“Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta”

Ādi-līlā

Chapter 1

The Auspicious Invocation: Obeisance to the Guru and Others

(English translation from the Bengali, following the Gauḍīya Maṭha edition and the Anubhāṣya, 2026)

1 I worship the gurus, the devotees of the Lord, His avatāras, His manifestations and His potencies — and the Lord Himself, who is known as Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya.[1]

2 I worship Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya and Śrī Nityānanda, who are like a wonderful sun and moon. They have risen together on the eastern horizon of Gauḍa, dispelling the darkness and bestowing good on all.

3 There is no Truth in the world higher than Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya. That which the Upaniṣads call the non-dual Brahman is the effulgence of His body; the Puruṣa, the Supersoul who dwells within every heart, is His partial manifestation; and Bhagavān, full in all six opulences, is He Himself.[2]

4 “May the Lord Hari, the son of Śacī, illumined by a mass of lustre more beautiful than gold, ever shine in the inmost cave of your hearts. Out of His mercy He has descended in the age of Kali to bestow what had not been given for a very long time — the treasure of devotion to Himself, rich in the most exalted, radiant ujjvala-rasa.” (Vidagdha-mādhava, 1.2)[3]

5 “Śrī Rādhā is the transformation of Kṛṣṇa’s love, His pleasure potency, hlādinī-śakti. Therefore, though Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa are one in Self, from time without beginning They have appeared in the world in two different forms. Now these Two have become one and are manifest as Śrī Caitanya. I bow to Him, Kṛṣṇa Himself, adorned with the sentiment and the lustre of Śrī Rādhā.” (diary of Svarūpa Dāmodara)[4]

6 “What is the greatness of Śrī Rādhā’s love? What is My own wondrous sweetness, which She alone tastes through that love? And what is the happiness She feels in experiencing Me?” Longing to know this, the moon Hari, rich with Her sentiment, was born from the ocean of Śacī’s womb. (diary of Svarūpa Dāmodara)[5]

7 “Saṅkarṣaṇa, the Lord who lies in the Causal Ocean, the Lord who lies in the Garbha Ocean, the Lord who lies in the Ocean of Milk, and Śeṣa are His portions and the parts of His portions: may that Rāma who is called Nityānanda be my refuge.” (diary of Svarūpa Dāmodara)[6]

8 “I take refuge in Śrī Nityānanda Rāma, whose form called Saṅkarṣaṇa shines amid the fourfold expansion (catur-vyūha) in the all-pervading world of Vaikuṇṭha, full of every opulence and beyond māyā.” (diary of Svarūpa Dāmodara)

9 “I take refuge in Śrī Nityānanda Rāma. A part of Him is the original Lord, the Puruṣa, the master of māyā, who lies in person in the midst of the Causal Ocean, His body the shelter of countless universes.” (diary of Svarūpa Dāmodara)

10 “I take refuge in Śrī Nityānanda Rāma. A part of His part is the blessed Garbhodakaśāyī, whose navel-lotus, with all the worlds as its stem, is the birthplace of Brahmā, the creator of the worlds.” (diary of Svarūpa Dāmodara)[7]

11 “I take refuge in Śrī Nityānanda Rāma. A part of a part of His part is Viṣṇu who lies on the Ocean of Milk, the Supersoul and maintainer of all beings; and Ananta, who upholds the earth, is a portion of that Viṣṇu.” (diary of Svarūpa Dāmodara)[8]

12 Mahā-Viṣṇu is the maker of the world, who creates it through māyā; and this Lord Advaita Ācārya is His avatāra.[9]

13 He is called Advaita because He is non-different from Hari, and Ācārya because He teaches bhakti. I take shelter of Him, the Lord Advaita Ācārya, who has descended as a devotee.

