Translator's Preface

Sri Chaitanya-mangala is a Bengali poem on the life and pastimes of Sri Chaitanya Mahaprabhu. Its author, Lochana Dasa Thakura, was a disciple of Narahari Sarakara Thakura of Shrikhanda, an associate of the Lord; in the poem he repeatedly calls himself a follower of Narahari. According to Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati (see his preface below), Lochana Dasa came of a vaidya family of the Rarh country and was born in the village of Kogram near Katwa (Burdwan district). The poem was probably written about the middle of the sixteenth century (it is usually placed in the 1550s–1560s); no exact date is known.

The basis of the poem, as the author himself says (Sutra-khanda, vv. 53–56), is Murari Gupta's Sanskrit poem on the Lord, composed as a dialogue between Murari and Damodara Pandita (the so-called Kadacha of Murari Gupta; Bhaktisiddhanta calls it Sri Chaitanya-charita). Lochana Dasa retells it "as a sung narrative", a panchali: the poem is divided into songs, each with its raga and many with a disha (refrain); the main metre is the payar (couplet), and tripadi also occurs in the songs. Many places are enlarged with traditions not found in Murari. The poem has four parts (khandas): the Sutra-khanda (introduction and the "prehistory" of the Lord's descent), the Adi-khanda (from His birth to the journey to Gaya), the Madhya-khanda (from the return from Gaya to His coming to Puri and the meeting with Sarvabhauma) and the Shesha-khanda (the southern tour, Vrindavana, the return to Nilachala, the last pastimes).

The base text. The translation follows the edition of Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati (Sri Chaitanya Math, Mayapur, 1922)¹. His text and his numbering of the couplets are the basis of our translation. The prose summaries which Bhaktisiddhanta placed at the head of chapters and sections are translated and given at the head of the corresponding sections ("Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati"). The scan of this edition available to us is badly damaged in places; gaps and obscure places have been restored from two other editions: that of Haridasa Shastri (Vrindavana, 1983; the Bengali text is printed there in Devanagari script) and that of Atulakrishna Gosvami (Calcutta, 1903). Where the editions differ in sense, we follow Bhaktisiddhanta and note significant differences in the footnotes.

Text not found in Bhaktisiddhanta's edition. The 1983 edition contains a good deal that is absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition: whole chapters, passages and single couplets. All of this has been translated and put in its place in the text (following the 1983 edition), numbered "80+1", "80+2" and so on (that is, after v. 80 of Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); at the start of each such insertion a footnote says that it is absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition and whether the 1903 edition has it. Translated in this way are, for example, the section on Shachi's grief over the brahmana's curse (Madhya-khanda, portion 33), the section "Consoling the devotees" (portion 38), many stanzas about the women of Nadia (portions 18–22) and others. Where the 1983 edition does not add text but gives a different redaction of the same passage, the main text follows Bhaktisiddhanta and the other redaction is given in translation in a footnote. Bhaktisiddhanta's edition ends with the story of the poor brahmana from Dravida and Vibhishana; the last chapter, on the Lord's disappearance (ch. 4 of the Shesha-khanda in the 1983 edition), and Lochana Dasa's closing words about himself exist only in the editions of 1983 and 1903; they are translated as an insertion of the same kind, with their own footnote (portion 52)².

Faithfulness to the author. We translate Lochana Dasa's words as they stand, without correcting them to later theology and without softening them. Our authority in interpretation is Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. Where Lochana Dasa departs from the Gaudiya siddhanta as he taught it — for example, in the lines about the women of Nadia drawn to Gaura as to a nagara (nagari-bhava), in some identifications of the Lord's associates, in details of the narrative that differ from the Chaitanya-charitamrita, in the account of the Lord's disappearance by entering Jagannatha — we give an exact translation and explain the difference in a footnote. Bhaktisiddhanta himself, in his preface, declines to ascribe the "Gaura-nagari" doctrine to the poem and warns against songs circulating under Lochana Dasa's name into which that doctrine was later introduced.

Arrangement of the translation. The couplets are numbered as in Bhaktisiddhanta's edition; at the start of some chapters and sections the edition's numbering begins anew, and so does ours. Where the edition repeats numbers by mistake, we keep the printed numbers and distinguish the repeats by a letter (371a; 393a–401b in portion 13, see footnote 1 there). Lines naming the raga and the refrain (disha) are given in italics without a number; words added for clarity are in square brackets. A tripadi stanza is given under one number. The translation is divided into 52 portions: Sutra-khanda 01–08, Adi-khanda 09–23, Madhya-khanda 24–45, Shesha-khanda 46–52. The full edition contains, besides the translation, the Bengali original (in Bengali script, in the medieval spelling of the edition), its Latin transliteration and a word-for-word translation. Modern English translations were consulted only for doubtful places.

There follow Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati's preface to his edition and his synopsis of the contents by parts and chapters (Khanda-vivarana).

Preface by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati

*Preface (bhumika) to Sri Chaitanya-mangala*³

The reader's qualification. In taking up any book one must first of all make the mind [pure and calm], not allow former impressions to prevail, and set about reading without prejudice, in a mood favourable to grasping its meaning. Every author wishes his labour to serve to free the reader from ignorance. On the other hand, the reader too, having considered his own qualification (adhikara), should think: "[I wish to read this book] in order to receive light on what I do not know." The pride nursed by lovers of argument, who, regarding themselves as examiners, set out to test the author, is merely the attitude of a trader. If one seeks in reading a calculation of profit, the place [of the truth] is taken by hopes of gain, honour and fame. Worldly people, thus driven by their desires, take the subject the book speaks of for merchandise — and are deprived of [the benefit borne by] the words of the devotee author.

The meaning of the book's title. By the pastimes of Sri Chaitanyadeva the bonds will fall from the living beings bewildered by maya and blessing (mangala) will come — therefore the narrative of Sri Chaitanya is called Sri Chaitanya-mangala. Sri Chaitanyadeva Himself is full of the highest blessing; therefore the narrative of Sri Chaitanya may well be called Chaitanya-mangala. Srila Vrindavana Dasa Thakura too wrote a book under this name; Srila Krishnadasa Kaviraja Gosvami Prabhu mentions it in his *Sri Chaitanya-charitamrita*⁴. That very book became famous under the name Sri Chaitanya-bhagavata.

Certain literati of Buddhist leanings and scholars attached to them have recently composed, in the guise of a literary monument, a fictitious book, and are trying to prove that it is old. [Certain] Shaiva literati and literati of [other] communities [hostile to bhakti], showing aversion to pure bhakti, have conceived the idea of uprooting pure bhakti by spreading [this book]. [The book] which mundane literati hostile to bhakti pass off as approved by devotees — displaying only contemptible efforts — we do not honour. Because of their Buddhist convictions and godlessness they have no access to the highest goal (paramartha); and the fruit of their illegitimate efforts, rooted in the desire to pass off the worthless (anartha) as the highest goal, is that the fictitious Chaitanya-mangala composed by Jayananda has been called into being⁵. Pure devotees never read such a book and do not, [by accepting it,] bring defilement on themselves. In the Bhakti-ratnakara and other books of Sri Narahari Chakravarti there is not a single mention of the Chaitanya-mangala of Jayananda and similar books; therefore, [regarding] this book contrary to the truth as the work of a deviant community (apasampradaya), we have given it the name *A-chaitanya-mangala*⁶. The admirers of such books may, together with the haters of bhakti, agree to support it, but we pay them our respects from afar.

In studying the life of Sri Chaitanya, let the indisputable books for us be the works of the reliable biographers of Sri Chaitanya — Srila Kavi-karnapura Gosvami, Srila Murari Gupta Vaidya, Srila Krishnadasa Kaviraja Gosvami and Srila Vrindavana Dasa Thakura. In the Chaitanya-charita-mahakavya, in the Gaura-krishnodaya of the Utkala poet Sri Govinda-deva, in Sri Chaitanya-mangala and [similar] books there is no glaring trace of doctrines opposed to bhakti, and therefore those who walk the path of bhakti accept them as evidence without hesitation⁷. But the Baul-chandrika, the [Bhakta]mala of Laladasa⁸, the Chaitanya-mangala of Jayananda and some other books, although they are now the chief object of study among literati, are untouchable for us [...]: walking the path of bhakti, we dare not accept them. Those who have realized even a little of the nature of bhakti do not leave the path of bhakti, and so in their writings there is no place for the doctrine of the Charvakas, Buddhist beliefs or the dominance of materialism.

