Puri is the first link of bhakti in this succession (CC Adi 9: "the first sprout of the tree of prema").

144. The Laghu-bhagavatamrita of Rupa Gosvami, which describes the kinds of manifestation of the Lord and His associates.

145. The author's last signature (see note to v. 1). The words "according to the order of His devotees" are an uncertain reading. The colophon calls the vandana "following the sampradaya of Madhva", as does GGD 22.

Part 2. Devakinandana Dasa, Vaishnava-vandana

A Bengali vandana (payar) with ragas and refrains: introduction; Gaura, Nityananda, Advaita and their families; the associates at Navadvipa; the sannyasis; the Gosvamis of Vrindavana; associates in Gauda and Orissa; the author's guru Purushottama; Nityananda's associates; conclusion (pp. 21–36 of the 1910 edition; couplets 1–147)

[p. 21]

Raga abhira.

Refrain: Gorachand is my life, Gorachand is my wealth: spreading the net of prema, Gora has caught the whole world.

1. Humbly, holding a straw between my teeth,
I make my plea at the feet of the guru and the Vaishnavas.

2. How many Vaishnavas [came] with the descent of Sri Krishna Chaitanya and Nityananda — who can tell them all?

3. Even the gods cannot comprehend the power of the Vaishnavas — and who am I? A child of little understanding.

4. Great is the longing of my tongue and the desire of my mind — that is why I wish to compose a Vaishnava-vandana.

5. Whatever I say, I say by the grace of the guru and the Vaishnavas; do not count it an offence of mine if I break the order.[1]

6. I praise Shachi and Jagannatha Mishra Purandara, whose sons are Vishvarupa and Vishvambhara.

7. I shall praise Vishvarupa — blessed is he, blessed! — Chaitanya's elder brother, named Sri Shankararanya.

8. I shall praise Mahaprabhu Sri Krishna Chaitanya, who descended to purify the fallen — blessed is He, blessed!

9. I praise Lakshmi Thakurani and Vishnupriya, and I extol Gadadhara Pandita Gosani.

10. I praise Padmavati-devi and Hadai Pandita, whose son is Nityananda, wondrous in His deeds.

[p. 22]

11. I praise the merciful Thakura Sri Nityananda, from whom come dancing, singing and joy for all.

12. I praise the two Thakuranis — Vasudha and Jahnava, whose son is Virabhadra, extolled in the world.[2]

13. With attention I shall praise Sri Virabhadra Gosani, by whose conduct the whole world is won.

Raga bhatiyali.

Refrain: Gora Gosani is the descent that purifies the fallen. Blessed is Gora's descent, the crown-jewel of sannyasis: so beautiful a name is heard nowhere else.

14. With attention I praise first of all Madhavendra Puri — the first descent on the path of devotion to Vishnu.[3]

15. I praise Acharya Gosani — Advaita, the Lord, who brought Mahaprabhu into the world.

16. With all my heart I praise Sita Thakurani,
I praise her sons — Achyutananda and the others.[4]

16a. (Pundarika Vidyanidhi, the crest-jewel of devotees: uttering his name, the Lord Himself wept.[5])

17. I shall praise Sri Srinivasa Thakura Pandita, renowned throughout the world as Narada.[6]

18. With devotion I shall praise Malini Thakurani, whom Gauranga with His own mouth called mother.

19. With attention I shall praise Sri Narayani-devi, whom the Lord Himself called "alabati".[7]

[p. 23]

20. I praise Haridasa Thakura, foremost among renunciants:
he gave children treats to make them say the name of Hari.[8]

21. I praise Gopinatha Thakura, renowned in the world, counted as Brahma for his praise of the Lord.[9]

22. I shall praise Murari Gupta, mighty in devotion, who in a former descent was called Hanuman.

23. I praise Sri Chandrashekhara, cool as the moon;
I praise Acharyaratna, whose fame is spotless.[10]

24. I praise Govinda and Garuda, whose greatness is boundless, whose right is devotion to Gaura's feet.[11]

25. I shall praise the ambashtha[12] named Sri Mukunda Datta, whose singing surpassed the gandharvas.

26. With deep and pure feeling I praise Vasudeva Datta, whom the Lord kept near Him in Utkala.[13]

27. I praise Damodara Pandita, most dispassionate, I praise Pitambara, his elder brother.

28. I praise Sri Jagannatha, Shankara and Narayana:
great renunciants are these five brothers.[14]

29. I praise the great soul Nilambara Chakravarti, who promptly foretold the Lord's future.[15]

30. I praise Sri Rama Pandita and Gupta Narayana;
I praise the teachers — Vishnu, Gangadasa and Sudarshana.[16]

31. I praise Sadashiva, and Shrigarbha, and Shrinidhi, I praise Buddhimanta Khan and Vidyanidhi.

[p. 24]

32. I shall praise the brahmachari Shuklambara, to whom the Lord granted the boon of His own prema-bhakti.[17]

33. I praise Nandana Acharya and Vijaya the scribe,
I praise the great soul Ramadasa Kavichandra.[18]

34. I praise Shridhara Pandita, called Kholaveca, with whom the Lord was ever in playful quarrel.[19]

35. I praise the beggar Vanamali together with his son:
he unexpectedly beheld the Lord's manifestation.[20]

36. I praise, with respect, Halayudha Thakura,
I shall extol Sri Vasudeva Bhadra.[21]

37. I shall praise Ishana Dasa with joined palms —
Shachi Thakurani loved him dearly.[22]

38. I praise Jagadisha and Shriman, Sanjaya, with humility I praise Garuda and Kashishvara.[23]

39. I shall extol Gangadasa and Krishnananda, with joy I praise Sri Rama and Mukunda.[24]

40. I praise Vallabha Acharya, known to all the world, whose daughter is Sri Lakshmi Thakurani Herself.

41. With joy I praise Sanatana Mishra, whose blessed daughter is Vishnupriya Thakurani.

42. I praise Acharya Vanamali and the brahmana Kashinatha, by whose efforts Mahaprabhu's marriage was arranged.[25]

42a. (All who were at the Lord's wedding festival — to the lotus feet of them all I bow unceasingly.[26])

[p. 25]

Raga suhai.

Refrain: A beautiful descent is the descent of Sri Gauranga: such an ocean of mercy there is nowhere else.

43. With attention I praise Gosani Ishvara Puri, from whom the Lord, teaching the world, took initiation.

44. I praise Keshava Bharati — the sage Sandipani:
the Lord Himself made him His guru.[27]

45. I shall praise the feet of Sri Ramachandra Puri:
the Lord said of him that he belonged to Sri Rama's host.[28]

46. I praise Paramananda Puri — in nature Uddhava,
I praise Damodara Puri — in the mood of Satyabhama.[29]

47. I praise Narasimha Tirtha and Sukhananda Puri,
I praise Sri Govinda Puri and Brahmananda Puri.

48. I praise Nrisimha Puri and Satyananda Bharati,
I shall praise Garuda Avadhuta, great of mind.

49. With care I praise Vishnu Puri Gosani, compiler of the Vishnu-bhakti-ratnavali.[30]

50. With great devotion I praise Brahmananda Svarupa,
I praise Krishnananda Puri and Sri Raghava Puri.

51. I praise Vishveshvarananda, known to all, whose faith in Mahaprabhu's feet is especially firm.

52. I praise Sri Keshava Puri and Anubhavananda […].[31]

[p. 26]

53. I praise the two great souls — Rupa and Sanatana, who established [the holy places of] the land of Vrindavana.[32]

54. I praise Sri Jiva Gosani, accepted by all, who, establishing the siddhanta, preserved the foundations of bhakti.[33]

55. I praise Raghunatha Dasa, who dwells at Radha-kunda,
I praise Raghava Gosani, who sports at Govardhana.[34]

56. I shall praise Gopala Bhatta in Vrindavana:
he abides ever together with Sanatana and Rupa.

57. With a concentrated mind I shall praise Raghunatha Bhatta Gosani, the teacher of the Sri Bhagavata in Vrindavana.

58. I praise Lokanatha Thakura and Bhugarbha Thakura, abundant in mercy to deliver souls.[35]

59. With one heart I praise Kashishvara Gosani, especially renowned in the Mathura-mandala.[36]

60. I praise Shuddha Sarasvati, purest in form, whose devotion to the Lord's feet is spotless.

61. With care I praise Prabodhananda Gosani, who described the qualities of Mahaprabhu.[37]

62. I praise Jagadananda Pandita — Sarasvati herself, for whom Mahaprabhu had the highest love.[38]

63. I praise the great soul, Pandita Raghava, whose glory is manifest in the village of Panihati.

64. I praise Purandara Pandita — in valour Angada:
a brahmana saw his tail in his house.[39]

[p. 27]

65. I praise Kashi Mishra, in whose abode [lived] the Lord; with attention I shall praise Vaninatha Pattanayaka.

66. I praise Sri Pradyumna Mishra and Raya Bhavananda,
I praise Kalanidhi, Sudhanidhi and Gopinatha.[40]

67. I praise Raya Ramananda, of great spiritual standing, whom the Lord esteemed as the rarest treasure of knowledge.[41]

68. I praise Vakreshvara Pandita with his divine body:
within — the splendour of Krishna, without — golden Gauranga.[42]

69. I shall praise Sugriva Mishra — Sri Govinda:
for the Lord's sake he [built] a bridge in his mind.[43]

70. With reverence I shall praise Gadadhara Dasa too, whose greatness is especially manifest in Vrindavana.[44]

71. With one heart I praise Sadashiva Kaviraja:
ceaselessly mad with prema, he is unaware of the outer world.

72. I praise Shivananda Sena, whose body is prema, whose caste, life and wealth are Gora's two feet.

73. Chaitanya Dasa, Ramadasa and Karnapura — the three sons of Shivananda I shall praise abundantly.[45]

74. I shall praise Mukunda Dasa, pure of heart through bhava:
seeing a peacock feather, he lost consciousness.[46]

75. I praise Narahari Dasa — the abode of prema, in whose heart Gauranga sports unceasingly.

76. I praise Sri Raghunandana, saintly in character, whose form and nature enchant the world.

[p. 28]

