“Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta”

Antya-līlā

Chapter 4

The Festival of Association with Sanātana Once Again

(English translation from the Bengali, following the Gauḍīya Maṭha edition and the «Anubhāṣya», 2026 — draft)

1 When Śrī Sanātana came again from Vṛndāvana, Śrī Gaura, out of love, saved him from giving up his body and, by testing him, made him pure.[1]

2 Glory, glory to Śrī Caitanya! Glory to Nityānanda! Glory to Advaitacandra! Glory to all the devotees of Gaura![2]

3 When Rūpa went from Nīlācala to Gauḍa, Sanātana came from Mathurā to Nīlācala.

4 He came alone, on foot, by the forest path through Jhārikhaṇḍa, sometimes fasting, sometimes eating a little dry food.

5 Because of the bad water of Jhārikhaṇḍa and his fasting, itching sores broke out on his body, and fluid oozed from them when he scratched.

6 On the way a mood of detachment (nirveda) arose in him, and he reflected: “I am of low birth, and my body is utterly worthless.[3]

7 If I go to Jagannātha, I shall not obtain His darśana, nor shall I be able to see the Lord at all times.

8 I hear that His residence is near the temple, but I have no power to go near the temple.

9 The servants of Jagannātha move about there on their duties; if I touch them, I shall be guilty of an offence.

10 So if I give this body up in a good place, my sorrow will be eased and I shall attain a good destination.

11 At the Ratha-yātrā Jagannātha will come out; under the wheel of His chariot I shall give up this body.

12 Before Mahāprabhu's eyes, beholding Jagannātha, I shall give up my body at the chariot: this is the highest goal of life."

13 Having made this resolve, he came to Nīlācala and, asking people the way, arrived at the dwelling of Haridāsa.

14 He bowed down at the feet of Haridāsa, and Haridāsa, recognising him, embraced him.

15 His heart was eager to see Mahāprabhu. Haridāsa said, "The Lord will come now."

16 Just then the Lord, after seeing the upala-bhoga offering, came with His devotees to meet Haridāsa.

17 Seeing the Lord, both of them fell prostrate before Him. The Lord raised Haridāsa and embraced him.

18 Haridāsa said, "Sanātana is offering You obeisance." Seeing Sanātana, the Lord was astonished.

19 The Lord came forward to embrace Sanātana, but Sanātana drew back and began to say:

20 “Do not touch me, O Lord, I fall at Your feet! I am low-born and fallen, and besides, my body is covered with oozing sores.”

21 But the Lord embraced him by force, and the moisture of his sores touched Mahāprabhu’s holy body.

22 The Lord introduced Sanātana to all the devotees, and Sanātana bowed down at the feet of each of them.

23 The devotees sat with the Lord on the raised platform, while Haridāsa and Sanātana sat below the platform.

24 Mahāprabhu asked Sanātana how he was. He replied, “All is supremely auspicious, for I have seen Your feet.”

25 He asked after the welfare of all the Vaiṣṇavas of Mathurā, and Sanātana told Him that all were well.

26 The Lord said, “Rūpa was here for ten months. He left here for Gauḍa ten days ago.

27 Your brother Anupama has departed from this world on the bank of the Gaṅgā. He was a good soul; his devotion to Raghunātha (Śrī Rāma) was firm.”[4]

28 Sanātana said, “I was born in a low family; every kind of irreligion and wrongdoing was the custom of my family.

29 Yet, setting aside all aversion, You accepted such a family; by Your mercy, all is auspicious in my family.

30 From his childhood my brother Anupama worshipped Raghunātha with a firm mind.

31 Night and day he chanted the name of Raghunātha and meditated on Him; incessantly he heard the Rāmāyaṇa and sang it.

32 Rūpa and I are his elder brothers, and he always stayed with the two of us.

33 Together with us he would hear talks about Kṛṣṇa and the Bhāgavata. The two of us put him to a test.

34 ‘Listen, Vallabha: Kṛṣṇa is supremely sweet. His beauty, His sweetness and the pastimes of His love are boundless.