14 “I bow to Kṛṣṇa, who is manifest as five truths — the Pañca-tattva: as a devotee in form and a devotee in essence, as the incarnation of a devotee, as the one called a devotee, and as the potency of devotion.” (Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī)[10]

15 All glory to the merciful Śrī Śrī Rādhā and Madana-mohana! I am lame and dull of mind, and They are my only refuge; Their lotus feet are all I have.[11]

16 I remember Śrī Śrī Rādhā and Śrī Govindadeva, seated on a throne in a beautiful temple of jewels beneath a wish-fulfilling tree in the radiant forest of Vṛndāvana, served by Their dearest companions.[12]

17 May the beautiful Śrī Gopīnātha, who begins the sweet rāsa dance, be our good fortune. Standing on the bank by Vaṁśīvaṭa, He draws the gopīs to Himself with the sounds of His flute.[13]

18 Glory, glory to Śrī Caitanya! Glory to Nityānanda! Glory to Advaitacandra, and glory to all the devotees of Gaura!

19 These three Deities have made the Gauḍīya devotees Their own. I worship Their feet: these Three are my Lords.[14]

20 At the beginning of the book I make the auspicious invocation — the remembrance of three: the Guru, the Vaiṣṇavas and Bhagavān.

21 Remembering these three, one overcomes all obstacles and easily attains one's heart's desire.

22 This invocation is of three kinds: indicating the subject, giving blessing and offering obeisance.

23 In the first two verses is the obeisance to the worshipful Lord, in two ways — general and specific.

24 In the third verse I indicate the subject, through which the Supreme Truth is made known.

25 In the fourth verse I bless the world, praying that the grace of Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya may reach all.

26 In that verse I also tell the external reason for His descent; in the fifth and sixth verses I tell its root purpose.

27 In these six verses is the truth of Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya, and in the next five, the greatness of Śrī Nityānanda.

28 Then two verses tell the truth of Advaita, and one verse explains the Pañca-tattva.

29 In these fourteen verses I make the auspicious invocation, and within them I describe the whole subject.

30 Offering obeisance to all the Vaiṣṇavas who hear this, I shall now consider the meaning of all these verses.

31 O Vaiṣṇavas, hear with one-pointed mind how the scriptures establish the truth of Caitanya-Kṛṣṇa.[15]

32 Kṛṣṇa, the two kinds of guru, the devotees, the avatāras, the manifestations and the potencies — in these six forms He enjoys His pastimes.[16]

33 I worship the feet of these six truths; first I make the invocation in general.

34 I worship the gurus, the devotees of the Lord, His avatāras, His manifestations and His potencies — and the Lord Himself, who is known as Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya.

35 First I offer obeisance at the feet of my mantra-guru and of all my instructing gurus.[17]

36 Śrī Rūpa, Sanātana, Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa, Śrī Jīva, Gopāla Bhaṭṭa and Raghunātha Dāsa —

37 these six are my instructing gurus; at the lotus feet of them all I offer millions of obeisances.

38 To all the devotees of the Lord, of whom Śrīvāsa is the chief, I offer thousands of obeisances at their lotus feet.

39 Advaita Ācārya is a partial avatāra of the Lord; at His lotus feet I offer millions of obeisances.

40 Śrī Nityānanda Rāya is the Lord's own direct manifestation (svarūpa-prakāśa). I worship His lotus feet: I am His servant.

41 Gadādhara Paṇḍita and the others are the Lord's own potencies; at the feet of them all I offer thousands of obeisances.

42 Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya is Bhagavān Himself; at His lotus feet I offer endless obeisances.

43 Having bowed to the Lord together with His entourage, I shall now consider how He Himself is these six.[18]

44 Although my Guru is a servant of Śrī Caitanya, I know him to be His manifestation.[19]

45 On the evidence of scripture the guru is a form of Kṛṣṇa: in the form of the guru, Kṛṣṇa bestows His mercy on the devotees.

46 "Know the ācārya to be Me. Never show him disrespect, and do not envy him, thinking him an ordinary mortal, for the Guru embodies all the gods." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 11.17.27)[20]

47 I know the instructing Guru to be Kṛṣṇa's own form, in two aspects: the Indweller within, and the best of devotees.[21]

48 "O Lord! Even if the wise lived as long as Brahmā and remembered with ever-growing joy all that You have done for them, they could not repay their debt to You. For, dispelling all that is inauspicious in embodied souls, You come to them from without as the ācārya and from within as the Supersoul, and reveal to them the way to Yourself." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 11.29.6)[22]

49 “To those who are ever devoted to Me and worship Me with love, I give the understanding that brings them to Me.” (Bhagavad-gītā, 10.10)[23]

50 “Thus the Lord Himself instructed Brahmā and made him realise it.”