Seeing the grace of language of Srila Lochana Dasa Thakura's Sri Chaitanya-mangala and his heartfelt love for Sri Gaura, some indeed say that he is inclined to stray somewhat from the truth of pure bhakti. We are not prepared to say so, for "the actions and gestures of a Vaishnava are not understood even by the wise"⁹. May the abominable desire to impute the stench of the Gaura-nagari doctrine to Sri Chaitanya-mangala never take hold of our hearts¹⁰.

Our one hope with regard to the readers is that, praying to Sri Chaitanya for mercy, we shall be freed from various considerations full of anarthas and attain blessing. We also hope that the readers will kindly not make common cause with the ten or thirteen deviant communities (apasampradayas) who come forward claiming to be called Gaudiyas and offend the feet of the true Gaudiyas¹¹.

The source of Sri Chaitanya-mangala is the Sri Chaitanya-charita of Sri Murari Gupta. The author writes in the Sutra-khanda:

*"All that the Lord did from His birth in childhood, how from beginning to end He spread prema — about all this Damodara Pandita questioned him, and he told him everything from beginning to end in order.
Thus came about the book of Gauranga's deeds, composed in verse — the dialogue with Damodara that came from Murari's lips.
Hearing it, I was filled with love, and I tell of Gaura's deeds in a sung narrative, a panchali."*¹²

The author of this book is a disciple of Srila Narahari Dasa, an associate of Sri Gaura; he was born in a vaidya family of the Rarh country, at Kogram in the Katwa subdivision of Burdwan district. In many places of the book Thakura Lochana Dasa calls himself a follower of Srila Narahari Sarakara Thakura Mahashaya.

Sri Chaitanya-mangala is a book of the panchali kind, that is, a work composed in song-metres of five kinds¹³. Its language shows an abundance of feeling and extraordinary grace. The collections of popular songs that have lately come into circulation under the name "Lochana's panchali" must be approached with special caution: into many of them the stench of the newfangled Gaura-nagari doctrine has been introduced.

Many hesitate to accept the historical statements of Sri Chaitanya-mangala: part [of them] has been gathered on the basis of dreams¹⁴, and full regard for the truth of pure bhakti is not seen everywhere. Tradition says that Srila Lochana Dasa Thakura's book was written somewhat before the Sri Chaitanya-bhagavata of Thakura Srila Vrindavana Dasa; when Srila Vrindavana's mother said that [that] book had been written earlier, it became necessary to rename the book of Sri Vrindavana Dasa Thakura¹⁵. No one can doubt the reliability of the geographical indications of Sri Chaitanya-mangala. The composition of Sri Chaitanya-mangala was begun on the basis of the childhood pastimes of Sri Gaurasundara recorded by Sri Murari Gupta Vaidya in the Sri Chaitanya-charita: Lochana Dasa took them as his source-evidence. The clear description in this book of Sri Chaitanyadeva's ideal of renunciation will give joy to the reader, and above all Srila Lochana Thakura's love for Sri Gaura will draw the love of Gaura's devotees — of this there is no doubt. The old panchali poetry of Gunaraja Khan was composed long before this book¹⁶. The songs of Sri Chaitanya-mangala are sung to this day in various places of Rarh, as jhumur or the songs of the Ramayana are sung. The poetry of Sri Chaitanya-charitamrita, founded on Srila Kaviraja Gosvami's description of prema-bhakti, the charming verse of Sri Lochana Dasa Thakura, and the supremely magnanimous grace of language of Sri Vrindavana Dasa Thakura, rooted in pure bhakti, have always increased the bliss of the devotees of Sri Gaura.

Synopsis of the Khandas (Khanda-vivarana)

A brief account of the contents by parts and chapters, placed by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati at the beginning of his edition¹⁷. The portions of our translation are given in brackets.

Sutra-khanda

Mangalacharana (portion 01). Having sung the glory of Sri Krishna Chaitanya, [the author] prays for the mercy first of the Vaishnavas and then of his own gurudeva, Sriman Narahari Thakura; bows at the feet of the countless associates of Gaura-lila, known and unknown; praying for the blessing of guru and Vaishnavas, declares that the model of his book, a panchali-prabandha, is the Sanskrit mahakavya of Sri Murari Gupta called Sri Chaitanya-charita; and briefly describes what will be written in the Adi-, Madhya- and Shesha-khanda.

Grantharambha (the beginning of the narrative) (portions 02–08). At the beginning of the narrative the author, drawing on the dialogue of Narada and Uddhava from the Jaimini-bharata as related in the conversation of Damodara and Murari, describes why Sri Krishna descended in the form of Sri Gaura. To relieve the distress of living beings stricken by Kali, Devarshi Narada goes to Dvaraka; there, during a conversation of Rukmini and Krishna, the talk turns to Krishna's accepting the bhava of Radha; hearing this, Rukmini suffers at the prospect of separation; as Radha's greatness is being glorified, Sri Krishna, at the Devarshi's prayer, tells him that He will appear as Gaura in Navadvipa, in the house of Shachi and Jagannatha, and shows him His Gaura form. Having seen the Gaura form, the best of sages, singing of Gaura-lila, goes to Naimisharanya and there, in answer to Uddhava's question, glorifies the Kali-yuga, the essence of all yugas, and the dharma of the age, the sankirtana of Hari's name. Then [Narada] goes to Shambhu, best of Vaishnavas, on Kailasa and [reminds] Parvati of her former [vow] to distribute mahaprasada to all living beings without distinction; for this purpose he tells his own story: how he obtained the [Lord's] mahaprasada through Lakshmi-devi, how he gave that prasada to Shiva, how Parvati [was deprived of it] and made her vow, and how as a result the Lord's coming [was promised] — and he sings of Gaura's future appearance in the Kali-yuga. Then [Narada] goes to Brahma and tells of Gaura's appearance, and Brahma brings forward verses of the Srimad-Bhagavata and other [scriptures] that bear witness to this lila. Wandering about, Narada sees the misery of the living beings of Kali and becomes thoughtful; to the pensive sage a voice from heaven announces [the appearance] of the avatara, Jagannatha in Nilachala; the Devarshi goes to Purushottama and from there, at the command of the Lord of the gods, sets out for Goloka: first to Vaikuntha, then higher, to Goloka; there he beholds various lilas, faints at the sight of the Gaura form, and hears the news that [the Lord] will come to earth with all the gods. Coming to Shvetadvipa, he sees the wonderful lila of Sri Balarama, [the Lord in the form of] service; then comes the proposal to the gods to take birth in the world of mortals. [Having described how] Krishna, accepting the bhava and lustre of Srimati Radhika, together with His eternal associates [who will come] with their distinctive natures — Rukmini, Satyabhama and others — and taking up the weapon of the sankirtana of the name, descends as Gaura; Balarama as Nityananda; Shiva as Advaita Prabhu¹⁸; and the other associates as Murari, Mukunda, Srinivasa, Raya Ramananda, Ishvara Puri and Madhava Puri, [the author] glorifies his own guru, Thakura Narahari, and his nephew Raghunandana.