35 Worship Kṛṣṇa together with the two of us. We three brothers will live together, rejoicing in talks about Kṛṣṇa.’

36 In this way the two of us spoke to him again and again, and out of respect for us his mind turned somewhat.

37 ‘How can I disobey the order of you two? Give me the initiation mantra, and I shall worship Kṛṣṇa.’

38 Having said this, he reflected through the night: ‘How shall I give up the feet of Raghunātha?’

39 He stayed awake the whole night, weeping, and in the morning he submitted to the two of us:

40 ‘I have sold my head at the lotus feet of Raghunātha. I cannot take my head back; it gives me great pain.

41 Be merciful, both of you, and give me leave to serve the feet of Raghunātha birth after birth.

42 I cannot give up the lotus feet of Raghunātha; at the very thought of giving them up, my heart breaks.'

43 Then the two of us embraced him and praised him, saying, 'Excellent! Your devotion is firm.'

44 The family upon which there is even a trace of Your mercy has every blessing, and all its troubles are cut away."

45 The Lord said, "In the same way I once tested Murāri Gupta; this was his way too.

46 Blessed is the devotee who does not leave the feet of his master, and blessed is the master who does not abandon his own.

47 And if by misfortune a servant goes elsewhere, blessed is the master who seizes him by the hair and brings him back.

48 It is good that you have come here. Stay here in this house with Haridāsa.

49 You are both supremely eminent in the rasa of devotion to Kṛṣṇa. Relish the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa and chant His name."

50 Having said this, Mahāprabhu rose and left, and He sent prasāda to both of them through Govinda.

51 Thus Sanātana stayed near the Lord. Seeing the wheel (the Nīla-cakra) atop Jagannātha's temple, he would bow down.

52 Every day the Lord came and met them both, and for a while He spoke intimately with them about Kṛṣṇa.

53 Every day He received the divine prasāda in the temple of Jagannātha, and every day without fail He brought it and gave it to them both.

54 One day the Lord came and met them both, and suddenly began to speak to Sanātana:

55 "Sanātana, if Kṛṣṇa could be attained by giving up the body, I would give up millions of bodies in a moment.[5]

56 One does not attain Kṛṣṇa by giving up the body; one attains Him by worship. There is no means of attaining Kṛṣṇa except bhakti.

57 Giving up the body and all such acts are of the nature of darkness (tamo-dharma); through the ways of darkness and passion one cannot grasp the essence of Kṛṣṇa.

58 Without bhakti, love for Kṛṣṇa never awakens; and without love, Kṛṣṇa is not attained by any other means.

59 (Śrī Kṛṣṇa said:) "O Uddhava, neither yoga nor sāṅkhya, neither dharma nor study of the Vedas, neither austerity nor renunciation can win Me as intense devotion to Me does." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 11.14.20)[6]

60 Giving up the body and the like are of the nature of darkness and a cause of sin; by them the sādhaka does not attain the feet of Kṛṣṇa.

61 A loving devotee in separation wishes to give up his body; but by that very love he meets Kṛṣṇa, and he cannot die.

62 Separation in deep anurāga cannot be borne; therefore one who is full of anurāga longs for his own death.

63 (Rukmiṇī wrote to Kṛṣṇa:) “O lotus-eyed one, great souls like Umā’s lord (Śiva) long to bathe in the dust of Your lotus feet to dispel their own darkness. If I do not obtain Your grace, I shall give up my life, emaciated by vows, so that, even after a hundred births, it may be mine.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.52.43)[7]

64 (The gopīs said:) “O dear one, with the flood of nectar from Your lips quench the fire of love’s desire that Your smiling glances and sweet song have kindled in our hearts. Otherwise, O friend, our bodies consumed by the fire of separation, we shall reach the place of Your feet by meditation.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.29.35)[8]

65 Give up this wicked intelligence (kubuddhi) and engage in hearing and chanting; then you will soon obtain the treasure of love for Kṛṣṇa.

66 One of low birth is not unfit for the worship of Kṛṣṇa, nor is a brāhmaṇa of good family fit for it by that alone.[9]

67 Whoever worships is great; the non-devotee is low and contemptible. In the worship of Kṛṣṇa there is no consideration of caste, family and the like.