77. I praise Raghunatha Dasa, full of the nectar of prema, by whose character all people are won.[47]

78. I praise Acharya Purandara and Pandita Devananda,
I praise Sri Acharyachandra, full of prema for Gaura.[48]

79. I praise Krishnadasa Thakura of Akaihat,[49]
I praise Paramananda Puri — the Lord's fellow student.[50]

80. With attention I shall praise Sri Govinda Ghosha, whose name the Lord Himself made true.

81. I shall praise Madhava Ghosha — the object of the Lord's love, to whom the Lord granted a voice that never breaks.[51]

82. With attention I shall praise Sri Vasudeva Ghosha, whose songs about Gaura have no end.[52]

83. With respect I shall praise Thakura Sri Abhirama:
a log for sixteen bearers he holds as a flute.[53]

84. With great hope I shall praise Sundarananda Thakura:
he made kadamba flowers bloom on a lemon tree.[54]

85. With attention I shall praise Parameshvara Dasa Thakura:
at the place of sankirtana he made the jackals chant the name.[55]

86. With respect I shall praise Vamshivadana Thakura:
Gadadhara Dasa made [him] a descent of the flute.[56]

87. I praise my chosen master named Sri Purushottama[57] — who can describe his incomparable qualities?

88. Even one who has no good qualities he shows mercy to by the power of his natural compassion.

[p. 29]

89. In his seventh year he had the madness of love for Krishna; his dancing enchants the world, his power is unfathomable.

90. Seizing Gauridasa the kirtaniya by the hair, he imparted his own power and made him sing the praise of Nityananda.[58]

91. Gadadhara Dasa and Sri Govinda Ghosha [are witnesses]:
at his manifestation the Lord found joy.[59]

92. Abhisheka with a hundred and eight pitchers of Ganga water; omniscience from his very childhood.[60]

93. The karavi flower that was in his ear before the whole assembly came to smell like a lotus.[61]

94. Through his name all Vaishnavas attain perfection; his body is the happiness of prema embodied.

95. With great devotion I praise Kaliya Krishnadasa, in divine sacred thread and garments, bearing the splendour of Krishna.[62]

96. I praise Kamalakara Pippalai, sporting in bhava, who said to the Lord: "Take the stick, give me the flute."[63]

97. I praise Ratnakara's son named Purushottama, who lives in Nadia, an abode of divine splendour.[64]

98. With attention I praise Uddharana Datta: together with Nityananda he went round all the holy places.[65]

99. I praise Gauridasa Pandita, who carried out the Lord's will:
he took Acharya Gosani to Utkala.[66]

100. I praise Purushottama Pandita, sporting [in bhava], wise:
the Lord gave him the place of Acharya Gosani.[67]

[p. 30]

101. With one heart I shall praise Saranga Dasa,
I praise Makaradhvaja Kara, the Lord's singer.[68]

Raga barari.

Refrain: Gora Gosani is the descent that purifies the fallen: by Your mercy all souls are delivered.

102. I praise Kaviraja Mishra, Bhagavatacharya,
I praise Sri Madhu Pandita and Ananta Acharya.[69]

103. I praise Govinda Acharya, endowed with every virtue, who composed the wondrous dhamali of Radha and Krishna.[70]

104. I praise Sarvabhauma — in character Brihaspati:
at the Lord's manifestation a wondrous poetic gift opened in him.[71]

105. I praise Prataparudra Raya, in fame equal to Indra:
the Lord revealed to him the six-armed form.[72]

106. I praise the brahmana Yadunatha and Vipradasa the Oriya,
I praise the brahmana Haridasa and the vaidya Vishnudasa,

107. at whose songs the Lord rejoiced especially;
I praise his brother — Sri Vanamali Dasa.[73]

108. Disguising himself, he entered into the play of the gopis; there is no describing how his prema showed itself.

109. I praise Kanai Khutiya, known to all the world, whose two sons are Jagannatha and Balarama.[74]

110. I praise the great soul, Balarama Dasa the Oriya, to whom Jagannatha and Balarama are subject.

[p. 31]

111. I praise Jagannatha Dasa, master of music, by the rasa of whose singing Jagannatha is enchanted.[75]

112. I shall praise Shivananda Pandita and Kashishvara,
I shall praise Chandaneshvara and Simheshvara.

113. I shall praise Subuddhi Mishra and Sri Shrinatha Mishra, I praise Tulasi Mishra and Kashinatha Mahiti.

114. I praise Sri Hari Bhatta and Balarama Mahiti,
I praise the Pattanayaka named Madhava, the steadfast.[76]

115. With care I shall praise Ramananda of the Vasu line:
in his family they know none but Gaura.[77]

116. I shall praise the brahmachari named Sri Purushottama, with great devotion I praise Sri Madhu Pandita.

117. I praise Shrikara Pandita and the brahmana Ramachandra,
I praise Yadu Kavichandra, full of every happiness.[78]

118. I praise the renunciant Pandita Dhananjaya, sporting [in bhava]:
giving everything to the Lord, he took a pot in his hand.[79]

119. I praise Jagannatha Pandita and Acharya Lakshmana, I praise Krishnadasa Pandita, purest of heart.

120. I praise Suryadasa Pandita, known to the world:
his two daughters are Vasudha and Jahnava.

121. With attention I praise Murari Chaitanya Dasa, whose wondrous deeds are like those of Prahlada.[80]

122. I praise Paramananda Gupta, Jagannatha Sena, Kavichandra, Mukunda, and with them the boy Rama.[81]

[p. 32]

123. I praise Sri Kamsari Sena, Sri Vallabha Sena,[82]
I praise Bhaskara Thakura, [in whom is] the greatness of Vishvakarma.

124. I praise the maker of songs Sri Balarama Dasa, whose faith in Nityananda-chandra is beyond words.

125. I praise Mahesha Pandita, a great madman [of love],
I praise Jagadisha Pandita, the lover of dance.

126. I praise Vrindavana Dasa, the son of Narayani, who brought to light the Chaitanya-mangala.[83]

127. I shall praise Thakura Krishnadasa of Badagachhi, whose faith is in Nityananda, in the bliss of prema.[84]

128. With one heart I praise Paramananda Avadhuta: ceaselessly mad, he is unaware of the outer world.

129. I shall praise Anadi Gangadasa Pandita,
I praise Yadunatha Dasa, sweet in character.

130. I praise Purushottama Puri and Jagannatha Tirtha,
I praise Sri Rama Tirtha and Raghunatha Puri.[85]

131. I praise Vasudeva Tirtha and Upendra Ashrama,
I shall praise Ananta Puri and Hariharananda.

132. I praise Mukunda Kaviraja, spotless in character,
I shall praise the blissful Sri Jiva Pandita.

133. I shall extol the one called Shishu Krishnadasa:
nurtured by the Lord, he is an abode of divine splendour.[86]

134. I praise Madhava Acharya, cool with poetry, whose composed song is the Sri Krishna-mangala.

[p. 35]

135. Krishnadasa, the younger brother of Gauridasa Pandita,
I shall praise, and Nrisimha, and Sri Chaitanya Dasa.[87]

136. (With faith I praise Raghunatha Bhatta,
I praise Sri Ramachandra Dasa of the divine eyes.[88])

137. I praise Sri Shankara Ghosha, of a poor man's ways, who by playing the dampha won the Lord's love.[89]

138. In supreme joy I praise Acharya Madhava:
as the fruit of devotion he became the husband of Ganga-devi.[90]

139. I praise Narayana Paidari and Shivananda Chakravarti[91] — there is no end to praising the Vaishnavas!

140. How many Vaishnavas there are in this descent — beyond counting:
their endless glory cannot be told.

141. Endless are the Vaishnavas, endless their glory:
there is no one who could measure it.

142. Have I wit enough to praise them?
Even the gods cannot express the purity of the Vaishnavas.

143. The teacher of all is the Vaishnava Thakura;
he is far beyond hearing, sight, mind and speech.[92]

144. I take refuge at the feet of the guru and the Vaishnavas:
briefly I have said something in this Vaishnava-vandana.

145. Whoever reads and hears the Vaishnava-vandana, the filth in his heart is removed and his mind becomes pure.

146. Whoever, rising at dawn, reads the Vaishnava-vandana will never know any torment.

[p. 36]

147. He will gain that prema-bhakti which even the gods find hard to attain — with this longing speaks Devakinandana Dasa.

Thus ends the Vaishnava-vandana composed by Sri Devakinandana Dasa.

Translator's notes

1. Cf. the apology for the order in Jiva's vandana (Part 1, v. 6) and in GGD 212.

2. Here, unlike Jiva's vandana (Part 1, vv. 22–23), Virabhadra (Virachandra) is called the son of Vasudha and Jahnava, i.e. of Nityananda.

3. Madhavendra Puri is "the first sprout of the tree of prema" (CC Adi 9); GGD 22–25.

4. According to the manuscripts of 1654 and 1702 (Majumdar) this reads "I praise her son Sri Achyutananda": these manuscripts name no other son of Advaita; cf. Part 1, vv. 33–35.

5. The editor puts this couplet in brackets (apparently it is not in all manuscripts). GGD 54–56: Pundarika Vidyanidhi is Vrishabhanu; the Lord called him "father" and wept remembering him (CB Madhya 7).