Adi-khanda

Chapter 1. Janma-lila (The Birth) (portion 09). The appearance of Sri Gaurahari on earth with His associates; the coming of the Parabrahman Narayana, [beyond] the gross and the subtle, into the ocean of Shachi's womb; as the burden grows, the lustre of Shachi-devi's body grows; seeing the wonderful lustre, [people] conclude that some great personality has appeared in Shachi's womb; in the sixth month Advaita Prabhu bows to Shachi's womb and circumambulates it; Brahma, Shiva and other gods come to Shachi's womb and glorify the lila of the Lord, the Giver of prema, who bestows prema never given before; Shachi-devi, seeing this, forgets herself; on the full moon of Phalguna, during the eclipse, amid the sankirtana of Hari's name, Bhagavan Gaurahari descends to earth; the ten directions are filled with bliss; goddesses together with the women [of Nadia] come to Shachi's house to see the moon-like face of Shachi's son; Goloka appears in the house; Jagannatha Mishra and the men and women of Nadia are amazed to see, on the lotus feet of the infant with a lion's neck, an elephant's shoulders and a broad chest, the marks of the flag, thunderbolt and goad and various superhuman marks, and understand that the infant is beyond mortals; the distribution of eight kinds of pulses on the eighth day, the festival on the ninth day; the wholehearted love of the neighbours, men and women, for Shachi's son.

Chapter 2. Balya-lila (Childhood Pastimes) (portions 09–13). After six months, Gaurahari's first feeding with rice and name-giving; since at His appearance the whole world was filled with bliss, the wise give Him the name Vishvambhara; He walks about the courtyard holding His father's finger; Gaurasundara in armlets, bracelets and various ornaments: the moon in the sky can dispel only outer darkness, but the moon Gaura dispels the inner darkness of living beings as well; lulling her son to sleep, Shachi-devi sees various gods and goddesses glorifying her son; Gaurahari dances wildly with the gods and goddesses, crying "Radha-Govinda"; the sound of ankle-bells is heard on His bare feet; Gaurasundara takes to childish games with His playmates outside the house; when Shachi-devi tries to catch Him, He runs away, and sometimes in anger spoils everything in the house; having explained to His mother the worthlessness of mundane notions of pure and impure and the like, Gaurasundara instructs her in the transcendental knowledge that Krishna is the Lord of all; sitting in a pit full of pots with leftovers, He instructs His mother; He strikes His mother — at the blow she faints, and He brings a coconut; various childish pranks; play with a puppy; anger at His mother for letting the puppy go, and weeping; the puppy, in a divine body, singing of Hari, goes to Vaikuntha; seeing this, Brahma and others glorify Gaura; Gaurahari weeps when Shachi-devi is preparing the offering for the worship of Shashthi, and under cover of words reveals that He is the Lord of all.

Chapter 3. Pauganda-lila (Boyhood) (portions 14–17). Gaurasundara, having heard Murari Gupta expound the scripture of yoga, mocks him — Murari's anger; in return, to show the worthlessness of yoga and what the yogi comes to, [the Lord] urinates in Murari's plate during his midday meal and instructs him in the superiority of devotion to Krishna; the enactment of sankirtana with the boys of His age; in the conversation of Murari and Damodara — the sannyasa of Vishvarupa, the grief of Shachi and Jagannatha, and the pauganda-lila of Gaurasundara; the chudakarana and other rites for Gaurahari; at an auspicious hour, the beginning of writing; seeing that He is always absorbed in childish play and indifferent to study, Mishra Purandara punishes Him with reproaches and the like; at night in a dream Vishvambhara, revealing His divinity, admonishes the Mishra; the Mishra recognizes his son as Bhagavan, but on waking is again absorbed in parental love; Gaurahari's upanayana; the account of the avatars of the four yugas; in the Kali-yuga Krishna, accepting the bhava and lustre of Radha, descends in secret as Gaurasundara to preach the dharma of the age, the sankirtana of Hari's name, and, intoxicated with prema, gives prema away, offering it at the door of every living being; the instruction to His mother not to eat grain on the day of Ekadashi; when Mishra Jagannatha falls ill — instruction on the impermanence of human life and consolation of His mother; Shachi's grief after the Mishra's passing; Gaurahari's grief for His father and His zealous beginning of study.

Chapter 4. Kaishora-lila (Youth) and the Wedding (portions 18–19). Vanamali Acharya comes to Shachi-devi to propose a match for Gaurasundara; receiving no satisfactory answer from Shachi-devi, he returns with a heavy heart and on the way meets Gaura going home from His studies; by a hint [Gaura] gives His mother His consent to marry; at Shachi's call Vanamali Acharya comes and, going to the house of Vallabhacharya, arranges the marriage of Gaurahari with his daughter Lakshmi-devi; the announcement of the wedding and the invitation [of relatives]; on the day of adhivasa, according to family custom, anointing with turmeric and other [folk and Vedic] rites; Vallabha gives his daughter to Gaurahari, who arrives in great pomp with many companions, and after the feeding of brahmanas and the rest sends his daughter to his son-in-law's house.

Chapter 5. Kaishora-lila and Banga-vijaya (portions 20–21). Mahaprabhu goes with His friends to the bank of the Ganga; at the coming of her beloved Lord the Ganga rises [to] touch His feet; the story of a brahmana devoted to the Ganga; a Puranic legend: the Ganga arises from the feet of Sri Hari as He listened to the Devarshi singing of His qualities; Gaurahari, on the pretext of earning money, goes to East Bengal, shows mercy to the Padmavati and to the people of East Bengal and returns to Navadvipa; meanwhile Lakshmi-devi, bitten by the serpent of separation from the Lord, disappears from this world; when Shachi-devi, seeing the Lord, voices her grief, Gaurahari consoles His mother and tells the story of Lakshmi-devi.

Chapter 6. The Second Wedding (portions 21–22). Shachi-devi undertakes Vishvambhara's second marriage; through Kashinatha Mishra a match is arranged with the daughter of Sanatana Pandita; the customs and rites of the wedding; a splendid wedding, and the Mishra sends his daughter to his son-in-law's house.

Chapter 7. The Journey to Gaya (portion 23). Having completed the lila of study — the lila of teaching; on the pretext of offering pinda for His father — departure for Gaya; various pastimes on the way; under the pretext of fever — drinking water that has washed a brahmana's feet; [the teaching that] a man who does not worship Krishna is unfit to be a brahmana; the arrival in Gaya and darshana of the Vishnupada; the meeting with Ishvara Puri, the best of devotees, and the lila of receiving the mantra; having received the mantra, [the Lord] is intoxicated with prema for Krishna; at the sight of the Vishnupada — the rapture of prema and so on; then the return home.

Madhya-khanda

Chapter 1 (portions 24–25). The good fortune of [Mahaprabhu's] students [in His lila of teaching] is praised; [the Lord's] mercy to mother Shachi; the lila of the great manifestation of prema in the house of Shuklambara Brahmachari; the Lord's eight sattvika-bhavas during kirtana of Krishna; the Gaura-avatara of Sri Krishna, who accepted the bhava of a devotee, is the crown of all avatars; when the Lord performs the lila of preaching prema, the devotees headed by Gadadhara and devotees come from many regions and foreign lands gather together; by the Lord's mercy all go mad with prema; the Lord, maddened at the sound of Krishna's flute, hears a voice from heaven; in Murari's house [the Lord] shows the form of Varaha; Murari's hymn; Murari is told to worship the son of Nanda; at Murari's prayer the Lord shows the form of Sri Rama and glorifies the greatness of Krishna's name; the gods obtain prema; the Lord's mercy to Shuklambara, who sings the kirtana "O Radha, O Govinda"; the Lord gives Gadadhara the garland from His body; description of the beauty of Gaura and Gadadhara, [the inseparable] pair.

Chapter 2 (portions 25–26). The author describes the beauty and charm of Mahaprabhu; the Lord plants a mango stone and distributes ripe fruit to the devotees; when [the tree] vanishes, [the Lord] shows the illusoriness of samsara and speaks of the way to conquer maya; to Mukunda Datta — instruction on the superiority of worshipping Sri Krishna and on serving Bhagavan, giving up speculation on the Self (adhyatma); blessing of Murari; the Lord delights in kirtana in Srivasa's house; when a foolish brahmana calls the form of Sri Krishna a product of maya, the Lord bathes in the Ganga in His clothes.