68 Bhagavān shows greater kindness to the lowly; the high-born, the learned and the rich have great pride.

69 “I consider a dog-eater whose mind, words, deeds, wealth and very life are offered to the Lord of the lotus navel better than a brāhmaṇa endowed with the twelve qualities who has turned away from His lotus feet. Such a devotee purifies his whole family; the brāhmaṇa swollen with pride cannot.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 7.9.10)[10]

70 Among the forms of worship the best is the ninefold bhakti: it has great power to bestow love for Kṛṣṇa and Kṛṣṇa Himself.

71 Of these the best of all is nāma-saṅkīrtana. One who chants the name without offence obtains the treasure of love."[11]

72 Hearing this, Sanātana was astonished: "My resolve to give up my body does not please the Lord.

73 The all-knowing Mahāprabhu has forbidden me." Clasping the Lord's feet, he said to Him:

74 "You are all-knowing and merciful — the independent Lord. As You make me dance, so I dance, like a wooden puppet.

75 I am low, fallen and wretched, wretched by nature. What will You gain by keeping me alive?"

76 The Lord said, "Your body is My own property, for you have surrendered yourself to Me.[12]

77 Why do you wish to destroy another's property? Can you not discern right from wrong?

78 Your body is My chief instrument (sādhana); through this body I shall accomplish many purposes:

79 establishing the truths about the devotee, devotion and love for Kṛṣṇa; the duties of a Vaiṣṇava, and Vaiṣṇava conduct;

80 introducing devotion to Kṛṣṇa and service in love for Kṛṣṇa; recovering the lost holy places, and teaching renunciation.[13]

81 My own dear abode is Mathurā-Vṛndāvana; there I wish to propagate all these dharmas.

82 By My mother's order I reside in Nīlācala, and it is not within My own power to teach this dharma there.

83 You wish to give up the very body through which I shall do all these works! How can I bear it?"

84 Then Sanātana said, "I bow down to You. Who can understand Your fathomless heart?

85 A conjurer makes a wooden puppet dance, and the puppet itself does not know how it dances and sings.

86 So it is with anyone You make dance: he dances just as You move him, and does not know how he dances or who makes him dance."

87 The Lord said to Haridāsa, "Listen, Haridāsa: this man wants to destroy another's property.

88 No one uses for himself or gives away property that another has placed in his keeping. Forbid him, so that he does not do this wrong."[14]

89 Haridāsa said, "Our pride is false: we cannot understand Your fathomless heart.

90 Unless You make it known, no one can know which works You accomplish, and through whom.

91 You have accepted him so fully! No one has such good fortune as he."

92 Then Mahāprabhu embraced them both, rose and left to perform His midday duties.

93 Embracing Sanātana, Haridāsa said, “There is no telling the limits of your good fortune.

94 The Lord calls your body ‘My own property’; no one is as fortunate as you.

95 What He cannot do in His own body He will have you do for Him in Mathurā.

96 He through whom the Lord wishes to act attains perfection. This is your good fortune — I tell you for certain.[15]

97 I have understood His intention: through you He will establish the conclusions of bhakti and determine conduct according to scripture.

98 But this body of mine has never served the Lord’s work. I was born in the land of Bhārata — and all in vain!”

99 Sanātana said, “Who else is there like you? Among Mahāprabhu’s associates you are the most fortunate!

100 The Lord descended to spread the name, and He accomplishes this, His own work, through you.

101 Every day you chant three hundred thousand names, and before everyone you tell the glory of the name.

102 Some practise themselves but do not preach; others preach but do not practise.

103 You do both works for the name — practice (ācāra) and preaching (pracāra). You are the guru of all; you are the noblest in the world.”