6. GGD 90.

7. The meaning of the word "alabati" (ālabāṭī) here is unclear; it may be connected with Narayani's receiving the remnants of the Lord's meal (cf. Part 1, v. 36).

8. GGD 93–95 (Brahma and Prahlada).

9. Apparently Gopinatha Acharya (GGD 75 — Brahma); see Part 1, note to v. 39.

10. See Part 1, note to v. 40: Acharyaratna is according to the CC a title of Chandrashekhara, but the vandanas and GGD 103 name him separately.

11. GGD 116–117.

12. Ambashtha — the caste of vaidyas (physicians).

13. On Vasudeva Datta in Puri — CC Madhya 11, 15. GGD 140 (the singer Madhuvrata).

14. Cf. Part 1, v. 43 and note.

15. GGD 104 (Garga).

16. On "Gupta Narayana" see Part 1, note to v. 45. Nimai's teachers — Part 1, v. 46.

17. CB Madhya: the Lord ate rice from the beggar's bag of the brahmachari Shuklambara; GGD 191.

18. Cf. Part 1, vv. 48–49: in Jiva, in place of Nandana Acharya, there is Ratneshvara Acharya, and Ramadasa and Kavichandra are apparently two persons.

19. CB Adi-khanda — Nimai's playful quarrels with Shridhara about the price of banana leaves and about his poverty; GGD 133.

20. Cf. Part 1, v. 49 and note (GGD 114).

21. GGD 134 (Halayudha). "Vasudeva Bhadra" — cf. Vaishnavabhidhana (Part 3, v. 17).

22. Ishana, the servant in the Lord's household, who served Shachi and Vishnupriya.

23. Cf. Part 1, vv. 51–52.

24. Cf. Part 1, v. 52 and note.

25. GGD 49–50; cf. Part 1, v. 55.

26. The editor puts this couplet in brackets; Majumdar does not count it.

27. GGD 52: Keshava Bharati is the sage Sandipani, Krishna's guru.

28. Cf. GGD 92 and Part 1, note to v. 58.

29. GGD 118 (Paramananda Puri — Uddhava); on Damodara Puri — Part 1, note to v. 59.

30. Vishnu Puri's Bhakti-ratnavali; see Part 1, v. 61.

31. The second line of the couplet is missing in the edition (a blank space in the scan). Cf. Part 1, v. 63: "Anubhavananda and Chidananda".

32. Rupa and Sanatana uncovered the lost holy places of Vrindavana at the Lord's command (CC Madhya 23 and elsewhere).

33. In Jiva's vandana Jiva himself is naturally not praised; here his name is present.

34. Cf. Part 1, vv. 70–71 and notes.

35. At this point Devakinandana's "great" vandana (according to Majumdar) adds Vaishnavas of other sampradayas (Vishnusvami, Hit Harivamsha, Surdas and others).

36. Kashishvara Gosvami (GGD 166), who served the Deity of Govinda in Vrindavana.

37. In the Sri Chaitanya-chandramrita (../chaitanya-chandramrita/); GGD 163.

38. According to GGD 51 Jagadananda is a manifestation of Satyabhama; "Sarasvati" — so also in Jiva (Part 1, v. 38).

39. GGD 91 (Angada); Part 1, v. 76.

40. According to Majumdar this couplet is not in the old manuscripts: the names Kalanidhi and Sudhanidhi (brothers of Ramananda Raya) occur only in the CC (Adi 10.133), and the couplet was apparently added from it. Pradyumna Mishra — CC Antya 5; Bhavananda Raya, Ramananda's father (GGD 122); Gopinatha is Gopinatha Pattanayaka, Ramananda's brother (CC Antya 9).

41. CC Madhya 8; GGD 120–124.

42. I.e. in Vakreshvara both Krishna and Gaura are manifest. GGD 71–73.

43. See Part 1, vv. 81–82 and 111 and notes.

44. Cf. Part 1, v. 83; GGD 154–155.

45. Shivananda Sena and his sons Chaitanya Dasa, Ramadasa and Kavi Karnapura (Paramananda Dasa), the author of GGD (GGD 4, 145). According to Majumdar this couplet is not in the old manuscripts.

46. CC Madhya 15; Part 1, vv. 87–88.

47. Probably the same Raghunatha (the vaidya) as in Part 1, v. 91.

48. Acharyachandra — cf. Vaishnavabhidhana (Part 3, v. 29). At this place Jiva has Acharyaratna (Part 1, v. 93; Majumdar notes this too).

49. Krishnadasa of Akaihat, an associate of Nityananda (named in the lists of the branches of the tree of devotion, CC Adi).

50. Cf. Part 1, v. 92 (Paramananda Pandita).

51. The Ghosha brothers, kirtana singers (GGD 188). "A voice that never breaks" is the Lord's gift to Madhava Ghosha's singing.

52. Vasudeva Ghosha's padas about Gaura — see ../padas/.

53. GGD 126: "a log that only thirty-two men could lift"; Jiva (Part 1, v. 95) — "many".

54. CB Antya 5 describes this miracle in Raghava's house at Panihati as performed by Nityananda; so too Jiva (Part 1, v. 75).

55. GGD 132; Part 1, v. 99.

56. I.e., apparently, Gadadhara Dasa revealed that Vamshivadana is the incarnation of Krishna's flute (GGD 179). The line is unclear.

57. Purushottama Dasa (Nagara Purushottama), son of Sadashiva Kaviraja (CC Adi 11; GGD 131), Devakinandana's guru; cf. Part 1, v. 94. According to Majumdar Devakinandana was his disciple (so also Manohara Dasa in the Anuraga-valli, 1696), so the vandana dates from the sixteenth century.

58. Gauridasa the kirtaniya is not Gauridasa Pandita of Ambika (v. 99). The story is known only from this vandana.

59. The line is unclear: perhaps Gadadhara Dasa and Govinda Ghosha are named as those in whose presence Purushottama's greatness was revealed.

60. I.e. abhisheka was performed for him with a hundred and eight pitchers of Ganga water, and from childhood he was omniscient.

61. Cf. Part 1, v. 94.

62. Kala Krishnadasa — GGD 132; Part 1, v. 101.

63. GGD 128 (Mahabala); Part 1, v. 100. The request "give me the flute" is in the mood of a cowherd friend.

64. Cf. Part 1, v. 101 and note: Jiva has "Purushottama Tirtha" at this place.

65. GGD 129; Part 1, v. 134.

66. Cf. Part 1, v. 97 and note.

67. The line is unclear. Purushottama Pandita is a singer in the Lord's kirtana.

68. Saranga (Sharnga) Thakura — GGD 172, Part 1, v. 102; Makaradhvaja — GGD 141, Part 1, v. 103.

69. Cf. Part 1, vv. 104–105 and notes.

70. Dhamali — playful songs about Radha and Krishna. GGD 41: Govinda Acharya is Paurnamasi.

71. GGD 119; on Sarvabhauma's verses about the Lord (the Chaitanya-shataka) — CC Madhya 6.

72. According to CC Madhya 6 the six-armed form was shown to Sarvabhauma; the vandanas say this of Prataparudra (cf. Part 1, v. 106).

73. Cf. Part 1, vv. 107–108.

74. CC Madhya 15 (Kanai Khutiya as Nanda at the Nandotsava festival); Part 1, vv. 109–110.

75. Cf. Part 1, v. 110 and note.

76. Oriya associates in Puri; cf. Part 1, vv. 112–114.

77. Ramananda Vasu of Kulinagrama (GGD 173).

78. Cf. Part 1, v. 117 (Jiva has Shridhara Pandita).

79. Cf. Part 1, v. 118.

80. CC Adi 11; Part 1, v. 120.

81. Cf. Part 1, v. 121; Vaishnavabhidhana (Part 3, v. 44): "Kavichandra, Sri Mukunda, Sri Rama".

82. At this place Jiva has "Sri Vallabhacharya" (Part 1, v. 122 and note).

83. Chaitanya-mangala — the original title of Vrindavana Dasa's Chaitanya-bhagavata.

84. Cf. the account in Jiva's vandana of Krishnadasa's separation from Nityananda (Part 1, vv. 125–128).

85. Sannyasis — cf. GGD 97, 100–101 and Part 1, vv. 130–131.

86. "Nurtured by the Lord" — Jiva (Part 1, v. 133) has "nurtured by Sri Nityananda".

87. Jiva (Part 1, v. 135) has one person: "Nrisimha Chaitanya Dasa" (Majumdar notes this too). Krishnadasa, Gauridasa Pandita's brother, is a poet (cf. the padas in ../padas/).

88. The editor puts this couplet in brackets; according to Majumdar it is absent from the manuscripts of 1654 and 1702. Raghunatha Bhatta has already been named above (v. 57).

89. GGD 142; Part 1, v. 136.

90. Madhava Acharya, husband of Ganga, Nityananda's daughter (GGD 69; Part 1, v. 27).

91. Narayana Paidari is unknown from other sources; cf. Part 1, v. 137 ("Sri Narayana"). Shivananda Chakravarti — GGD 183.

92. "The Vaishnava Thakura" — collectively: the Vaishnava as the teacher of all.