51 “Receive from Me, as I speak it, the supremely confidential knowledge of Myself, endowed with realisation, together with its secret and that secret’s integral part.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 2.9.31)[24]

52 “By My grace may you truly realise Me as I am — My being, My forms, My qualities and My deeds.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 2.9.32)

53 “Before creation I alone existed; there was nothing else — neither effect, nor cause, nor That which is beyond them. After creation this whole world is not other than Me, and what remains after its dissolution is also I.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 2.9.33)[25]

54 “Whatever appears to exist apart from Me, the Reality, and does not appear in Me, know that to be My māyā, like a reflection and like darkness.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 2.9.34)[26]

55 “As the great elements enter all beings, great and small, and yet remain outside them, so I am within all that is created and yet beyond it.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 2.9.35)[27]

56 “This much must be inquired into by one who seeks the truth of the Self: That which exists everywhere and always, both directly and indirectly.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 2.9.36)[28]

57 “Glory to Cintāmaṇi and to Somagiri, my guru! Glory to my instructing guru, the Lord whose crown is a peacock feather! At the tips of His feet, like the tender shoots of a wish-fulfilling tree, Jayaśrī (Śrī Rādhā) tastes the joy of choosing Him as Her own." (Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta, 1)[29]

58 The soul cannot see Kṛṣṇa directly; therefore He is the guru within as the Indweller, and becomes the instructing guru in the form of a great devotee.

59 "Therefore the wise should give up bad company and associate with the saintly, for the saints alone, by their words, cut through the attachments of his mind." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 11.26.26)

60 (Lord Kapila to His mother Devahūti:) "In the company of the saints there are talks revealing My power, delightful to the heart and to the ear. By relishing them one quickly comes to faith in Me, the path of liberation, and after it to attraction (rati) and love (prema-bhakti)." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 3.25.25)[30]

61 The devotee is the Lord's own form, His abode: in the devotee's heart Kṛṣṇa always rests.[31]

62 "The saints are My heart, and I am the heart of the saints. They know no one but Me, and I know no one but them." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 9.4.68)

63 "Devotees such as you are themselves holy places, my lord. By the Lord who dwells within your hearts, you make even the holy places holy." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 1.13.10)[32]

64 These devotees are of two kinds: the Lord's eternal associates and those who practise devotion.

65–66 The Lord's avatāras are of three kinds: partial avatāras, guṇa-avatāras, and, third, empowered avatāras. The partial avatāras are the

Puruṣas, Matsya and the others.

67 Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva are counted as the three guṇa-avatāras; the Kumāras, Pṛthu and the sage Vyāsa are empowered avatāras.

68 The Lord manifests Himself in two ways: one is prakāśa, the other vilāsa.

69–70 When one Person appears in many forms, alike in appearance and one in identity — as at the marriage of the queens or in the rāsa dance — this is called Kṛṣṇa's chief prakāśa.

71 "How wonderful! The one Kṛṣṇa, in one and the same body, married sixteen thousand princesses at once, each in her own palace." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.69.2)

72 "The festival of the rāsa dance began, adorned with circles of gopīs; Kṛṣṇa, the Master of yoga, stood between each two of them —" (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.33.3)

73–74 "— having entered between them and embraced each by the neck, so that every girl thought Him beside her alone. At once the sky was crowded with hundreds of celestial cars of the gods and their wives, their hearts filled with intense eagerness. Then the drums sounded and showers of flowers fell." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.33.3–4)[33]

75 "When one form appears at one time in many places, identical in every way, that is called prakāśa." (Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta, 1.21)

76 But when one and the same Person appears in many forms that differ in appearance, that is called vilāsa.

77 “When by His potency His own form appears for His pastimes in a different shape, almost equal to Him, it is called vilāsa.” (Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta, 1.15)[34]

78 Examples are Baladeva, Nārāyaṇa in the spiritual sky, and Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna and the others.[35]

79–80 The Lord’s potencies are of three kinds: the Lakṣmīs in Vaikuṇṭha, the queens in Dvārakā, and the gopīs in Vraja. The gopīs are the foremost of all, for with them the son of the king of Vraja is Bhagavān Himself.[36]

81 The expansions of the body of Kṛṣṇa’s original form are equal to Him, and together with the devotees they form His entourage.[37]

82 Thus, beginning with the devotees, I have worshipped them all in order; worship of them all is the source of every good.