104 In this way the two lived together, joyfully relishing many talks about Kṛṣṇa.

105 At the time of the festival all the devotees of Gauḍa came, and as before they all saw the Ratha-yātrā.

106 Before the chariot the Lord danced in the same way, and seeing it, Sanātana was filled with wonder.

107 All His devotees stayed for the four months of the rainy season, and the Lord introduced Sanātana to them all.

108–110 He brought Sanātana to meet Advaita, Nityānanda, Śrīvāsa and Vakreśvara; Vāsudeva, Murāri, Rāghava and Dāmodara; (Paramānanda) Purī, (Brahmānanda) Bhāratī, Svarūpa and Gadādhara Paṇḍita; Sārvabhauma, Rāmānanda, Jagadānanda and Śaṅkara; Kāśīśvara, Govinda and all the other devotees.

111 He had him bow down at the feet of each of them as befitted each, and made him a recipient of everyone’s mercy.

112 By his virtues and learning Sanātana became dear to all, and received from each, as befitted each, mercy, friendship or respect.

113 When all the Vaiṣṇavas went back to Gauḍa, Sanātana remained at the feet of Mahāprabhu.

114 He saw the Dola-yātrā and other festivals together with the Lord, and day by day his joy in the Lord’s company increased.

115 Sanātana had come in the month of Vaiśākha (April–May); in the month of Jyaiṣṭha (May–June) the Lord put him to a test.

116 In the month of Jyaiṣṭha the Lord came to Yameśvara-ṭoṭā and, at the request of His devotees, took His meal there.

117 At the time of the midday meal He sent for Sanātana; and since the Lord had called him, Sanātana's joy increased.

118 At midday the sand by the sea had become like fire, yet Sanātana went by that path.

119 Overjoyed that the Lord had called him, he did not notice his feet burning on the hot sand.

120 Blisters rose on both his feet, yet he went on to the Lord. Mahāprabhu, having taken His meal, was resting.

121 Govinda gave him the plate with the remnants of the Lord's meal. Having taken the prasāda, Sanātana came to the Lord.

122 The Lord asked, "By which path did you come, Sanātana?" He replied, "I came by the path along the sea."

123 The Lord said, "How could you come over the burning sand? The path by the Siṁha-dvāra is cool — why did you not come that way?

124 The hot sand has blistered your feet; you cannot walk. How did you bear it?"

125 Sanātana said, "I did not feel much pain. I did not even know that blisters had formed on my feet.

126 I have no right to go by the Siṁha-dvāra, especially since the servants of the Ṭhākura, Lord Jagannātha, move about there.

127 The servants come and go without pause, and if I should touch them, it would be my ruin."

128 Hearing this, Mahāprabhu was glad at heart, and in His satisfaction He began to speak to him:

129–130 "Although you purify the whole world, and even the gods and sages are purified by your touch, it is still a devotee's nature to guard propriety (maryādā). Keeping propriety is the ornament of a sādhu.

131 People mock whoever breaks propriety, and he loses both this world and the next.

132 When you keep propriety, My mind is pleased. If you do not act this way, who will?"

133 Saying this, the Lord embraced him, and the fluid from his sores smeared the Lord's holy body.

134 Again and again Sanātana tried to stop Him, yet the Lord kept embracing him. The fluid clung to the Lord's body, and Sanātana was grieved.

135 In this way servant and Master each went home. The next day Jagadānanda came to see Sanātana.[16]

136 The two sat together and talked of Kṛṣṇa, and Sanātana confided his grief to the Paṇḍita:

137 “I came here to see the Lord and be rid of my grief, but the Lord did not let me do what I had in mind.

138 Though I try to stop Him, the Lord embraces me, and the fluid of my sores smears His body.

139 I am committing an offence, and for me there is no deliverance. I cannot even see Jagannātha — this grief is boundless.