Chapter 3 (portions 26–27). With kirtana the Lord goes to Advaita's house; the pre-eminence of bhakti alone in the age of Kali is glorified; a certain brahmana is bewildered; the Lord delights in kirtana in Advaita's house; returning home, the Lord expounds [the doctrine of] the Self by an example and glorifies the greatness of supreme bhakti; in Srivasa's house the Lord honours the club so as to destroy obstacles¹⁹; Advaita Prabhu comes, [learning] of [the Lord's manifestation]; the greatness of Advaita is glorified; the Lord sits on the couch, and Advaita dances²⁰; the truth about Advaita is expounded, with instruction to serve Bhagavan.

Chapter 4 (portion 28). Mahaprabhu explains [the meaning of the name] Srivasa; Murari [recites the Raghuvira-ashtaka], the Lord writes "Ramadasa" on his forehead and shows him the form of Rama; Sri Rama Pandita is told to serve his brother; devotees are sent to look for Nityananda Prabhu; the meeting with Nityananda in the house of Nandana Acharya; before everyone, the greatness of Nityananda is glorified and the way to attain prema for Krishna is described; Nityananda Prabhu is shown the six-armed, four-armed and two-armed forms.

Chapter 5 (portion 29). The Lord weeps at night in the third watch and tells Shachi-devi His dream; Nityananda Prabhu stays two days with Advaita²¹; Murari describes Nityananda Prabhu's manifestations of prema; Advaita worships Mahaprabhu in Srivasa's house; the meeting with Haridasa; Nityananda Prabhu takes leave of Mahaprabhu; the Lord distributes Nityananda Prabhu's kaupina, and the devotees tie it on their heads and dance; when Mahaprabhu disappears, the devotees suffer separation, and when He returns, their bliss increases.

Chapter 6 (portions 30–31). Gaurahari plays with the devotees in the bliss of prema; [the devotees] accept the water from Nityananda Prabhu's feet; the meeting with Haridasa; Advaita Prabhu arrives; Advaita Prabhu is told to preach prema without distinguishing the worthy and the unworthy; the devotees are told [to go] from door to door distributing the name and prema; [when] the devotees mention the great sinners Jagai and Madhai, Mahaprabhu glorifies the greatness of the name, [which saves even] by namabhasa, and goes round the town with the devotees in kirtana; the deliverance of Jagai and Madhai; the author glorifies the mercy of Gaura and Nityananda.

Chapter 7 (portions 31–32). The Lord's merciful glance on the brahmana Vanamali from East Bengal and his son; seeing [the Lord] in the form of Shyamasundara, they praise Him and call Him a "new Creator"; the Lord's bhava of Nrisimha in Srivasa's house; mercy to a worshipper of Shiva; when a brahmana woman touches the Lord's feet, He throws Himself into the Ganga; the Lord's instruction to serve Hari; mercy to Mukunda; Mukunda's hymn; the Lord manifests His form as Bhagavan; Srivasa performs [His] abhisheka; the author sings Gaura's qualities and instructs all to serve Gaura.

Chapter 8 (portions 32–33)²². [The Lord] makes a brahmana stricken with leprosy beg forgiveness of Srivasa and frees him from offence to a Vaishnava; when [the Lord] dances, the devotees do not admit a certain brahmana [to Him], and he curses Mahaprabhu: "May Your worldly happiness perish!"; the brahmana's hymn; the Lord consoles the brahmana; the Lord in the bhava of Balarama cries, "Give Me honey!"; He goes with the devotees to Advaita's house; in the bhava of Baladeva He faints; at Gadadhara's coming He restrains the bhava; the devotees headed by Acharyaratna arrive; all see [the Lord] in the form of Baladeva; bathing in the Ganga with the devotees.

Chapter 9 (portions 33–34). The Lord in the bhava of Varaha; the devotees headed by Advaita Acharya are told [to perform] sankirtana and to preach it; in the bhava of a gopi He sings of the qualities of the gopis; [the Lord] goes to Chandrashekhara's house; Srivasa in the bhava of Narada; the greatness of Gadadhara is glorified: [the Lord] reveals that Gadadhara is Radhika; Thakura Haridasa arrives; the bliss of sankirtana; the Lord in the bhava of His majesty; in the bhava of Lakshmi He gives away the prema of service and at last is filled with the bhava of Ishvara.

Chapter 10 (portions 35–36). The Lord, having told Srivasa of the dharmas of the four yugas, reveals the pre-eminence of sankirtana; in the bhava of Radha — agitation: "Where is Vrindavana? Where is Lalita?"; at Murari's words [the Lord] calms down and delights in kirtana; He tells mother Shachi that in a dream He received the mantra of sannyasa; the arrival of Keshava Bharati; the Lord's separation from Krishna [becomes] unbearable; at the thought that the Lord will take sannyasa the devotees lament bitterly, and the Lord consoles them.

Chapter 11 (portions 36–37). Hearing that the Lord will take sannyasa, mother Shachi grieves and asks [Him] to keep the dharma [of a householder]; the Lord, telling the story of Dhruva, instructs her to serve Krishna; having consoled His mother in various ways, He shows her the form of Sri Krishna and dispels her grief.

Chapter 12 (portion 38)²³. The grief of Vishnupriya-devi; the Lord consoles her with many sweet words and, having instructed her in the truth, shows the four-armed form of Narayana; Srivasa, Murari and other devotees arrive; the Lord consoles them.

Chapter 13 (portions 39–40). Having consoled the devotees with instruction in the truth, [the Lord,] in order to take sannyasa, crosses the Ganga and comes to Kantakanagara, to Keshava Bharati; Nityananda Prabhu consoles mother Shachi and Vishnupriya; with Chandrashekhara Acharya, Damodara Pandita and other devotees Nityananda Prabhu comes to Kantakanagara; [the Lord] asks Bharati for the mantra of sannyasa; Bharati refuses, and then, [knowing the Lord's heart], agrees to give the mantra; the Lord speaks the mantra of sannyasa into Bharati's ear, and Bharati gives [Him] the mantra; the grief of the villagers at the Lord's sannyasa; the Lord consoles them and, [behaving] as a devotee, asks [for the blessing of] devotion to Krishna; the Lord's sannyasa name is Sri Krishna Chaitanya; having taken sannyasa, He wanders through Rarh intoxicated with prema.

Chapter 14 (portion 41). When Chandrashekhara Acharya returns from Kantakanagara to Nadia — the grief and lament of mother Shachi and Vishnupriya; Nityananda Prabhu announces Mahaprabhu's coming to Shantipura; conversation of mother Shachi with Nityananda Prabhu; the people of Nadia come to Advaita's house to see the Lord; Mahaprabhu speaks fittingly with everyone.

Chapter 15 (portions 42–43). The Lord instructs the devotees to benefit all living beings by the sankirtana of Hari's name; as He prepares to go to Nilachala, Thakura Haridasa speaks humbly with the Lord; when the devotees follow, [the Lord] consoles them with sweet words and sets out for Nilachala reciting the verse "Rama Raghava, Rama Raghava, protect me" and others; on the way Nityananda Prabhu breaks the staff, and the Lord shows a lila of anger.

Chapter 16 (portions 44–45). On the way to Nilachala — through Tamoluk; bathing in the Brahma-kunda; having seen Madhusudana, [the Lord] comes to Remuna and dances and sings before Gopaladeva; having bathed in the Vaitarani, He sees Lord Varaha; He comes to Yajapura and, having seen the lingas of Shiva, sees Viraja; from there — bathing in the Brahma-kunda, Nabhi-gaya and the city of Shiva; a merciful glance on the toll-collector, and the form of the One who lies on the Milk Ocean shown [to him] in a dream; arrival at Ekamra-kanana, hymns to Shiva and a discussion of whether to accept Shiva's prasada; via Kapotesvara to the river Bhargavi and bathing in it; [at the sight of] the temple of Sri Jagannatha — swoon; [the Lord is carried] to the house of Vasudeva Sarvabhauma and [brought to His senses]; standing behind the Garuda pillar, the Lord sees Jagannatha; discussion with Sarvabhauma Pandita on various subjects and the showing [to him] of the six-armed form.