Part 3. Devakinandana Kaviraja, Sri Vaishnavabhidhana

A Sanskrit list of the names of Vaishnavas — "The Names of the Vaishnavas": a brief recapitulation of the same author's Bengali vandana (pp. 56–60 of the 1910 edition; verses 1–53)

[p. 56]

1. Having first bowed to my guru Sri Purushottama,[1] whose merciful glance has purified the earth — a wish-fulfilling tree that grants every desire —

2. and to all the Vaishnavas — full of great power, of great fortune, great purifiers of the fallen, mahabhagavatas, forms of Vishnu —

3. [I bow] then to the renowned Shachi and Jagannatha, brahmanas in form, the parents of Sri Vishvarupa and Sri Vishvambhara;

4. to the blessed Vishvarupa, the great soul, bearing the name Shankararanya, in the form of the elder brother of Sri Krishna Chaitanya-chandra;

5. to Sri Chaitanya Mahaprabhu — the Lord of Gadadhara's life, the husband of Lakshmi and Vishnupriya, prema and mercy embodied in person;

6. and likewise to Padmavati and Srimat Mukunda,[2] best of brahmanas — the parents, of incomparable good fortune, of Nityananda Svarupa;

7. to Srimat Nityananda-chandra — the husband of Vasudha and Jahnavi, the father of Sri Virabhadra, the crusher of all the godless.

8. Though I am by nature insignificant, unintelligent and a child myself, a fool in describing the endless glory of the endless Vaishnavas,

9. yet from the greed of my tongue and the great agitation of my heart I make a certain remembrance — the endless names of the Vaishnavas.

10. And this too I, the insignificant one, say to all: [you] in whom virtues arise, do not count against me faults against the order.

11. Sri Madhava Puri,[3] Srila Advaita Acharya, and likewise Achyuta, Gopinatha, Srinivasa, Govinda, Chandrashekhara,

[p. 57]

12. Haridasa, Sri Murari Gupta, and likewise Narayana, Mukunda, Vasudeva, Sri Damodara Pandita,

13. Pitambara, Jagannatha, Sri Narayana and Shankara, Sri Rama Pandita, and likewise Nilambara Chakravarti,

17. Gangadasa, Vasudeva Bhadra, Rama and Mukunda, Sri Vallabha, best of acharyas, Mishra Srila Sanatana,

18. Acharya Vanamali and Kashinatha, best of brahmanas, the Puri bearing the name Ishvara, Srimat Keshava Bharati,

19. the Puri named Paramananda, Damodara Svarupa,[4] the Tirtha named Nrisimha, and likewise Ramachandra Puri,

20. and Brahmananda Puri, Sri Satyananda Bharati, Srimat Sukhananda Puri, and likewise Sri Govinda Puri,

21. the divine Garuda Avadhuta, the Puri named Raghava, Brahmananda Svarupa, the Puri Sriyuta Keshava,

22. Srimat Vishnu Puri, the great soul Vishveshvarananda, the one whose name is Sri Sacchidananda, and likewise Anubhavananda,

23. Srimat Krishnananda Puri, Nrisimhananda Bharati, the divine one named Kashishvara, Hanuman,[5] Sri Sanatana,

[p. 58]

24. Rupa, Jiva, Sri Prabodhananda, Shuddha Sarasvati, the one bearing the name Raghunatha Dasa, and likewise Gopala Bhatta,

25. Raghunatha, Lokanatha, Srimat the one named Bhugarbha, Raghava, Jagadananda Pandita, Sri Purandara,

26. Kashi Mishra, Raya Ramananda, the brahmana Vakreshvara, Vaninatha Pattanayaka, and likewise Govindananda,

27. Sadashiva Kaviraja, Gadadhara of the Dasa family, Sri Shivananda Sena and Sri Mukunda, best of physicians,

28. Srimat Narahari, and likewise Srila Raghunandana, Raghunatha Dasa the vaidya, Upadhyaya Madhusudana,

29. Devananda, best of brahmanas, Srila Acharya Purandara, Sriyuta Acharyachandra, Sri Krishnadasa Pandita,

30. the [Lord's] fellow student Paramananda, and likewise Srimat Srishtidhara,[6] Govinda, Madhava and Vasudeva, bearing the name Ghosha,

31. Srila Sri Ramadasa and Sri Sundarananda, Sri Parameshvara and my supreme one — Srila Sri Purushottama,[7]

32. Sri Krishnadasa, Sri Gauridasa, Sri Kamalakara, Sri Vamshivadana Dasa, who revealed the song of the flute,

33. Srimat Uddharana and Srila the brahmana Sri Purushottama, Kaviraja Mishra, the best [of all], Madhusudana Pandita,

34. Srimat Bhagavatacharya, and likewise Govinda Acharya, Sri Sarvabhauma, and likewise Sriyuta Nandana Acharya, 35. Srimat Prataparudra, Yadunatha […],[8] the brahmana Haridasa, Srila Saranga, Makaradhvaja,

[p. 59]

36. Sri Vrindavana Dasa, the Pandita named Jagadisha, Pradyumna Mishra, Tapana Acharya, and likewise Sri Bhagavan,[9]

37. Sri Vipradasa the Oriya, the vaidya Sri Vishnudasa, the vaidya Vanamali Dasa, Haridasa, Gadadhara,

38. Sri Krishnadasa the Oriya, Sri Kashishvara Pandita, Balarama Dasa and Jagannatha Dasa, Sri Chandaneshvara,

39. Simheshvara, Shivananda, Balarama Mahiti,[10] Subuddhi Mishra, Tulasi Mishra, the one called Shrinatha,

40. Kashinatha, Hari Bhatta, Madhava Pattanayaka, Ramananda Vasu, the brahmachari Sri Purushottama,

41. the brahmana Sri Ramachandra, Srimat Shrikara Pandita, Yadunatha Kavichandra, Pandita Sri Dhananjaya,

42. Acharya Sri Jagannatha, Sri Suryadasa Pandita, Srila Sri Lakshmana Acharya, and likewise Sri Krishna Acharya,

43. Chaitanya Dasa, the physician Paramananda Gupta, Sri Jagannatha and Kamsari — the Senas, Sriyuta Bhaskara,

44. Kavichandra, Sri Mukunda, Sri Rama, Vallabha Sena, Sriyuta the one named Balarama Dasa, Mahesha Pandita,

45. Paramananda Avadhuta, Sri Gangadasa Pandita, Kaviraja Sri Mukunda,[11] Sri Jiva Pandita,

46. Chiranjiva, Krishnadasa, the boy named Krishnadasa, the excellent Yadunatha Dasa, Sri Krishnadasa Pandita, 47. Rama Tirtha, Krishna Tirtha, the Puri Sri Purushottama, Srimat Jagannatha Tirtha, and likewise Raghunatha Puri,

[p. 60]

48. Sri Vasudeva Tirtha and Srila the one named Upendra Ashrama, the Puri named Ananta, Hariharananda Bharati, 49. Srimat Nrisimha Chaitanya, Srimat Acharya Madhava, Shankara, Madhavananda Acharya, Dasa Sanatana, Shivananda Chakravarti, the brahmana Narayana and others.

50. Whoever remembers them at dawn or hears [their names] with devotion will at no time come to torment — this is certain.

51. The person who, remembering them again and again, bows down will never commit an offence at the feet of the Vaishnavas.

52. By merely remembering them he attains the position of a Vaishnava and bhakti, sweet with the nectar of prema, hard to attain even for the gods.

53. The Vaishnava is above all; he surpasses all the Vedas; and he is far beyond hearing, sight and mind.

Thus ends the Vaishnavabhidhana composed by Sri Devakinandana Kaviraja.

Obeisance to the Vaishnavas — wish-fulfilling trees, oceans of mercy, purifiers of the fallen — obeisance, obeisance!

To those devoted to the name of Hari and wholly given to devotion to Hari — whether their conduct be bad or good — to them obeisance, obeisance for ever![12]

Offered to Sri Krishna.

Translator's notes

1. Purushottama Dasa, the author's guru (Part 2, v. 87). According to Majumdar this is merely a list of names: apart from Nityananda and Virabhadra no one in it is described, not even the author's guru; Majumdar therefore thinks it unlikely that Jiva's vandana was composed on its basis. The order of names almost coincides with Devakinandana's Bengali vandana (Part 2).

2. Nityananda's father (in the Bengali vandana — Hadai Pandita, Part 2, v. 10); GGD 40.

3. Madhavendra Puri.

4. Here, in the place of "Damodara Puri" of the Bengali vandana (Part 2, v. 46), we have "Damodara Svarupa": perhaps Svarupa Damodara.

5. The reading is unclear (hanupāmaḥ); possibly a corruption. In Part 2 at this place there are Rupa and Sanatana (v. 53).

6. Srishtidhara is unknown from other sources; there is no counterpart at this place in the Bengali vandana.

7. "My supreme one" — the author's guru (cf. v. 1 and Part 2, v. 87).

8. The reading is unclear (yadunāthadhavāmaraḥ); in Part 2, v. 106 — the brahmana Yadunatha.

9. Tapana Acharya (Tapana Mishra?) and Bhagavan (Acharya) are not in the Bengali vandana; Tapana Mishra — CC Adi 16 and Madhya 17 (Kashi); Bhagavan Acharya — CC Antya 2.

10. "Balarama Mahattama" — apparently "Mahiti" (Part 2, v. 114).

11. The edition has "Kaviraja Sri Mukunda-ananda": possibly "Mukunda" merged with a neighbouring word.

12. These two verses after the colophon are a well-known prayer of obeisance to the Vaishnavas (the first is the traditional pranama-mantra), apparently added by a copyist or the editor.