140 I came for my welfare, but the opposite has happened. I cannot decide what I should do for my good.”

141 The Paṇḍita said, “Vṛndāvana is the place for you to live. After seeing the Ratha-yātrā, go there.

142 The Lord has ordered you two brothers to settle in Vṛndāvana; there you will find every happiness.

143 You came to see the Lord’s feet, and you have seen them. Now see Jagannātha on His chariot and go.”

144 Sanātana said, “You have given good advice. I shall go there: that is my ‘land given by the Lord.’”

145 Saying this, the two rose and went about their duties. The next day Mahāprabhu came to meet them.

146 Haridāsa bowed at the Lord’s feet, and the Lord embraced Haridāsa with love.

147 Sanātana offered prostrate obeisances from a distance. Again and again the Lord called him, wanting to embrace him.

148 Fearing to offend, he did not come forward to meet Him, so Mahāprabhu went to that place to meet him.

149 Sanātana drew back and fled, but the Lord caught him by force and embraced him.

150 The Lord sat down with the two of them on the raised platform before the dwelling, and Sanātana, filled with detachment (nirveda), began to speak:[17]

151 “I came for my welfare, but the opposite has happened. I am not fit for service; day after day I commit offences.

152 I am low-born, wicked by nature, a ‘reservoir of sin’; when You touch me, I commit an offence.[18]

153 Moreover, fluid and blood flow from the sores on my body and smear Yours, yet still You touch me by force.

154 You do not feel even a trace of disgust in touching what is loathsome. This offence will be my utter ruin.

155 So if I stay here, no good will come to me. Give me leave: after seeing the chariot festival, let me go to Vṛndāvana.

156 I asked Jagadānanda Paṇḍita for counsel, and he advised me to go to Vṛndāvana.”

157 Hearing this, Mahāprabhu grew angry at heart and in anger rebuked Jagadānanda:

158 “Jagā, a mere boy of yesterday, has become so proud that he has begun to advise even you?

159 In worldly and in spiritual matters alike you are like a guru to him. He advises you — does he not know his own worth?

160 You are My adviser, an authoritative and noble soul (ārya). And this boy advises even you — such is his conduct!”

161 Hearing this, Sanātana clasped the Lord’s feet and said, “Today I have understood Jagadānanda’s good fortune.

162 And today I have come to know my own misfortune. In all the world there is no one as fortunate as Jagadānanda.

163 You give Jagadānanda the nectar of intimacy to drink, but me You make drink the bitter juice of nimba and niśindā — Your respectful praise.

164 Even today You have not come to regard me as Your own. It is my misfortune; You are the independent Lord, Bhagavān!”

165 Hearing this, Mahāprabhu felt somewhat abashed at heart, and to console him He spoke:

166 “Jagadānanda is not dearer to Me than you. But I cannot bear a breach of propriety.

167 Think what you are — an authority, versed in the scriptures! And what is Jagā — a boy of yesterday, a novice!

168 You have the power to convince even Me. On so many occasions you have made Me understand the propriety of devotional conduct (vyavahāra-bhakti).[19]

169 That he should advise you is more than I can bear; that is why I rebuke him.

170 I do not praise you because I regard you as an outsider. Your virtues move Me to praise you, so great are they.

171 Although one may feel many people to be one's own, by the nature of love a particular feeling arises toward each.

172 You regard your body as loathsome, but to Me your body is like nectar.

173 Your body is transcendental (aprākṛta); it is never material. Still, you think of it as material.

174 Even if your body were material, I could not disregard it, for in what is transcendental there is no perception of things as good or bad.

175 "What is good and what is bad, and how much of either, in a duality that has no true being? Whatever is uttered in words or conceived by the mind is passing and untrue." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 11.28.4)[20]

176 In duality the notion of good and bad is all mental speculation (mano-dharma). 'This is good, this is bad' — all this is illusion.

177 "The wise see with an equal eye a brāhmaṇa endowed with learning and humility, a cow, an elephant, a dog and a dog-eater." (Bhagavad-gītā, 5.18)[21]

178 "One whose self is satisfied with knowledge and realisation, who is unchanging (kūṭastha) and has conquered the senses, and to whom a clod of earth, a stone and gold are the same, is called a yogī established in yoga." (Bhagavad-gītā, 6.8)[22]

179 I am a sannyāsī; equal vision is My duty. Sandal paste and mud are the same to Me.

180 For this reason it is not right for Me to reject you. If I were to feel disgust, I would fall from My own duty."

181 Haridāsa said, "Lord, what You have said is an outward pretext, and I do not accept it.

182 In accepting all of us fallen souls, You have made known Your compassion for the lowly."

183 The Lord smiled and said, "Listen, Haridāsa and Sanātana. I shall tell you truly what My heart feels for you.

184 I think of you as those I cherish (lālya), and of Myself as the one who cherishes you (lālaka). The one who cherishes does not perceive faults in those he cherishes.[23]

185 I do not think of Myself as one whom you should honour, for I regard you all as My children.

186 When a child's filth gets on its mother's body, no disgust arises in her; rather, she feels great happiness.

187 To the one who cherishes, the filth of the cherished seems like sandal paste. So I feel no disgust at Sanātana's discharge."