Shesha-khanda

Chapter 1 (portions 46–47). Kirtana with Sarvabhauma in Puri; [the Lord] sets out on the road to Setubandha; He comes to Kurma-kshetra and delivers Vasudeva; He comes to Jiyada-Nrisimha — an

Sutra-khanda, part 1 (portion 01)

The blessing: the mangala-shloka; praise of Ganesha, of Shiva and Parvati, of Sarasvati and of the Vaishnavas; obeisance to the Lord, His associates and the author's guru Narahari; Murari Gupta and his Sanskrit book, the model of this poem; the beginning of the "sutra", a brief list of the pastimes of the Adi-khanda

Mangalacharana (The Blessing)

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati.¹ Having sung the glory of Sri Krishna Chaitanya, the author prays for the merciful grace first of the Vaishnavas and then of his own guru, Sri Narahari Thakura; he bows at the feet of the countless associates of Gaura-lila, known to him and unknown; praying for the blessing of guru and Vaishnavas, he declares that the model of his book, a panchali-prabandha, is the Sanskrit poem of Sri Murari Gupta called Sri Chaitanya-charita; and he briefly states what will be written in the Adi-, Madhya- and Shesha-khanda.

Mangala-shloka (Sanskrit)²

Glory to the Lord in the form of Chaitanya, crest-jewel of sannyasis! —
He who gladdens the devotees by giving away heaps of priceless jewels of bhakti and prema, who descended in full in the age of Kali to free the devotees from their distress, and who crushes the unbelievers of the three worlds with the thunderbolt-goad of His roar.

81. He studied with His guru together with His fellow students, how He mimicked the speech of the people of East Bengal;¹⁹

1. The summary printed in Bhaktisiddhanta's edition before this section is almost wholly illegible in the OCR (only scattered words can be made out — a list of the coming pastimes: Vishvarupa's sannyasa, the passing of Jagannatha Mishra, the journey to East Bengal, etc.). We therefore give his own brief summary of this section from the Khanda-vivarana (survey of the parts) at the beginning of the same edition.

2. In Bhaktisiddhanta's edition the shloka is followed by his Sanskrit commentary. He explains: "in the age of Kali" — "in the age of quarrel"; "to free the devotees from their distress" — to give the Lord's servants a joy free of thorns when they are troubled by disputants opposed to shruti; "descended in full" — appeared in His original form as Bhagavan (svayam-rupa); "crest-jewel of sannyasis" — the jewel in the crown of renunciants, full of beauty; "bhakti and prema" — service of the Lord, and prema, which is nothing but the desire to please Krishna's senses — these are the priceless jewels, and "giving away" means bestowing them freely; "the devotees" — those devoted to pure service; "the unbelievers" — those hostile to the devotees and turned away from Hari; "crushes" — subdues completely; "glory to" — may He abide above all.

3. Ganesha, Shiva with Parvati, and Sarasvati are praised here after the custom of the Bengali mangala poems. For Gaudiya Vaishnavas the gods are honoured as devotees of the Lord: Ganesha worships Govinda (Brahma-samhita 5.50), and Shiva is the greatest of Vaishnavas (Bhag. 12.13.16); so too Bhaktisiddhanta, in his summary of the next section, calls Shambhu "the best of Vaishnavas". The words "the sole doers in the three worlds" are poetic praise; for the tradition the source of all the worlds is Krishna Himself, and Shiva and Parvati are His servants, "granting bhakti to Vishnu", as the same line says.

4. Literally "unknown to the three worlds, in greatness — to the Lord of speech"; the Lord of speech (Vaninatha) is Brahma, husband of Sarasvati. The 1903 edition reads "to the golden [Lord], the Lord of speech"; the sense of the line is not quite clear in either reading.

5. So in Bhaktisiddhanta's text (and in his index of names — "Garga"): Garga Muni, the family priest of the Yadavas, who in Gaura-lila is Nilambara Chakravarti, the Lord's maternal grandfather (Gaura-ganoddesh-dipika). The 1983 edition reads here "brimming over, enraptured with pride in Gora's virtues" and refers the line to Nityananda.

6. The Lord's first wife, Lakshmi-priya, left the world while the Lord was in East Bengal (see en/02, v. 86).

7. In the 1983 edition this couplet stands right after the praise of Shachi (v. 20); we follow the order of Bhaktisiddhanta's edition.

8. Pandita Gosani is Gadadhara Pandita.
 9. That is, Murari Gupta the physician (vaidya, physician, also the physician caste).
 10. "Master of the family" and "chosen Deity" (ishta-devata) here mean Narahari himself, the author's guru, named in the next couplet.
 11. Vrindavana Dasa's Sri Chaitanya-bhagavata.
 12. Literally "the Thakura of our house"; this usually means the household Deity (at Shrikhandā, Gopinātha). The 1983 edition reads: "I praise the Thakura of our house, Sri Raghunandana", i.e. Raghunandana himself is so called.
 13. V. 36+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; it is absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition and from the 1903 edition. On Raghunandana and his father Mukunda Dasa cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Madhya 15.112–131.
 14. Sri Murti — the Deity. According to the tradition of Shrikhandā, the boy Raghunandana, son of Mukunda Dasa (Narahari's brother), gave a laddu to the Deity of Gopinātha, and the Deity ate it.
 15. The line is damaged in the OCR of Bhaktisiddhanta's edition; translated from the legible reading. The 1903 and 1983 editions have: "Sing the virtues of Gora — this is my hope; Lochana Dasa says: fulfil my desire."
 16. The identification of Murari Gupta with Hanuman is also accepted by Kavi Karnapura's Gaura-ganoddesha-dipika.
 17. Murari Gupta's Sri Krishna-chaitanya-charitamrita, a Sanskrit poem framed as Murari's dialogue with Damodara Pandita (translated in murari-gupta/). Bhaktisiddhanta in his survey of the parts calls it Sri Chaitanya-charita.
 18. Advaita Acharya.
 19. The people of East Bengal (bangaja) spoke a dialect that was thought comic in Navadvīpa; in His youth the Lord loved to mimic it.

135. "Glory, glory!" — auspicious cries ring out, the people of the world say "Hari!", all are hoping for prema;
prema, rare even for Brahma — all long for it — so says Lochana Dasa, smiling.

Grantharambha (The Narrative Begins)

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. At the beginning of the narrative the author, relying on the conversation of Narada and Uddhava from the Jaimini-bharata, which is related in the dialogue of Damodara and Murari, has set down the reason why Krishna descended in the form of Gaura.

Once the devarshi Narada, grieved by the sufferings of the living beings stricken by Kali and pondering how to save them, resolved to move the protector of dharma, Bhagavan Sri Krishna, to descend into the mortal world, and set out for Dvaraka. Sri Krishna was then staying in the palace of Rukmini-devi. Rukmini-devi, having learned that Krishna, accepting the bhava of Radha, would descend in the form of Gaura, was in the greatest distress at the thought of the coming separation; she was glorifying His lotus feet and confiding her grief to Him when the devarshi Narada arrived. Received by Krishna with honour, he told the reason for his coming, and Krishna revealed to him that He would descend in the form of Gaura in the house of Shachi and Jagannatha at Navadvipa, and at once showed him His form as Gaura.

Seeing the supremely lovely form of Gaura, the devarshi Narada, beside himself with rapture, went on from there meditating on the form of Gaura and singing the glory of Gaura, the essence of all avatars, and came to Naimisharanya. There the best of devotees, Uddhava, asked the great sage how the living beings stricken by Kali could be saved; the devarshi Narada told him all that had happened, sang the glory of the Kali-yuga, the essence of all yugas, and of the dharma of that age, the sankirtana of Hari-nama, and came to Kailasa, to the best of Vaishnavas, Shambhu. There Narada, wishing to remind Parvati of her former vow, [related]: how, learning of the greatness of mahaprasada, he served Lakshmi for twelve years to obtain it, and by her grace obtained mahaprasada and gave a portion to Shiva; how Shiva, having tasted the mahaprasada, broke into a wild dance; how the Earth, unable to bear Shiva's dance, came to Parvati; and then the greatness of mahaprasada and Parvati's vow to distribute mahaprasada to all living beings; and he sang much of the descent of Gaura.