Part 4. The "First vandana" ascribed to Vrindavana Dasa

A Bengali vandana (payar), entitled "First vandana" in the 1910 edition: benediction; Nityananda and His associates and their forms as cowherd boys (the "Gopala-nirnaya"); Vrindavana Dasa; the devotees go to Nilachala for the Chariot festival; conclusion (pp. 8–20 of the 1910 edition; two verses and couplets 3–144)[1]

[p. 8]

Benediction

1. I praise the two whose arms reach to their knees, who shine like gold, the sole source of sankirtana, with eyes wide as lotuses, who sustain the universe, the best of the twice-born, guardians of the dharma of the age, doers of good to the world, descents of compassion.[2]

2. Obeisance to You, eternally true in all three times, son of Jagannatha — to You together with Your sons, servants and wives, obeisance.[3]

3. Glory, glory to Vishvambhara, glory to the king of the twice-born!
Glory to the assembly of those dear to Vishvambhara!

4. Glory to Gaurachandra, the bridge of dharma, great and steadfast!
Glory to Him whose beautiful body is sankirtana itself!

5. Glory to the friend, the treasure and the life of Nityananda, glory to the abode of the prema of Gadadhara and Advaita!

6. Glory to Him to whom Sri Jagadananda is exceedingly dear!
Glory to the heart of Vakreshvara and Kashishvara!

7. Glory, glory to the Lord of Srivasa and all His beloved ones!
Cast, O Lord, Your auspicious glance upon the living beings![4]

[p. 9]

8. With all my heart I praise Thakura Chaitanya;
I praise the worshipful Deity and all His beloved ones.

9. I praise Thakura Nityananda together with Advaita:
He is golden of form, His arms reach to His knees.

10. Listen, listen, brothers, to an auspicious account:
hearing it, sin departs and the world is purified.

11. The greatness of Nityananda's servants cannot be exhausted even if one speaks for a hundred years.

12. And yet I shall name those whom I know:
all of them are of Nanda's community, descended cowherd men and women.[5]

13. Nityananda Raya, the jewel of a thousand crowns —
He, the Lord, sings Gora's qualities with a thousand mouths.

14. It is He who, bearing a thousand hoods in various pastimes, holds on His own body His own form.[6]

15. Who has the power to tell of Nityananda's greatness?
Those with whom Nityananda played —

16. all of them are of Nanda's community, descended cowherd men and women; all of them are eternal, pure, forms of the Lord Himself.

17. Be merciful, Lord, grant me this grace:
may my mind dwell at the feet of Your servants.

18. All of them were born at the command of Lord Chaitanya;
Nityananda Prabhu wanders through the world of samsara, [bound] by maya.[7]

19. Vedavyasa and others — all have spoken [of them]; each speaks according to his own love and understanding.[8]

[p. 10]

Nityananda's associates and their forms as cowherd boys

20. Because of Nityananda's prohibition their former names were not openly written down.[9]

21. A dear associate is Ramadasa Mahashaya:
he always speaks in the mood of the Lord.

22. No one can quickly understand his words;
Gaurachandra is always in his heart.

23. More than all is Ramadasa seized by feeling:
for three months Krishna dwelt in his heart.[10]

24. The one whom the Bhagavata calls Shridama — know for certain: it is Ramadasa.[11]

25. He is the manifest form of prema, beyond [prema itself]:
ninefold prema-bhakti is his play.

26. The ocean of prema named Sri Sundarananda — the great abode of Nityananda's prema.

27. He is counted first among the associates;
he is Nityananda's treasure and life.[12]

28. The one whom the Puranas extol as Sudama — all know: it is Sundarananda.[13]

29. Kamalakara Pandita, free in love — the one to whom Nityananda gave Saptagrama.

30. The one whom the Puranas call Vasudama — all know: it is Kamalakara.[14]

31. Uddharana Datta, a great Vaishnava, generous: to him was given the right to serve Nityananda.

[p. 11]

32. The one whom the Bhagavata calls Mahabala — know for certain: it is Uddharana.[15]

33. Sri Parameshvara Dasa, whose life is Nityananda:
Nityananda plays in his form.

34. The one whom the Puranas call Subahu — all know: it is Parameshvara.[16]

35. Purushottama Dasa has no awareness of the external:
Nityananda-chandra plays in his heart.

36. The one whom the Puranas extol as Stokakrishna —
all know: it is Purushottama.[17]

37. Gauridasa Pandita, greatly fortunate:
in body, mind and word his life is Nityananda.

38. The one whom the Puranas call Subala — all know as Gauridasa Pandita.[18]

39. Purushottama Pandita was born in Navadvipa; he is the innermost core [of the heart] of Nityananda.

40. The one whom the Bhagavata calls Arjuna — know for certain: it is Purushottama.[19]

41. All call him the son of Ratai;
this noble one is an associate of Nityananda.

42. The one whom the Puranas extol as Lavanga —
all know: it is Purushottama.[20]

43. Kaliya Krishnadasa is famed in the three worlds:
at the sight of him Gaurachandra appears in the heart.

[p. 12]

44. The one whom the Bhagavata calls Mahabahu — know as settled: it is Kaliya Krishna.[21]

(Thus ends the "Gopala-nirnaya".)

45. Gadadhara Dasa, full of the rasa of prema-bhakti:
at the sight of him all sins are destroyed.

46. All know him as Radhika;
at the sight of him Gaurachandra is attained.[22]

47. Sadashiva Kaviraja, greatly fortunate:
Gaurachandra and Nityananda are his treasure and life.

48. The one whom the Puranas extol as Chandravali — all know as Sadashiva Kaviraja.[23]

49. Dhananjaya Pandita, an extraordinary mahanta:
Nityananda is always in his heart.

50. Mahesha Pandita is the greatest of mahantas;
it is said that he is especially dear to Nityananda.[24]

51. Balarama Dasa, full of prema and intoxicated by it: from the breeze [that comes] from him all sins are destroyed.

52. The noble brahmana Krishnadasa, born in Radha:
his play is among Nityananda's associates.

53. Jagadisha Pandita, abode of the highest radiance:
I name him among Nityananda's associates.

54. The pious Krishnadasa, whose home is in Badagachhi:
in his village Nityananda played.[25]

[p. 13]

55. Jagannatha Kavichandra, full of the rasa of prema:
Nityananda is always in his heart.[26]

56. The famous Chaitanya Dasa — Murari Pandita:
his play is with huge snakes and tigers.[27]

57. The wise Raghunatha Vaidya Upadhyaya: from his mere glance love for Krishna and attraction to Him arise.

58. Chaturbhuja Pandita, Nandana, Gangadasa:
formerly Nityananda played in his house.[28]

59. Acharya Vaishnavananda, most generous:
formerly he was known by the name Raghunatha Puri.[29]

60. Paramananda Upadhyaya, a wholly devoted Vaishnava: in love for Nityananda he became a mahanta.

61. The famous Paramananda Gupta Mahashaya:
formerly Nityananda found shelter in his house.

62. The mahanta Acharyachandra, endowed with every power:
he has no other refuge than Nityananda.

63. Krishnananda and Devananda, two pure servants:
their play is among Nityananda's associates.[30]

64. Acharya Vaishnavananda, most generous:
he has no other refuge than Nityananda-chandra.

65. The singer Madhavananda Ghosha Mahashaya; Vasudeva Ghosha, full of the rasa of prema.

66. Very dear to Nityananda are Manohara, [Narayana], Krishnananda and Devananda — these four.[31]

[p. 14]

67. Greatly fortunate are these four generous panditas:
in their houses Nityananda played.[32]

Other devotees of the Lord

68. With joy I praise Pundarika Vidyanidhi:
remembering him, Gaurachandra weeps aloud.[33]

69. With joy I praise Thakura Haridasa, and I praise the other Haridasa, who lives on the seashore.[34]

70. I praise Mukunda Datta, Krishna's singer, Shivananda Sena and the others close [to the Lord].

71. With a joyful heart I praise Sri Govinda:
he led the singing in kirtana together with the Lord.[35]

72. I praise Sri Vijaya Dasa, the copyist, whom the Lord blessed [with the name] "Ratnabahu".[36]

73. I praise the wise Sadashiva Pandita, in whose house Nityananda formerly lived.

74. With a joyful heart I praise Purushottama Sanjaya:
Nityananda came first to his house.[37]

75. I praise Achyutananda, whose deeds are wonderful, Brahmananda Bharati, and Sanatana and Rupa.[38]

76. With joy I praise Garuda Pandita:
snake poison does not take one who utters his name.[39]

77. How many servants and dear friends are with Nityananda — who can describe them? It is like [counting] the waves of the ocean.

78. How many companions are with Nityananda-chandra — even in a hundred years I could not describe them.[40]

[p. 15]

79. One [of His] servants has thousands upon thousands of [his own] servants; by Nityananda's grace they too are gurus.

80. All of them are free in the rasa of Chaitanya;
the treasure and life of them all are Chaitanya and Nityananda.

Vrindavana Dasa

81. The last servant is Sri Vrindavana Dasa:
he dwelt in the womb of Narayani, who partook of [the Lord's] remnants.[41]

82. Having gained a servant's place, he became learned; birth after birth [may] I sing the qualities of Vrindavana-chandra.[42]

83. Nityananda and Sri Chaitanya are the two great Masters:
birth after birth [may] I serve the feet of the two Lords.

84. In nine ways I shall serve [Them] — grant this gift, Lord: so Your servant prays.

85. Glory, glory to Gaurachandra, glory to Nityananda!
Glory, glory to all the Lord's devotees!

86. Glory, glory to Advaita and the others, glory to Haridasa!
Glory, glory to Gadadhara, glory to Srinivasa!

The devotees go to Nilachala

87. Now hear how all the Vaishnavas came — Acharya Gosani and all the beloved [of the Lord].[43]

88. The time of the festival when [Jagannatha] mounts the chariot had come:
the host of devotees set out for Nilachala.

89. The Lord's command: every year all are to come to see the Chariot festival.

90. Acharya Gosani and with him all the devotees — all set out for Nilachala.

[p. 16]