188 Haridāsa said, "You are the Lord, full of mercy. No one can understand Your deep heart.

189 Vāsudeva was a leper with oozing sores, his body full of worms, yet out of compassion You embraced him.

190 By embracing him You made his body as beautiful as Kandarpa's. We cannot understand the waves of Your mercy."

191 The Lord said, "A Vaiṣṇava's body is never material. A devotee's body is transcendental (aprākṛta), full of spirit and bliss (cid-ānanda-maya).

192 At the time of initiation (dīkṣā) the devotee surrenders himself, and at that very time Kṛṣṇa makes him His own, like Himself (ātma-sama).

193 Kṛṣṇa makes that body of his full of spirit and bliss, and in that transcendental body the devotee worships His feet.

194 "When a mortal gives up all works and offers himself to Me, I wish to exalt him. Then he attains immortality and becomes fit to share with Me a nature like My own." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 11.29.34)[24]

195 Kṛṣṇa produced sores on Sanātana's body and sent him here to test Me.

196 Had I felt disgust and not embraced him, I would have become an offender to Kṛṣṇa.

197 This is the body of an associate (pārṣada); it has no foul smell. On the very first day I perceived the fragrance of catuḥsama."[25]

198 In truth, when the Lord embraced him, His touch gave him the fragrance of sandalwood.

199 The Lord said, "Sanātana, do not be sorry. I feel great happiness in embracing you.

200 This year stay here with Me. When the year is over, I shall send you to Vṛndāvana."

201 Saying this, He embraced him again. The sores vanished, and his body became like gold.

202 Seeing this, Haridāsa was amazed at heart and said to the Lord, “This is Your play.

203 It was You who made him drink that water of Jhārikhaṇḍa, and with that water as a pretext You produced his sores.[26]

204 By producing the sores You tested Sanātana. No one understands these subtle turns of Your pastimes.”

205 The Lord embraced them both and went to His own dwelling, and the two, filled with love, spoke of the Lord’s qualities.

206 Thus Sanātana stayed near the Lord, talking with Haridāsa about the qualities of Kṛṣṇa Caitanya.

207 After seeing the Dola-yātrā, the Lord gave him leave to go, and He taught him all that he was to do in Vṛndāvana.

208 When he took leave at the Lord’s feet, the state of the two in separation was beyond description.

209 Sanātana resolved to go by the same forest path by which the Lord had gone to Vṛndāvana.

210 From Balabhadra Bhaṭṭa he wrote down everything: by which path, past which villages, rivers and hills the Lord went, and which pastime took place where.

211 Travelling by that same path, he met all of Mahāprabhu’s devotees and saw those places.[27]

212 Seeing each place on the way where the Lord had shown His pastimes, Sanātana was overwhelmed with love.

213 In this way Sanātana came to Vṛndāvana. Later Rūpa Gosāñi came and joined him.

214 Rūpa Gosāñi was delayed in Gauḍa for a year: he divided his wealth and gave it to his relatives for their maintenance.

215 He had the wealth he held in Gauḍa brought to him and distributed it among his relatives, the brāhmaṇas and the temples.

216 When he had accomplished all he had in mind, the Gosāñi, free from care, quickly came to Vṛndāvana.

217 The two brothers met and lived together in Vṛndāvana, and they carried out all the Lord's orders.

218 Gathering many scriptures, they recovered the lost holy places and manifested the service of Kṛṣṇa in Vṛndāvana.[28]

219 Sanātana wrote the Bhāgavatāmṛta, from which we know the truth of the devotee, devotion and Kṛṣṇa.

220 He wrote the Daśama-ṭippanī, the essence of conclusions, from which we know the rasa of Kṛṣṇa's pastimes and love for Him.[29]

221 He wrote the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa on Vaiṣṇava conduct, in which we find the duties of a Vaiṣṇava in full.