Then Narada came to Brahma and told of Gaurasundara's descent in the Kali-yuga. Brahma quoted and explained to Narada the verses of the Srimad-Bhagavata concerning this descent, supported the sense of these verses of the Bhagavata with the words of other scriptures, and said that at the time of Gaura's descent he himself would appear on earth with all the gods. Next comes the proposal of the gods to take birth in the mortal world; [the account of how] Krishna, accepting the bhava and lustre of Srimati Radhika, together with the special qualities of His eternal consorts Rukmini, Satyabhama and others, taking up the weapon of the sankirtana of the Name, descends as Gaura, Balarama as Nityananda, Shiva as Advaita Prabhu, and the other associates as Murari, Mukunda, Srinivasa, Raya Ramananda, Ishvara Puri, Madhava Puri; having described this, the author sang the glory of his guru Thakura Narahari and of his nephew Raghunandana and concluded the Sutra-khanda.⁷

Raga varadi; disha: "O, o! — Murchha: — I would die taking on myself every ill that threatens Gora,⁸ taking on myself the ills that threaten His beauty and His virtues! In rapture He gave away prema, filling the whole world"

32. The black serpent Kali has bitten all people:

they burn unceasingly, blinded by the pride of maya.

1. The Adi-khanda tells of the goddess Ganga's love for the young Nimai (so in Bhaktisiddhanta's survey of the parts and in the 1983 edition).

2. So in Bhaktisiddhanta's text (A: "prabhura prana"); the 1983 edition has "by the Lord's grace".

3. In the Madhya-khanda — the curse a brahmana pronounced upon the Lord (see Bhaktisiddhanta's summary of that chapter).

4. Advaita Acharya's, at Shantipur.

5. Literally "The Madhya-khanda ends: in the book, the manifestation of prema." Contrary to expectation, nothing is said here of the contents of the Shesha-khanda: Lochana Dasa only promises to tell of it; the meeting with Sarvabhauma he still assigns to the Madhya-khanda.

6. Mahesha is Shiva. According to the Gaura-ganoddeshā-dīpikā and the Chaitanya-charitamṛta (Adi 6), Advaita Acharya is Maha-Vishnu, non-different from Hari, and at the same time Sadashiva; Lochana Dasa names here only the second aspect.

7. The summary covers the whole section "Grantharambha" to the end of the Sutra-khanda (portions 02–08 of our translation). A few words are corrupt in the OCR and have been restored from the same summary in the Khanda-vivarana at the beginning of the edition.

8. Nichhani is the rite in which one waves something around a beloved person to "take off" all harm and take it upon oneself; balai laya, "I take your ill upon myself", is an expression of tender love.

9. So in Bhaktisiddhanta's text (A: "gadadhara-prana"); the 1983 edition has "Glory to Gadadhara Pandita, glory to Narahari".

10. The 1983 edition has two couplets here instead of this one (a different redaction): "I shall tell of Chaitanya — listen attentively — how He descended in the age of Kali. Murari Gupta, the vaidya, knows the truth about the Lord; Pandita Damodara asked him." A (and the 1903 edition) has a single couplet coinciding with the first and last lines of B; we follow A.

11. Nagara, an elegant townsman; here the fine dress of a fashionable householder that the Lord wore in His youth, as opposed to the garb of a sannyasi.

12. In Bhaktisiddhanta's edition (A) couplets 22–23 are already narrative ("took birth"); in the 1983 edition they continue Narada's thought ("will take birth on earth"), and instead of "Narada and the other sages" it has "Sanaka and the other sages".

Sutra-khanda, part 3 (portion 03)

Narada comes to Dvaraka; Rukmini washes Krishna's feet and weeps, glorifying the greatness of His feet and the love of Radha; Krishna resolves to taste prema and to appear in the Kali-yuga, and reveals to Narada His form as Gaura; at Naimisharanya Narada tells everything to Uddhava

e pada āmāra ghare, ullasita antare, kāndi puna bicchedera ḍare |
tomāra adhika tora, śrīpadapaṅkaja jora, anubhabi karaha bicāre || 73 ||

Word for word: e pada amara ghare — these feet in my house; ullasita antare — the heart rejoices; kandi puna vichchedera dare — yet I weep again for fear of separation; tomara adhika tora sri-pada-pankaja jora — Your holy lotus feet are stronger than You; anubhavi karaha vichare — feel it and judge

73. These feet are in my house — and my heart rejoices, yet I weep again for fear of separation;

Your holy lotus feet are stronger than You Yourself — feel it and judge.

1. So in Bhaktisiddhanta's text (A: "amiya"): people take these passions for nectar. The 1983 edition has "sprinkle their hearts with poison".
 2. Literally "the Thakura of Dvaraka, crest-jewel of the God of gods".
 3. Mitravinda and Nagnajiti are among Krishna's principal queens (Bhag. 10.58). Sushila and Subala may also be names of queens, or epithets ("good-natured, youthful"); we take them as names.
 4. Nirmanchhana: the rite of waving a lamp or other object around a beloved person to ward off all harm.
 5. Cf. Bhag. 10.60: Krishna in jest told Rukmini that she should have chosen a king equal to her as husband, and she fainted from grief.
 6. Literally "then You will know the marks of Your own love", i.e. the love directed to You. This directly echoes how Gaudiya Vaishnavas understand the reason for Sri Chaitanya's appearance: Krishna wishes to know the greatness of Radha's love, the sweetness of Himself that She tastes, and Her bliss, and therefore comes, accepting Her bhava and lustre (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 1.6 and ch. 4). Bhaktisiddhanta says the same in his summary of this section: Krishna descends as Gaura "accepting the bhava of Radha".
 7. Rama is Lakshmi. Cf. Bhag. 10.16.36: Lakshmi performed austerities desiring to touch the dust of Krishna's feet.
 8. Probably Shiva is meant (cf. v. 54): he contemplates the Lord in samadhi and himself longs for His feet.
 9. The 1983 edition likewise: "'I shall taste the happiness of prema,' He Himself said." This is the first statement of the vow spoken in full in v. 100.
 10. The story of the mahaprasada, Shiva and Katyayani (Parvati) is told by Lochana Dasa further on, in the account of Narada's visit to Kailasa.
 11. Literally "let people be turned in one direction" — towards the one prema-bhakti.
 12. In the Bhagavata-purana (1.4–1.7) Narada instructs the dejected Vyasa at his ashrama on the bank of the Sarasvati (Shamyaprasa), while it is Suta who recites the Bhagavata to the sages at Naimisharanya; Lochana Dasa, following his source, joins these accounts.
 13. Cf. Bhag. 12.3.52: what was attained in the Satya-yuga by meditation, in the Treta by sacrifice and in the Dvapara by worship is attained in the Kali-yuga by the chanting of Hari's name.

Sutra-khanda, part 4 (portion 04)

Narada parts from Uddhava and comes to Kailasa; Narada's account of the mahaprasada: Uddhava's words on the remnants of the Lord's meal, Narada's service to Lakshmi, the dance of Shiva after tasting mahaprasada, the Earth's complaint; Parvati's vow to give mahaprasada to all living beings; the Lord of Vaikuntha approves her vow and promises to appear in the Kali-yuga as Gaura

Word for word: shuniya narada-vani — hearing Narada's words; ullasita shulapani — the Trident-bearer rejoiced; ullasita devi katyayani — the goddess Katyayani rejoiced; anande bharala puri — the abode filled with joy; sabhe bole hari hari — all say "Hari, Hari"; uthila ananda-rola-dhvani — a joyful clamour arose

275. Hearing Narada's words, the Trident-bearer rejoiced, the goddess Katyayani rejoiced;
the abode filled with joy, all say "Hari, Hari!" —
a joyful clamour arose.

1. A reference to the source of the dialogue, the Jaimini-bharata (v. 155). Which text by this name Lochana Dasa has in mind is unclear.