91. Thakura Pandita Srinivasa went, in whose house Chaitanya revealed Himself.

92. Then Sri Pandita Vakreshvara went, in whose house Gaurangasundara danced.[44]

93. With joy Thakura Haridasa went:
in his form is Brahma, a manifestation of devotion.[45]

94. Pradyumna Brahmachari Mahashaya went, with whom Nrisimha converses face to face.

95. Vasudeva Datta Mahashaya went, to whom Krishna sells Himself.

96. Acharyachandra Sri Chandrashekhara went, in whose house the Lord danced in the form of the Devi.[46]

97. Joyfully Pandita Gangadasa went:
remember him, and all sins are destroyed.

98. With a jubilant heart Purushottama Sanjaya went, Mahaprabhu's chief pupil in the former days of study.

99. Crying "Hari!", Pandita Shriman went, who carefully holds the torch during the Lord's dancing.

100. Nandana Acharya and other beloved ones went:
Nityananda came first to his house.

101. The scribe went — the fortunate pandita in whose body Krishna dwelt.[47]

102. Gopinatha Pandita and Sri Garbha Pandita went — both truly forms of Krishna.[48]

[p. 17]

103. Joyfully Shuklambara Brahmachari went, whose food Lord Gaurahari ate.

104. The penniless Shridhara, Krishna's servant, went, whose water Sri Gaurasundara drank.

105. Sri Vanamali Pandita, the auspicious, went, who saw Nityananda's plough and pestle.[49]

106. Jagadisha Pandita and Hiranya Bhagavata went joyfully — both intoxicated with the rasa of Krishna.

107. Formerly, in the form of an infant, [the Lord] ate in the houses of these two the offering brought on Hari's day.[50]

108. Buddhimanta Khan Mahashaya went:
from his very birth his business is Chaitanya's commands.

109. Crying "Hari!", Acharya Purandara went, whom Sri Gaurasundara calls "father".

110. The generous Pandita Sri Raghava went, in whose house Chaitanya secretly played.

111. Gopinatha Simha Mahashaya went, whom Gaurachandra calls Akrura.

112. Murari went — a lion among physicians for the disease of worldly existence, who foresaw the advent of Gaurachandra.[51]

113. Pandita Shriman, greatly beloved of the Lord, went together with Vanamali Pandita.[52]

114. Pandita Damodara, who had come to see Ai, having seen Ai, quickly went [with all].

[p. 18]

115. The devotees of Chaitanya are countless — how many names shall I give?
All went, becoming abodes of bliss.

116. Having honoured Ai and taken leave of her,
the lion Advaita went, leading the host of devotees.

117. Whatever dishes they knew the Lord had liked before — those dishes they took to feed Him.

118. All along the way performing kirtana in bliss, they went, sanctifying every path.

119. Exulting, the devotees cry "Hari!" — hearing it, the three worlds are purified.

120. With wives, sons, menservants and maidservants they came in the highest bliss to see Chaitanya.

121. Wherever they stopped and settled for the night, that place became like the city of Vaikuntha.

122. Of which Mahaprabhu sings, that very Bhagavan, […][53]

The glory of the Lord

123. In the form of Bhagavan the Lord is in endless pastimes; by the Lord's mercy Bhagavan is one in form.[54]

124. Ananta in the form of Madhava sports in play;
Ananta serves in the house of Mukunda.

125. Mahaprabhu honours devotion with reverence, as if a gem were hidden within a stone.[55]

126. In the form of the original energy is Mahi, the Vaishnavi mother; her child is Ganga, who holds the great jewel.

[p. 19]

127. All these original forms give birth to devotion; devotion is dear to the Lord — this is the inner meaning.

128. This is the secret, unfathomable narrative of the Vedas:
a good to the pious, a hindrance to the deeds of the wicked.

129. Listen, all, to these secret accounts:
their support is Mahaprabhu, Bhagavan.

130. Glory, glory to Bhagavan, glory to Haladhara!
Glory, glory to Bhagavan, the beautiful Trimalla![56]

131. Glory, glory to Harihara, glory to Balarama!
Glory, glory to Jagannatha, the abode of bliss!

132. Glory, glory to Mahaprabhu Sri Krishna Chaitanya!
Glory, glory to Nityananda Prabhu, blessed is He, blessed!

The meeting at Nilachala

133. Thus in joy all the great souls safely came to Nilachala.

134. Seeing at Kamalapura the flags and banners [of the temple], all fell down weeping, [prostrate] like sticks.[57]

135. Mahaprabhu, hearing of the arrival of the host of devotees, wished to go out to meet them.

136. What wondrous love — it has no end:
His mahaprasada reaches as far as Kataka!

137. "For Advaita's sake is this descent of Mine" —
so Mahaprabhu says again and again.

138. "I lay asleep in the Ocean of Milk —
My sleep was broken by Nada's roar."[58]

[p. 20]

139. "Nada! Nada!" crying, the Lord roars:
"For Advaita's sake is this descent of Mine."

140. No one can understand the reason [for His love of] Nada:
for Nada's sake I descended into the three worlds.

141. Because of Nada [came] Lord Chaitanya and Nitai, whose qualities I sing in endless universes.

Conclusion

142. Endless are Chaitanya's servants — how many names do I know?
With joined palms I praise the feet of them all.

143. Whoever, rising at dawn, reads and hears [this] attains Advaita and Chaitanya — this cannot be refuted.

144. Know Sri Nityananda and Sri Chaitanya-chandra — Vrindavana Dasa sings at Their feet.[59]

Thus ends the "Sri Vaishnava-vandana" composed by Srimad Vrindavana Dasa Thakura.

Part 5. The tripadi Vaishnava-vandana of the "second" Vrindavana Dasa

A Bengali vandana, entitled "Third vandana" in the 1910 edition: tripadi stanzas (2–68), then payar couplets (69–150). Introduction; Gaura, Nityananda, Advaita and their families; the associates at Navadvipa; the sannyasis; the Gosvamis of Vrindavana; associates in Gauda and Orissa; Nityananda's associates; conclusion (pp. 37–55 of the 1910 edition)[1]

[p. 37]

Introduction

1. I praise the merciful Sri Krishna Chaitanya and Nityananda, [who contain] all avataras, the refuge of all devotees.[2]

Raga — as one chooses.

Refrain: Sing of Sri Krishna Chaitanya-chandra and of Balarama — Nityananda — with full voice: you will pass your life happily, gain the company of Vaishnavas and never see Yama.

2. The age of Kali, like a snake, has bitten all people, and the world writhes in the burning of the poison; Gauranga, the abode of virtues, by the power of the great mantra — the name "Hare Krishna Rama" — has brought it back to life.

3. Above all the Vaishnavas, purifiers of the three worlds, seeing fallen and suffering souls, were moved in their hearts by compassion and, instructing [them] in Krishna, made them happy with the happiness of Krishna.

4. Listen, O base man: give up false maya, hold fast, hold fast to the feet of the Vaishnavas; by the power of a Vaishnava's mercy Kala (time) cannot devour you — you will pass [it] safely.

5. Keep company with Vaishnavas, look upon a Vaishnava's form, hear with your ears a Vaishnava's words; reflect and see in your mind: apart from the Thakura Vaishnava, no one else can give devotion to Hari.[3]

[p. 38]

6. The greatness of the Vaishnavas is unknown to the world and to the Vedas, and even the gods do not grasp its essence;
I am the lowest of the low, weaker than a moth — what shall I say of it with my small mouth?

7. And yet, according to this strength, day and night, reflecting day after day,
I shall describe something of Sri Chaitanya, Nityananda and all the devotees with Them.

8. I shall speak of my heart: towards a rasa of which I am unworthy — towards that very rasa my mind has been drawn; do not laugh at faults of sandhi and of words: Lord Janardana accepts the feeling.[4]

9. Simple by nature, I do not know what comes before and after, and the vandana will not go in order; therefore with words I bow and beg pardon — let no one count it an offence.[5]

10. Prostrating my body on the ground, first of all I shall bow to the feet of Shachi and Jagannatha; then I praise Vishvarupa, the Thakura, king of sannyasis, blessed by the name Sri Shankararanya.[6]

11. With undivided devotion I praise Gaurachandra-Hari, the descent auspicious for the world: He was born in the town of Nadia to protect the dharma of the age and spread sankirtana.[7]

[p. 39]

The families of the Lord and of Nityananda

12. With great reverence I praise Lakshmi and Vishnupriya, then I praise the divine Gadadhara:
of all the Vaishnavas none is so dear [to the Lord] — he is Chaitanya's second body.[8]

13. I praise the mother, Padmavati, and the father, Hadai Pandita, whose son is such a one — Nityananda;
I praise Prabhu Nityananda, fearless, the root of bliss, who delivered all.[9]

14. I bow to the feet of her whose name is Varuni, the abode of Ananga-manjari:
she who is Ananga-manjari is Jahnava Gosani; Varuni is her former name.[10]

15. Falling to the ground in joy, I praise Vasu and Jahnavi, whose son is Virachandra;
I shall praise Thakura Virabhadra, deep and steadfast, with whose virtues the world was filled.

16. At Nilachala Gaurahari held a chief counsel in private with Nityananda; its reason is this: that Vira Prabhu is a descent of Gauranga Himself.[11]

17. Do not doubt this: in the Sri Chaitanya-bhagavata Vrindavana Dasa wrote it;
Abhirama understood all this and, bowing, revealed it.[12]

[p. 40]

18. Radha and Krishna in liquid form, who dwelt in Brahma's vessel, the Mother of the world abiding in the three worlds —
Bhagavan Himself become water, named Ganga-devi: I praise that daughter of Nityananda.[13]

19. The abode of Govinda's prema, named Acharya Madhava, whose body is full of the bliss of prema — with joined palms I praise his lotus feet: Ganga-devi is his wife.[14]

Refrain: Well done, O Gaurangachand: spreading the net of prema, You have bound the minds of living beings; by meditation on Hari's name and qualities You have made the people of the world blessed — I die, [giving myself] as Your ransom.