222 Who can count the other books he wrote? And he manifested the service of Madana-gopāla and Govinda.[30]

223 Rūpa Gosāñi wrote the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, the essence of all, in which we find the full exposition of the rasa of devotion to Kṛṣṇa.

224 He also wrote the book named Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi, where we find the rasa of the pastimes of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa to its utmost.

225 In the two dramas Vidagdha-mādhava and Lalita-mādhava we find all the rasa of Kṛṣṇa's pastimes.

226 He wrote the Dāna-keli-kaumudī and other works — a hundred thousand granthas in all — and in all those books he examined the rasa of Vraja.[31]

227 His younger brother was Śrī Vallabha, called Anupama, whose son was the great scholar named Śrī Jīva.

228 Giving up everything, he later came to Vṛndāvana and propagated many scriptures of bhakti.

229 He wrote the Bhāgavata-sandarbha, the essence of all books, where we find the conclusions of the Bhāgavatam in all their depth.[32]

230 He also wrote the Gopāla-campū and many other books, in which he revealed the essence of the rasa of Vraja's love-pastimes.

231 In the Ṣaṭ-sandarbha he revealed the truth of love for Kṛṣṇa. He composed four hundred thousand granthas in all.

232 When Jīva Gosāñi was setting out from Gauḍa for Mathurā, he begged leave of Nityānanda Prabhu.

233 With love Nityānanda Prabhu placed His feet on Jīva's head, and because he was related to Rūpa and Sanātana, He embraced him.

234 He ordered him, “Go quickly to Vṛndāvana. The Lord has given that place to your family.”

235 By His order he came, and he obtained the fruit of obeying it: composing scriptures, he preached bhakti for a long time.

236 These three gurus and Raghunātha dāsa — I worship the feet of them all, for I am their servant.[33]

237 Thus I have told of the meeting with Sanātana once again; by hearing of it we come to know the Lord’s intention.

238 These deeds of Caitanya are like sugarcane: chew it, and you taste its juice.

239 Praying at the feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate the Caitanya-caritāmṛta.[34]

Notes

1. Edition heading: “Gaurasundara saves Sanātana from his resolve to give up the body.” Śuddhaṁ cakre parīkṣayā — “by a test He made him pure”; the healing of his body (201) is its visible sign. ↩
2. The same verse as Ādi 4.2 (= Ādi 1.18, 17.2, Antya 2.2); translation as there. ↩
3. Anubhāṣya: nirveda — detachment (virakti), not worldly despair; asāra — unfit for the service of Kṛṣṇa. ↩
4. Gaṅgā-prāpti, “attaining the Gaṅgā”: departing from the world on the bank of the Gaṅgā (Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, summary of the chapter). ↩
5. Deha-tyāga — “giving up the body”. Edition heading to 55: addressing Sanātana, the Lord teaches the sādhaka who is not yet free of anarthas and is led by his own mind: false (phalgu) knowledge and false renunciation are no means of attaining Kṛṣṇa. ↩
6. The same verse as Ādi 17.76 (= Madhya 20.137); translation as there. The Anubhāṣya refers to Ādi 17.76. ↩