2. Malasat: slapping the shoulders and thighs with the palms, as wrestlers do to challenge an opponent; in the Gaudiya biographies one of the signs of ecstatic rapture.
3. Narada humbly names the grace of Katyayani (Parvati) and Shiva as the source of his devotion. For Gaudiya Vaishnavas Shiva is the best of Vaishnavas (Bhag. 12.13.16); so Bhaktisiddhanta also calls him in his summary of this section.
4. Nandi and Mahakala are Shiva's servants and doorkeepers.
5. V. 172+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition it is in a footnote, as an additional reading of one printed book. In the 1983 edition the first line of v. 172 also differs: "He embraces [him] tightly with joy in his heart" — without the words "seated him beside himself". The text does not say who leads Narada — Shiva or the goddess.
6. The conversation of Uddhava with the Lord before His departure is in the Bhagavata, canto 11 (11.6.43–50 and the following Uddhava-gita, where the Lord explains yoga). Literally "explained yoga concerning His own doings".
7. Cf. the Bhagavad-gita, chs. 7 and 10. The Lord pervades everything by His energies and dwells in all as the Paramatma, while remaining a person distinct from creation and inconceivably one with it (achintya-bhedabheda); there is no identification of God with the world here.
8. In Bhaktisiddhanta's edition every quoted shloka is followed by his prose order of the words (anvaya) and a Bengali translation; on this page they are almost illegible. "Your maya" is the external energy of the Lord, which holds living beings captive; the Lord Himself is not subject to it.
9. "Hari's servant" (hari-dasa) here is Uddhava.
10. "The Great Lord" (mahaprabhu) here is Narayana, the Lord of Vaikuntha, not Sri Chaitanya.
11. Sudarshana is the Lord's disc, the guardian of His apartments; the Lord wonders whether he has offended Lakshmi.
12. The earth is upheld beneath by the serpent Ananta (Shesha) on his hoods, and beneath him by the Tortoise (Kurma).
13. "The bearers of the quarters" (digvaha): the diggajas, the elephants said to support the world in the eight directions.
14. "The nectar of His lips" (adharamrita): the remnants of food touched by the Lord's lips; this is mahaprasada in the proper sense.
15. Mahamaya is a name of Parvati (Durga). For Gaudiya Vaishnavas Durga is the external energy of the Lord, carrying out His will as a shadow follows the movements of the body (Brahma-samhita 5.44); below the Lord Himself calls her His shakti (vv. 260–261).
16. Cf. the tradition of Puri: everything offered to Jagannatha is then offered to Vimala-devi (Parvati) in Jagannatha's temple, and only then becomes the mahaprasada that is given to all without distinction.
17. An energy is inseparable from its possessor (shakti and shaktiman). In the Gaudiya understanding Durga is the external energy of the Lord (bahiranga-shakti, maya), the shadow of His internal energy (chit-shakti) to which Radha and the eternal consorts belong; the Lord Himself is not subject to maya — she serves His will, keeping captive those who have turned from Him.
18. So Lochana Dasa: "Hara and Gauri are My own body." According to Gaudiya Vaishnava teaching Shiva is not different from the Lord in source, but, in contact with tamo-guna, becomes distinct, as milk turned into curd (Brahma-samhita 5.45); Durga is the Lord's external energy (5.44). "The division into mine and another's" is the false "I" and "mine" (cf. v. 35) created by maya; there is no question of the difference between the soul and God disappearing.
19. Literally "a hair" (loma); from the following verses, the shoot from which the wish-fulfilling tree (kalpa-taru) grew (cf. the Parijata, which came out of the churned ocean).
20. Lochana Dasa probably connects this tree with the Kalpa-vata, the sacred banyan by Jagannatha's temple in Puri, honoured as a wish-fulfilling tree; the whole dialogue (v. 272) comes from the traditions of Utkala (Orissa) and Purushottama-kshetra.
21. Cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 2: Krishna (and Gaura as Krishna) is the avatari, the source of all avatars.
22. The Utkala-khanda is the account of Purushottama-kshetra (Puri) known as part of the Skanda-purana; a Purushottama account is also found in the Brahma-purana. Prataparudra was the king of Orissa (reigned c. 1497–1540), a devotee of Sri Chaitanya. What exactly Prataparudra did to spread this account is not clear from the text.
23. Cf. Kavi Karnapura's Gaura-ganoddesh-dipika, which states which eternal associates and gods appeared as whom in Gaura-lila. The words "in brahmana families" are the author's generalization: not all the Lord's associates were brahmanas by birth (Murari Gupta, for example, was a vaidya, and Haridasa Thakura was born in a Muslim family).

Sutra-khanda, part 5 (portion 05)

Narada comes to Brahma and gives him the Lord's words about His appearance in the Kali-yuga; Brahma tells of the doubt of Sanaka and the other Kumaras, of the Lord's answer in four verses, and of how the Bhagavata was given through Narada; Brahma recalls Garga Muni's words about the colours of the avatars in the various yugas and, following the Bhagavata, describes the avatars and the worship of the Satya-, Treta- and Dvapara-yugas se sbarā-madhura-rasa-siñce |

amiyā-madhura-dhārā, śrabāṇe pūrila pārā, tribhubana-jana-mana rañje || 276 ||*

Word for word: chalila naradamuni — the sage Narada went; uthila vinara dhvani — the sound of the vina rose; se svara-madhura-rasa-sinche — that sound sprinkles sweet rasa; amiya-madhura-dhara — a sweet stream of nectar; shravane purila para — as if filling the ears; tribhuvana-jana-mana ranje — delights the hearts of the people of the three worlds

276. The sage Narada went on, his vina sounding — its sound sprinkles sweet rasa;
as if a stream of sweet nectar filled the ears, delighting the hearts of the people of the three worlds.

Word for word: apana pasare yaite — going, he forgets himself; chalite na pare pathe — cannot walk on the road; anurage aruna-vadana — face reddened with love; na janila patha-shrama — he felt no weariness of the road; bhale bindu bindu gharma — drops of sweat on his brow; upanita brahmara sadana — he reached Brahma's abode

277. Going, he forgets himself, he cannot keep to the road, his face reddened with love;
he feels no weariness of the way, drops of sweat on his brow — and so he reached Brahma's abode.

Word for word: dekhi brahma — seeing, Brahma; ati vyaste — hastily; maha harashita chite — with great joy at heart; munire karila abhyutthana — rose to greet the sage; muni paranama kare — the sage bows; padiya charana-tale — falling at his feet; tuli brahma kaila alingana — raising him, Brahma embraced him

278. Seeing him, Brahma hastily, with great joy at heart, rose to greet the sage;
the sage bows, falling at his feet;
raising him, Brahma embraced him.

Word for word: puchhila kushala-vani — he asked of his welfare; agamane dhanya mani — deeming himself blessed by the visit; chira-darashana-anurage — with love long unseen; hena laya mora mana — so my mind tells me; dekhi tora suvadana — seeing your bright face; rahasya kahibe mahabhage — you will tell a secret, fortunate one

279. He asked of his welfare, deeming himself blessed by his coming, with the love of long separation:
"It seems to me, looking at your bright face, that you, fortunate one, will tell a secret.

Word for word: tora mukhodita-vani — words from your mouth; shravane amiya mani — I deem nectar to the ear; hiya juduka — let my heart be soothed; kaha shuni — speak, I shall listen; kaichhana lokera katha — what news of the worlds; kaha prabhu-guna-gatha — tell the song of the Lord's virtues; ki dekhile ki shunile tumi — what you have seen and heard

280. Words from your mouth are nectar to the ear; speak — I shall listen; let my heart be soothed:
what news of the worlds? Tell the song of the Lord's virtues — what have you seen, what have you heard?"