83 In the first verse is the general invocation; in the second I offer specific worship.

84 I worship Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya and Śrī Nityānanda, who are like a wonderful sun and moon. They have risen together on the eastern horizon of Gauḍa, dispelling the darkness and bestowing good on all.

85–86 Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, who sported in Vraja long ago, Their radiance surpassing millions of suns and moons, have now, out of compassion for the world, risen on the eastern horizon in the land of Gauḍa.[38]

87 Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya and Prabhu Nityānanda — by Their appearance the whole world is filled with joy.

88–89 As the sun and moon remove all darkness and, revealing things, set the world about its duties, so these two Brothers dispelled the darkness of the soul's ignorance and gave it the gift of the Truth.

90 I call this darkness of ignorance kaitava, deceit: it is the desire for religious merit, wealth, pleasure and the rest.[39]

91 "In this beautiful Bhāgavatam, composed by the great sage, is taught the supreme dharma of the saintly who are free from envy, from which all deceit has been cast out. Here is known the true Reality, which bestows good and uproots the threefold miseries. What need is there of other scriptures? As soon as the pious wish to hear it, the Lord is at once captured within their hearts." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 1.1.2)[40]

92 Among them the chief deceit is the desire for liberation, by which devotion to Kṛṣṇa disappears.

93 "By the prefix pra even the intention of liberation is excluded."[41]

94 All good and bad deeds that obstruct devotion to Kṛṣṇa also belong to the soul's darkness of ignorance.

95 By Their grace this darkness is destroyed, and, destroying it, They reveal the Truth.

96 The Truth is Kṛṣṇa, devotion to Kṛṣṇa in the form of pure love (prema), and the congregational chanting of the Holy Name, the embodiment of all bliss.

97 The sun and moon dispel the outer darkness and reveal outer things — pots, cloth and the like.

98 But the two Brothers wash away the darkness of the heart and bring one to meet the two bhāgavatas.

99 One bhāgavata is the great scripture Bhāgavatam; the other bhāgavata is the devotee, the vessel of the rasa of devotion.

100 Through these two bhāgavatas They give the rasa of devotion, and the Lord, dwelling in the devotee's heart, is held captive by his love.[42]

101 One wonder is that the Two appeared at the same time; the other wonder is that They destroy the darkness in the cave of the heart.

102 This moon and sun, supremely kind, have risen in Gauḍa for the good fortune of the world.

103 I worship the feet of these two Lords, from whom come the destruction of obstacles and the fulfilment of desire.

104 In these two verses I have made the auspicious worship; now, all of you, hear the meaning of the third verse.

105 Fearing the abundance of what could be said and the swelling of the book, I do not describe it at length; I tell the essence in few words.

106 "Speech that is measured and essential is true eloquence."

107 By hearing this, one's heart will be freed from ignorance and other faults; deep love for Kṛṣṇa will arise, and one will find true satisfaction.[43]

108–109 The greatness of Śrī Caitanya, Nityānanda and Advaita, Their devotees, devotion, the Holy Name and the truth of the rasa of prema — I have written of each separately, after careful consideration. Whoever hears it will know the essence of all Truth.