7. Edition heading: “Rukmiṇī reveals her anurāga to Vāsudeva.” Anubhāṣya: vrata-kṛśān — emaciated by vows, by fasts and the like. ↩
8. Anubhāṣya: hṛc-chaya — the desire of love born in the heart of the gopīs and dwelling there; kala-gīta — the sweet song, the sweet sound of the flute. ↩
9. Edition heading to 66: refutation of the doctrine of nobility by seed, born of union with a woman; who is fit for the service of Kṛṣṇa; only the pure devotee is the guru, the greatest of men. ↩
10. The same verse as Madhya 20.59; translation as there. The Anubhāṣya refers to Madhya 20.59. ↩
11. Anubhāṣya: nirāparādhe — free of the ten offences against the name, serving the name constantly and untiringly. ↩
12. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: you have given Me your body, and you have no right to give it up. ↩
13. Anubhāṣya (on 79–81): through Sanātana the Lord established the service of the Deity in maṭhas and temples and the inner service in the mood of Vraja, and by his recovering the lost holy places and by his life He taught the renunciation befitting a devotee (yukta-vairāgya). ↩
14. Anubhāṣya: sthāpya — what is given in trust; anyāya — the destruction of his body, given to Kṛṣṇa. ↩
15. Edition heading: “Success, or perfection, is the servant who follows Kṛṣṇa’s will”; sei siddha haya — “he (the servant) attains perfection.” ↩
16. Anubhāṣya: sevaka-prabhu — the servant and the Master, Śrī Sanātana and Śrīman Mahāprabhu. ↩
17. Piṇḍā — a raised earthen platform beside a dwelling. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: nirviṇṇa — filled with nirveda, that is, detachment (virāga). ↩
18. Nīca-jāti — “of low birth” (cf. 6, 28, 66–67). ↩
19. Anubhāṣya: vyavahāra-bhakti — the showing of propriety (maryādā), the conduct of the cultured (śiṣṭācāra); for such occasions see Madhya 1.222–224 or 16.266. ↩
20. Anubhāṣya: whatever is spoken in words, seen by the senses or conceived by the mind is transitory, not true for all time; whatever is other than the non-dual Truth has no separate being. Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya: duality is a perception not of Kṛṣṇa, the non-dual Truth, but of something else, born of māyā; in the perception of the non-dual Truth there is no ‘good’ and ‘bad’. ↩
21. Anubhāṣya: paṇḍitāḥ — those who know what bondage is and what liberation; sama-darśinaḥ — those whose nature is to see one and the same Brahman in all. ↩

22. Anubhāṣya: jñāna — knowledge received through instruction, vijñāna — direct realisation; yuktaḥ — established in yoga (yoga-ārūḍha). ↩
23. Anubhāṣya: out of affection the one who cherishes does not notice the faults of the one he cherishes, even if they are there. ↩
24. The same verse as Madhya 22.100; translation as there. The reference follows the edition heading; the Anubhāṣya refers to Madhya 22.101 in the edition's numbering (22.100 in ours). ↩
25. Anubhāṣya: catuḥsama is a perfume of two parts musk, four of sandal, three of kuṅkuma (saffron) and one of camphor (Garuḍa Purāṇa; see Hari-bhakti-vilāsa, 6.115). Anubhāṣya: only to a sense of smell led by a mind turned toward worldly enjoyment could the body of Sanātana, an associate wholly given to Kṛṣṇa's service, seem foul. ↩
26. Anubhāṣya: pānī-lakṣye — making the drinking water of Jhārikhaṇḍa the pretext. Edition heading to 202: Sanātana's body, wholly guided by the Lord's will, only displayed to the eye of the senses the suffering of oozing sores. ↩
27. Edition heading: having met the devotees on the way, Sanātana continues his journey. ↩
28. Anubhāṣya: the proofs from these scriptures are given in the Bhakti-ratnākara. ↩
29. Anubhāṣya: the Daśama-ṭippanī is the commentary Bṛhad-vaiṣṇava-toṣaṇī. ↩
30. Anubhāṣya (on 218): in Vṛndāvana Śrī Sanātana manifested the service of Śrī Madana-mohana, and Śrī Rūpa that of Śrī Govinda. ↩
31. Anubhāṣya: Śrī Rūpa's books contain about a hundred thousand ślokas, for copyists count both verse and prose in granthas; it does not mean a hundred thousand books: by the Bhakti-ratnākara, Śrī Rūpa wrote sixteen books. ↩
32. Anubhāṣya: its other name is the Ṣaṭ-sandarbha (see Madhya 1.43). ↩
33. Anubhāṣya: the author's three instructing gurus are Śrī Rūpa, Sanātana and Śrī Jīva Gosvāmī. ↩
34. The same colophon verse as Antya 2.172; translation as there. ↩