Madhavendra Puri, Advaita and His family

20. I praise Sri Madhava Puri: having descended to earth, he revealed devotion to Vishnu; he is the ancient original guru, a wish-tree of compassion, Mahaprabhu's first devotee.[15]

21. I praise the lord of Shantipura, the wise Sri Advaita, whose might is like Sadashiva's:
by the power of His austerity Chaitanya, brought to earth, made His descent.[16]

[p. 41]

22. The original energy of Kailasa, I praise Sita-bhagavati, whose might equals the power of devotion:
by her vow Jagannatha descended and spread prasada.[17]

23. The dust of Sita's feet I shall praise, placing it on my head — and I shall count myself worthy of praise;
I praise her dear son, Sri Achyutananda, renounced from childhood.[18]

The associates at Navadvipa

24. My heart's desire fulfilled, I shall praise Srivasa, non-different from Narada, the best of sages;
I praise Malini-devi, whom Prabhu Nityananda and Vishvambhara called "mother".[19]

25. I praise Narayani-devi: serving Chaitanya's feet, she received the nectar of His lips;
I shall praise Sri Haridasa — the manifestation of Brahma himself — who made [people] chant the name aloud.[20]

26. I shall praise Paramananda and Pandita Jagadananda, like Sarasvati in another form;
Thakura Sri Gopinatha fell at [the Lord's] feet and offered the Lord much praise.[21]

27. I shall praise Murari Gupta, like that very Hanuman, whose treasure of life is Raghunatha;
I praise Sri Chandrashekhara, cool as the moon, then I praise Acharyaratna.[22]

[p. 42]

28. Govinda and Garuda I shall praise with hymns: their meditation is Gaura's feet;
I shall praise Mukunda Datta, maddened by Krishna's qualities, whose singing puts the kinnaras to shame.[23]

29. I praise Vasudeva Datta, whose secret essence and greatness cannot be told:
from the breeze of his body arises prema-bhakti for Krishna — what other comparison shall I give?[24]

30. Damodara, Pitambara, Jagannatha, Shankara, Narayana — these five brothers, free from all desires, depending on nothing, detached — I shall praise them together.[25]

31. Famed as the Lord's maternal grandfather, Nilambara Chakravarti I shall carefully praise:
surpassing the omniscient in vision, he drew up the Lord's auspicious horoscope with predictions of the future.[26]

32. The abode of all virtues, I shall praise Pandita Rama, harmless, doing good to others; with all my heart, body and mind I praise Gupta Narayana, placing his feet upon my head.[27]

33. Dwelling in the town of Nadia, I praise the guru Gangadasa, with whom the Lord studied; holding a straw between my teeth, I humbly praise Vishnudasa and Sudarshana.[28]

[p. 43]

34. Sadashiva, Vidyanidhi, Shrigarbha and Shrinidhi, Buddhimanta Khan Mahashaya, the brahmachari Shuklambara, heirs to the treasure of prema — these six I praise.[29]

35. Ramadasa, Kavichandra, the scribe Vijayananda, Acharya Ratneshvara I shall praise;
I shall praise the generous Shridhara, whose customer was Gauranga at his stall of banana pith, bananas and banana flowers.[30]

36. With joined palms I praise Vanamali with his son — the two who beg for the alms of devotion; then I shall praise Halayudha and Vasudeva, whose minds are wholly given to Chaitanya.[31]

37. The vessel of Ai's mercy, I shall praise Ishana, whom Ai brought up;
Garuda and Kashishvara I shall praise next, having praised the feet of Jagadisha.[32]

38. Gangadasa, Krishnananda, Raya Sri Mukunda I praise with special reverence;
I praise Sri Vallabhacharya, whose deed bore fruit: he gave the Lord his daughter Lakshmi.[33]

39. With devotion in my mind I shall praise Pandita Sri Sanatana, whose daughter is Vishnupriya:
by the power of what austerity, by the fruit of what merit — I do not know — Mahaprabhu became his son-in-law.

[p. 44]

40. With both palms joined, I praise the brahmana Kashinatha; I shall praise Acharya Vanamali, who came and arranged the match of Lakshmi-devi for her auspicious marriage with the Lord.[34]

The sannyasis

41. I shall praise Ishvara Puri, whom the Lord accepted as guru, considering Himself lowly;
I praise Keshava Bharati with deep humility — the one who made the Lord a sannyasi.

42. I praise Ramachandra Puri: seeing his vehemence, the Lord gave up everything; Sri Puri Paramananda — I praise his feet — the one called Thakura Uddhava.[35]

43. I praise Damodara Puri, to whom Gaurahari is subject, whose manner is like Satyabhama's;
Sri Nrisimhananda the sannyasi, who delights in sankirtana, I praise, [and] the wise Satyananda.[36]

44. I praise Garuda Avadhuta, whose prema is wondrous — marvellous to see and to hear;
I shall praise Sri Vishnu Puri, who composed the Vishnu-bhakti-ratnavali to deliver people.[37]

45. I praise Vishveshvarananda, whose life is Gaurachandra; then I praise Sri Keshava Puri;
I praise Anubhavananda, Bharati Sachchidananda, then I praise Manoratha Puri.[38]

[p. 45]

The Gosvamis of Vrindavana

46. I praise Rupa and Sanatana, dwelling in Sri Vrindavana, supremely renounced, free from the world:
giving up their royal posts and taking the guise of beggars, they took a water-pot and a kaupina.[39]

47. I praise Jiva Gosani, whom all the Vaishnavas asked: "Which truth is the essence?"
Having examined all the shastras, he answered: "Bhakti-yoga alone — there is nothing higher."[40]

48. Dwelling at Sri Radha-kunda, I praise Raghunatha Dasa, who knows the inner heart of Chaitanya; then with great devotion I praise Raghava Gosani, whose play is at Govardhana.[41]

49. I shall praise Gopala Bhatta, who lives in one place only — near Sanatana:
no other talk is in his mouth — days and nights he passes happily in Govinda's name and qualities.[42]

50. I praise Raghunatha Bhatta, maddened by love for Krishna — in Vrindavana, among the Vrajavasis:
when he reads the Bhagavata, his body is overcome by prema, and a sweet voice sounds in his telling.[43]

51. I praise Prabhu Lokanatha, who with Bhugarbha Thakura always sports in Vrindavana:
seeing people in distress, always anxious at heart, he gave them the treasure of prema and made them happy.[44]

[p. 46]

52. With devotion I praise Prabodhananda Sarasvati, abode of the highest greatness and virtues:
the Sri Chaitanya-chandramrita is a book he composed; this book is the treasure and life of the devotees.[45]

53. With a joyful mind I praise the wise Kashishvara, whom all call the famous "Bhakta";
I praise Shuddha Sarasvati, firm in devotion to Gaura's feet: beasts and birds are captive to his feeling.[46]

The associates in Gauda and Orissa

54. I shall praise Raghavananda, in whose house Nityananda made His power known: on the lemon tree in his garden a kadamba blossomed — all who saw it were amazed.[47]

55. I praise the beautiful Thakura Sri Purandara, like that very Angada Thakura:
a certain brahmana, taking him, received him as a guest in his house — and with all his family saw the tail.[48]

56. I praise Kashi, the best of Mishras, whose house is in Utkala, in whose dwelling [lived] Gauraraya; Pattanayaka Vaninatha, whose life is Jagannatha, I shall praise at his feet.[49]

57. I praise Raya Ramananda, with whom Gaurachandra discussed the characteristics of devotion;
I shall praise Sri Vakreshvara: for his dancing Vishvambhara in great bliss sang kirtana.[50]

[p. 47]

58. I shall praise Subuddhi Mishra and Sri Govindananda the brahmana, by whose mental causeway-road from Kuliya to Gauda the Lord went, rejoicing.[51]

59. She who is the daughter of Vrishabhanu is Gadadhara Dasa: now he has revealed his name; let no one doubt: this is Gauranga's twin body — such is Gadadhara Dasa.[52]

60. I praise Gadadhara Dasa, whose pastimes are incomparable, whose body is full of the rasa of prema;
I praise Sadashiva the vaidya: by his grace a stone at once melts and becomes water.[53]

61. I praise Shivananda Sena, who has no thought other than Chaitanya's lotus feet;
I shall praise Mukunda Dasa, living in Khanda of the vaidyas, whose son is Sri Raghunandana.[54]

62. Mukunda Dasa's devotion — Krishna's inexpressible power — is known in the world to this day:
seeing a peacock feather, his eyes grew restless and he fell in confusion, overwhelmed with prema.[55]

63. I shall praise Sri Narahari Dasa — blessed is he, I offer myself for him — in whose heart are Chaitanya's pastimes;
I praise Raghunandana, like Madana in form, whose dancing enchants the world.[56]

[p. 48]

64. I praise Raghunatha Dasa, who delights in the happiness of prema, whose mind is bound in the net of love;
I praise Acharya Purandara: in the feeling of Krishna he constantly, always weeps aloud.[57]

65. Thakura Sri Krishnadasa, living in Akaihat — peaceful, utterly without possessions;
Paramananda Pandita, Mahaprabhu's fellow student — these I praise with devotion.[58]

66. In the highest bliss I shall praise Pandita Sri Devananda, who always reads the Bhagavata;
I shall praise Acharyachandra, who knows the inner meaning of prema, whose virtues and deeds are known to the world.[59]

67. Govinda, Madhavananda, Vasudeva Ghosha — I praise [them], three brothers, an ocean of virtues:
hearing their song, Lord Vishvambhara, [surrounded by] all His associates, could not contain Himself.[60]

68. Gadadhara Dasa and with him Vasudeva Ghosha I shall carefully praise, both:
the bud of a karavi flower that was on his ear became fragrant like a lotus before the assembly.[61]

Refrain: Blessed are Advaita and Gaurachandra, blessed, blessed is Nityananda, blessed, blessed is the circle of devotees; blessed, blessed are the name and the qualities, blessed, blessed is sankirtana — blessed is all this in the age of Kali.