110 Praying at the feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate the Caitanya-caritāmṛta.

Notes

1. According to the Anubhāṣya (on 1.34): the gurus are Śrī Nityānanda, Śrī Raghunātha, Śrī Rūpa and others; the devotees — Śrīvāsa and others; the avatāras — Śrī Advaita and others; the manifestations — Śrī Nityānanda and others; the potencies — Śrī Gadādhara, Svarūpa Dāmodara, Jagadānanda and others. “Known as Kṛṣṇa Caitanya” qualifies the Lord Himself (īśam). The verse is explained in 1.32–1.82. ↩
2. Anubhāṣya (on Ādi 2.5): Brahman is the radiance of His transcendental body, and the Paramātmā a particular manifestation of His majesty; both are only two aspects of His form, perceived according to the capacity of the seer — not the fullness of the Lord, as Bhagavān is. ↩
3. Anubhāṣya (on Ādi 3.4): unnatojjvala-rasa is “the exalted ujjvala-rasa, that is, śṛṅgāra-rasa” — the amorous love of Vraja, which in the gopīs is parakīyā; hence not “conjugal”. Sva-bhakti-śrī is “the beauty of prema for Him”. Why this gift was withheld for so long is explained by Kavirāja Gosvāmī in Ādi 3. ↩
4. Anubhāṣya (on Ādi 4.55): Rādhā is “the transformation of Kṛṣṇa’s love — the hlādinī-śakti in the form of the play of prema”; the Two are “of one Self”; Their two forms are the viṣaya and the āśraya of love, “from beginningless time” (purā); in Śrī Caitanya — “Kṛṣṇa within, Gaura without”. ↩
5. Anubhāṣya (on Ādi 4.230): mad-anubhavataḥ — “from experiencing Me”: Rādhā’s happiness comes from relishing Kṛṣṇa’s sweetness. ↩
6. Anubhāṣya (on Ādi 5.7): Saṅkarṣaṇa is Mahā-Saṅkarṣaṇa of the spiritual sky; then the three Puruṣa-avatāras; Śeṣa is Ananta. Ascribed in the edition to the diary of Svarūpa Dāmodara. ↩
7. Anubhāṣya (on Ādi 5.7, 5.93): Garbhodakaśāyī is the second Puruṣa, Hiraṇyagarbha, the Viṣṇu of the whole universe (samaṣṭi); the stem is the fourteen worlds. ↩
8. Anubhāṣya (on Ādi 5.109): Ananta, upholder of the earth, is a kalā of Kṣīrodakaśāyī. ↩
9. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya (on Ādi 6.10): one and the same māyā is the material cause as pradhāna and the efficient cause as māyā; Mahā-Viṣṇu creates through both. ↩

10. According to the Anubhāṣya (on Ādi 7.6): the devotee in form is Śrī Gaurāṅga, who tastes His own sweetness; the devotee in essence (in the form of His brother) is Śrī Nityānanda; the devotee-avatāra is Śrī Advaita; the devotee is Śrīvāsa and others; the potency is Gadādhara, Svarūpa Dāmodara, Rāmānanda and others. Ascribed in the edition to Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī. ↩
11. Anubhāṣya: manda-mati — “a mind absorbed in the world, feeble, unable to follow other paths such as karma or jñāna”; suratau — “merciful”, or “deeply attached to each other”. ↩
12. Anubhāṣya: preṣṭhālī — Lalitā and the other priya-narma-sakhīs, attended by Śrī Rūpa-mañjarī and others. ↩
13. Anubhāṣya: the flute “loosens every desire in the gopīs other than for Kṛṣṇa and draws them from their homes with the rope of prema”; śriye — “for the wealth of prema”. ↩
14. Anubhāṣya: Madana-mohana, Govinda and Gopīnātha are the presiding Deities of sambandha, abhidheya and prayojana taught by Śrī Caitanya. ↩
15. Bengali text as in the Gauḍīya Maṭha edition: «শাস্ত্র যে মত নিরূপণ». ↩
16. Anubhāṣya: guru-dvaya — the initiating (dīkṣā) and the instructing (śikṣā) guru; both are one guru-tattva and equally worshipful for the disciple. ↩
17. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: the singular «তাঁহার» is used because both kinds of guru are one tattva; another reading has «তা-সবার» (“of all of them”). ↩
18. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: āvaraṇa — “the devotees surrounding the Lord on all sides”. ↩
19. Anubhāṣya: all except Mahāprabhu are His servants; the guru is the āśraya-vigraha, the abode of service, and is the Lord’s manifestation as His servant, never to be regarded as the viṣaya (the object of worship). ↩
20. Anubhāṣya: mām — “My dearest one”; martya-buddhyā — “with a mind bounded by time, place and circumstance”. ↩
21. Anubhāṣya: the instructing guru is twofold — the caitya-guru, who gives discrimination from within, and the mahānta-guru, the great devotee. ↩
22. Anubhāṣya: apaciti — “a return of the favour, repayment”; aśubha — “absorption in what is not Kṛṣṇa”; sva-gati — “the way to Him, the position of His associate”. ↩
23. Anubhāṣya: this understanding (buddhi-yoga) cannot be gained by oneself or from anyone else — the Lord alone gives it. ↩
24. According to the Anubhāṣya: the knowledge is sambandha; the secret (rahasya) is prema-bhakti; its limb (aṅga) is sādhana-bhakti — hearing and the rest; all this the Lord speaks out of mercy, though Brahmā did not ask. ↩

25. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: “neither sat, nor asat, nor even the indescribable impersonal Brahman existed apart from Me.” Anubhāṣya: “I” is the Lord’s personal form, not the impersonal Brahman; the world is “not other than Me”. ↩
26. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: the reflection (ābhāsa) is the likeness of the spiritual world; darkness is what lies far from it. Anubhāṣya: the māyā meant here is twofold — jīva-māyā and guṇa-māyā. ↩
27. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: “I enter everything as the Paramātmā, yet remain eternally apart as Bhagavān, the only object of the devotees’ love.” The Anubhāṣya also reads na teṣu as nateṣu — “in those who bow to Me”: within their hearts and before their eyes He reveals His beauty. ↩
28. Anubhāṣya: anvaya-vyatireka — injunctions and prohibitions; also union and separation. ↩
29. According to the Anubhāṣya: Cintāmaṇi is the guru who showed the path (śravaṇa-guru), Somagiri the mantra-guru, and Kṛṣṇa the caitya-śikṣā-guru; jayaśrī is Vṛndāvaneśvarī; līlā-svayaṁvara-rasa — the joy of choosing Him out of deep love. The Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya takes “cintāmaṇi” as an epithet of Somagiri. ↩
30. Anubhāṣya: apavarga-vartmani — “in Hari, in whom ignorance ceases”; rati is bhāva, bhakti is prema. ↩
31. Anubhāṣya: the devotee belongs to the category of potency (śakti), not of the possessor of potency; Kṛṣṇa abides in him as in His dwelling. ↩
32. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: they purify the places of pilgrimage defiled by the sins of those who visit them. ↩
33. The Bengali reading of 1.74 follows the Gauḍīya Maṭha edition, «অত্যৌৎসুক্যভৃতাত্মনাম্», which the Anubhāṣya glosses: “their minds greatly agitated by the eagerness to see”. ↩
34. Anubhāṣya: anyākāram — “with a different arrangement of the limbs”; prāyeṇātma-samam — “equal to the original form, but with some difference in qualities”. ↩
35. Anubhāṣya: Baladeva is svayaṁ-prakāśa, Nārāyaṇa a prābhava-vilāsa. ↩
36. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: “His companions in Vraja are the svarūpa-śakti itself.” ↩
37. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: kāya-vyūha — “the expansion of His own body”; the entourage and the One it surrounds are one when seen through acintya-bhedābheda, and so the six truths of 1.32 are one. ↩

38. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: nija-dhāma — “Their effulgence”; pūrva-śaile — “in Gauḍa as the eastern mountain of sunrise, on the eastern bank of the Gaṅgā”. ↩
39. The Gauḍīya Maṭha edition reads «…বাঞ্ছা আদি এই সব» (“and so on”). Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya (on 1.91): kaitava is the desire for dharma, artha, kāma and mokṣa; the chief of them is the desire for liberation (1.92). ↩
40. The verse says only «শ্রীমদ্ভাগবতে মহামুনিকৃতে» (śrīmad-bhāgavate mahā-muni-kṛte), “in the beautiful Bhāgavata composed by the great sage”; the sage is not named. The Anubhāṣya explains: śrī-nārāyaṇa-mahā-muni-racite — “composed by the great sage Śrī Nārāyaṇa”; the Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: the Bhāgavatam was first composed by Śrī Nārāyaṇa in the form of four verses (catuḥ-ślokī). The translation therefore names no one, as the verse does not. Projjhita-kaitava — free from the desire for the fruits of dharma, artha, kāma and mokṣa. ↩
41. Śrīdhara Svāmī’s comment on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 1.1.2 (heading in the edition). ↩
42. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: “They have become subject to the love of the soul.” ↩
43. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: in place of «কৃষ্ণে গাঢ় প্রেম হবে» another reading has «সর্ব্বতত্ত্ব জ্ঞান হইবে» (“one will know all truths”). ↩