[p. 49]

Nityananda's associates

69. I praise Thakura Ramadasa, foremost among devotees, whose fame filled the world, whose manifestation is wondrous.

70. A log lay there [that only] sixteen men [could lift];
he playfully lifted it with two fingers

71. and, bending in a threefold curve, made a flute of it and played sweet songs on it.[62]

72. The cowherd boy Shridama is Abhirama Gosani, a second Chaitanya: his greatness has no end.[63]

73. I praise the Sudama of Vraja — Thakura Sundara, whose might is like fire, whose form is beautiful.

74. His servant seizes a tiger and brings it from the forest, embraces it and makes it hear the name of Hari in its ear.[64]

75. I shall praise Sri Gauridasa Pandita Thakura, the beloved of Nityananda, full of greatness.

76. Taking the Lord's command on his head, he went to Shantipura and brought Acharya Prabhu [Advaita] to Utkala.[65]

77. He is called Subala, the cowherd boy of Gokula; he gives refuge to the good and is death to the wicked.

78. His power of devotion to Krishna is known to the world:
because of him the godless [went to] the netherworld (?).[66]

79. He lives in Ambika;
in his house are the Deities of Nityananda and Chaitanya.

80. While the Lord was still present he manifested [these] Deities:
whoever sees these Deities, his bonds of karma are destroyed.[67]

[p. 50]

81. With divine garlands, sandal paste, clothes and ornaments he adorned Nitaichand.

82. With great reverence I praise Uddharana Datta, who travelled to the holy places together with Nityananda.[68]

83. I shall carefully praise Thakura Parameshvara Dasa, who revealed himself while dancing in kirtana:

84. calling forty jackals one by one,
he made them all utter the sixteen names.[69]

85. I praise Thakura Pippalai, artless in a child's feeling, all of whose pastimes and play are like a child's.

86. Then I praise Thakura Kamalakara Dasa, whose highest exultation is in the sankirtana of Krishna.[70]

87. I praise Purushottama Tirtha, the crown of rasikas, who is intoxicated with the rasa of Sri Krishna.[71]

88. I praise the mad, playful Kala Krishnadasa:
always beside himself with prema, he cannot keep hold of his cloth.[72]

89. With joined palms I shall praise Sri Saranga Thakura, in whose patched quilt there were six score snakes.[73]

90. I praise Makaradhvaja Kara, a treasury of virtues, who always sings Krishna's qualities in the Lord's presence.

91. I praise Bhagavata Acharya, Mishra Kaviraja;
I praise Ananta Acharya, [who lives] in Navadvipa.[74]

92. Then I shall praise the feet of Madhu Pandita, whom all call the Vaishnava Pandita.[75]

[p. 51]

Associates in Orissa and others

93. I shall praise the feet of Govinda Acharya, who described the secret of Radha and Krishna.

94. I praise the wise Sarvabhauma Bhattacharya, who is called Brihaspati, the guru of the gods.

95. I shall praise King Prataparudra, who was granted the sight of Mahaprabhu's six-armed form.[76]

96. Having praised the feet of the brahmana Raghunatha Dasa, [I praise] Vishnudasa the vaidya and Vipradasa of Utkala.[77]

97. I praise Kanai Khutiya, a stream of the rasa of prema, whose nature and feeling are like a gopi's;

98. his sons are Jagannatha Dasa and Balarama:
what shall I say of their greatness? It is incomparable.

99. I praise Jagannatha Dasa, a guru in the rasa of song:
at his songs the creepers and trees of the forest weep.

100. I praise Balarama Dasa, the Oriya Vaishnava:
Jagannatha and Balarama are captive to his feeling.[78]

101. Govindananda Thakura, called Sugriva, built a great bridge for the Lord.[79]

102. I praise Kashishvara, Simheshvara, Shivananda;
I praise with joy Sri Chandaneshvara.[80]

103. I shall praise Madhava Pattanayaka;
I shall praise Hari Bhatta and Baladeva Mahati.

104. I praise Subuddhi Mishra, who gives understanding to the unwise;
I praise Shrinatha Mishra, knower of the truth of Krishna.

[p. 52]

105. I shall carefully praise Tulasi Mishra; with body, word and mind I praise Kashinatha Mahati.[81]

106. I shall praise Ramananda, the ornament of the Vasu family, whose family are bees at Gaura's lotus feet.

107. Purushottama Brahmachari and Sri Madhu Pandita, two noble servants of Chaitanya, I praise.

108. I praise the brahmana Ramachandra, Pandita Shrikara;
I praise Yadu Kavichandra, an ocean of happiness.[82]

109. I shall praise Pandita Sri Dhananjaya, whose renunciation is proclaimed in the world:

110. giving at the Lord's feet a household worth a hundred thousand, he took a pot in his hand and put on a kaupina.[83]

111. I praise both feet of Pandita Suryadasa, whose son-in-law Prabhu Nityananda became.

112. I shall praise the feet of Thakura Vamshivadana, who formerly was the flute at Krishna's lips.

113. With care I shall praise Murari Chaitanya Dasa, whose pastimes and play are with pythons.

114. I praise Jagannatha Sena, Paramananda Gupta;
I shall praise the boy Ramadasa and Kavichandra.

115. I shall praise Vallabhacharya, Sena Kamsari;
I shall praise Bhaskara — a descent of Vishvakarma.

116. I praise Balarama Dasa, the teacher of song, who has no business other than service to Nityananda.[84]

[p. 53]

117. I praise Mahesha Pandita, maddened by Krishna;
I praise Jagadisha Pandita, who delights in dancing.

118. I praise Narayani's son, Vrindavana Dasa, whom all devotees call Vedavyasa.

119. The Sri Chaitanya-bhagavata is his composition; this book has enchanted the three worlds.[85]

120. I shall praise the wise Krishnadasa of Behari,[86] who lives in the village of Badagachhi:

121. this man, in the net of love, kept Nitaichand captive in his house.

122. Pandita Thakura came and, striking his chest, seized [Him] by the edge of His cloth and led Him away, saying: "My Lord!"

123. In separation from Nityananda, Thakura Krishnadasa spent seven months like a madman.

124. Nityananda came again to his house, and, gaining the sight of Nityananda, he grew calm.[87]

125. I shall praise Paramananda, the best of avadhutas, whose body is full of the rasa of prema.

126. I praise Pandita Gangadasa, who lives at Anadi;[88]
I praise Yadunatha Dasa, sweet in his pastimes.

127. I praise Purushottama Tirtha, Tirtha Sri Rama;
I praise Raghunatha Puri, [that] my heart's desire be fulfilled.[89]

128. I praise Ashrama Upendra, Hariharananda;
I praise Tirtha Vasudeva, Puri Sri Ananta.[90]

[p. 54]

129. I praise the sweet-formed Mukunda Kaviraja;
I praise Rajiva (?) Pandita in Navadvipa.[91]

130. I praise Shishu Krishnadasa, the little cowherd, whose body Nityananda nourished with His own hands.[92]

131. Then I worshipped Madhava Acharya, whose work it is always to describe Krishna's qualities:

132. he composed the Krishna-mangala following the Bhagavata — this song became known to the whole world.[93]

133. Nrisimha Chaitanya Dasa and Krishnadasa — two noble ones, an abode of love, I praise.

134. I praise the utterly penniless Sri Shankara Ghosha, with whose playing on the dampha the Lord is pleased.

135. I praise Madhava Acharya, the jewel of the twice-born, whose wife is Ganga, Nityananda's daughter.[94]

136. I shall praise the feet of Ganga-devi, Shivananda Chakravarti, Narayana Padiyari.[95]

Conclusion

137. Here ends a brief Vaishnava-vandana:
the devotees of Chaitanya are countless — they cannot be numbered.

138. And how many more hundreds and thousands of Vaishnavas fill the three worlds!

139. In the north, south, east and west countless Vaishnavas have descended to earth.

140. At the beginning of the age of Kali, at Chaitanya's descent, by Chaitanya's mercy there are Vaishnavas in every house.

[p. 55]

141. Therefore the Vaishnavas are without number:
freely wander all these purifiers of the fallen.

142. The Lords of them all are Chaitanya and Nityananda:
these are the devotees of the two Mahaprabhus.

143. Who can know the truth of the Vaishnavas?
The Sri Bhagavata proclaims the greatness of the Vaishnavas.

144. Such a praise of the feet of all the Vaishnavas, when read and heard, frees one from suffering.

145. [One] is freed from sin, his body becomes pure;
by reading and hearing the heart becomes clear.

146. On his lips shines the name "Krishna"; whatever he desires is fulfilled.

147. In his throat the goddess Sarasvati plays;
Kamala comes and settles in his house.

148. Wherever he goes, he knows no defeat:
everywhere he goes as a victor.

149. Disease, old age and fever do not touch his body;
he is healthy and always content.

150. Surely he will attain pure devotion — with this longing it was composed by Vrindavana Dasa.[96]

Thus ends the "Vaishnava-vandana" composed by Sri Vrindavana Dasa.