Word for word: katha kahe paripati — he speaks in order; naradera arabhati — with Narada's ardour; sphurita adhara — lips quivering; dole anga — body swaying; bashpa-jala-bhara ankhi — eyes full of tears; aruna adhara dekhi — reddened lips seen; katharambhe dviguna ananda — as he begins, his joy doubles

281. In due order Narada tells his story, full of ardour:
his lips quiver, his body sways, his eyes are full of tears, his lips are red — as he begins to speak, his joy is doubled:

Word for word: shuna adabhuta katha — hear wondrous news; tumi sarva-srishti-karta — you are the maker of all creation; tora nama — [bearing] your name; bulie brahmāṇḍa — I roam the universe (Brahmāṇḍa); yuga-anurupa rupe — according to each yuga; yuga-dharma kare loke — people practise the dharma of the age; kali-yuge papa parachanda — in the Kali-yuga sin is fierce 282. "Hear wondrous news. You are the maker of all creation;

I roam the universe that bears your name."¹
According to each yuga people practise the dharma of that yuga, but in the Kali-yuga sin is rampant.

Word for word: dvapara-sheshera loke — the people at the end of Dvapara; saba duhkhamaya shoke — all in sorrowful grief; dekhi — seeing; mora kalike tarasa — I dread Kali; katara hridaye mari — dying with an anguished heart; gelun panhu barabari — I went straight to the Lord; sudhainu parama sahase — I asked with great boldness

283. Seeing the people at the end of Dvapara, all in sorrowful grief,
I dreaded Kali;
with an anguished heart I went straight to the Lord and asked with great boldness:
কলি পাপময় যুগে, নিস্তার করিবে লোকে,

Word for word: kali papamaya yuge — in the sinful age of Kali; nistara karibe loke — [how] will You deliver the people; kaha prabhu kemana upaya — tell, Lord, by what means; brahmana se vedahina — the brahmanas are without the Vedas; sarvaloka dharma-kshina — in all people dharma has waned; mora hiyaya e bada samshaya — in my heart is this great doubt

284. 'In the sinful age of Kali by what means will You deliver the people? Tell me, Lord:
the brahmanas are without the Vedas, dharma has waned in all — in my heart is a great doubt.'

Word for word: shuniya katara-vani — hearing the piteous words; bole panhu gunamani — the Lord, jewel of virtues, says; dura kara hridayera chinta — put away the anxiety of your heart; kali-loka nistariba — I shall deliver the people of Kali; nija bhakti prachariba — I shall spread devotion to Me; avatara kariba mo tatha — I shall descend there

285. Hearing the piteous words, the Lord, jewel of virtues, says:

'Put away the anxiety of your heart:

I shall deliver the people of Kali, I shall spread devotion to Me,
I shall descend there Myself.

Word for word: dana vrata tapa dharma — charity, vows, austerity, dharma; ara yata yata karma — and all other works; saba aropiba hari-name — I shall place all in Hari's name; kali doshamaya dekha — see, Kali is full of faults; eka mahaguna lekha — [but] note one great virtue; mukta-bandha mora sankirtane — release from bonds by My sankirtana

286. Charity, vows, austerity, dharma and all other works —

all this I shall place in Hari's name;

see, Kali is full of faults, but note one great virtue:

release from bondage — by My sankirtana.²

satya tretā dbāpara tina yuga gela |

śbeta rakta āra kṛṣṇa barāṇa haila || 347 ||

Word for word: satya treta dvapara — Satya, Treta, Dvapara; tina yuga gela — three yugas have passed; shveta rakta ara krishna — white, red and dark; barana haila — were the colours

347. Satya, Treta and Dvapara — three yugas have passed, and the colours were white, red and dark.

1. Brahmanda, literally "Brahma's egg", the universe.

2. Cf. Bhag. 12.3.51: "O king, Kali is an ocean of faults, but it has one great virtue: by chanting of Krishna one is freed from bondage and attains the Supreme."

3. Cf. below (vv. 319–321 and 349): according to the Bhagavata, the Lord in each yuga takes a form of its own colour; in Kali, golden.

4. This is the reasoning of the Kumaras, who formerly adhered to the impersonal Brahman (cf. Bhag. 3.15.43: the fragrance of the tulasi at the Lord's feet turned them to bhakti). In the Vaishnava understanding "beyond the gunas" and "formless" mean "free of material qualities and material form": the Lord has an eternal spiritual form.

5. This is the doubt of the Kumaras, not the author's assertion. Parikshit voices the same doubt (Bhag. 10.33.27–28), and Shukadeva answers it (10.33.29–37): the rasa is the purest prema, not mundane passion; the Lord is self-satisfied and dwells as the Witness in the hearts of the gopis and their husbands. Bhaktisiddhanta stresses that the love of the gopis is the highest form of prema, free from all lust.

6. A has "my heart", although many Kumaras are asking; so in both editions.

7. In the Bhagavata the Lord in the form of Hamsa answers the Kumaras' question about detaching the mind from sense objects (11.13), while the four verses that are the essence of the Bhagavata (2.9.32–35) the Lord reveals to Brahma before creation. Lochana Dasa joins these accounts.

8. In the Bhagavata (2.9; 1.5–1.7) Brahma passes on what he heard to Narada, and Narada instructs the dejected Vyasa.

9. Cf. Bhag. 1.3.43: when Krishna departed to His abode, the Bhagavata rose like the sun for the people of Kali who have lost their sight.

10. Bhag. 10.8: Garga Muni, the priest of the Yadus, gives names to Krishna and Balarama in Nanda's house.

11. Garga Muni's words at Krishna's name-giving. The Gaudiya acharyas (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 3.36–40) take "yellow" (pita) as the golden form in which Krishna appears in the Kali-yuga as Sri Chaitanya, and "now He has become Krishna" as the appearance of Krishna Himself, the original Lord. Further on (portion 06) Lochana Dasa discusses this verse at length.

12. "At the last" (parisheshe), i.e. in the Kali-yuga, the last of the four; so Lochana Dasa takes the "yellow" colour of the verse.

13. In the Bhagavata (11.2–11.5) King Nimi (Videha) questions the nine sage-yogendras; Karabhajana answers about the yuga-avatars.

14. Verses 11.5.29–30 (the hymn of the Dvapara) the author does not cite. The verse on Kali (11.5.32) is quoted at the beginning of portion 06.

Sutra-khanda, part 6 (portion 06)

Brahma continues: the Lord in the Kali-yuga is the golden Gaura of whom the Bhagavata speaks (11.5.32); explanation of the words "krishna-varna" and "sangopanga", of Garga Muni's verse on the four colours and of the word "tatha"; Krishna is not a yuga-avatara but Bhagavan Himself, and in the Dvapara and the Kali it is He Himself who descends; testimonies of the Gita, the "Thousand Names" and the Bhavishya-purana; the greatness of the Kali-yuga and of sankirtana

1. Krishna-varna: literally "dark in colour" or "whose utterance (varna) is 'Krishna'"; tvisha akrishna, "not dark in lustre". In the edition the verse is followed by Bhaktisiddhanta's anvaya and translation (OCR damaged): krishna-varna — He who describes Krishna; "not dark in lustre" — golden; the "limbs" (anga) — Nityananda and Advaita; the "sub-limbs" (upanga) — Srivasa and others; the "weapons" (astra) — Hari-nama and the like; the "associates" (parshada) — Gadadhara and others. In translation: "The intelligent worship with the sacrifice of sankirtana the Mahapurusha who always reveals the virtues of Krishna and is golden in lustre, together with His limbs, sub-limbs, weapons and associates."

2. A play on words: varna means both "colour" and "letter, sound". Cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 3.53.

3. Lochana Dasa's interpretation: the "limb" (anga) is Balarama, i.e. Nityananda; the "sub-limbs" (upanga) are ornaments. Krishnadasa Kaviraja (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 3.66–76) and Bhaktisiddhanta in his anvaya take the "limbs and sub-limbs" as Nityananda, Advaita, Srivasa and the other associates, and the "weapon" as the holy name.

4. Cf. Kavi Karnapura's Gaura-ganoddesha-dipika, which states which associates of Krishna appeared as whom in Gaura-lila.

5. Vv. 360–363 set out the opponent's view: for him verse 11.5.32 speaks of a dark avatara of Kali, so that Kali and Dvapara have one colour, and the four yugas only three colours.

6. Lochana Dasa has in mind the form asan ("were") in Garga's verse: the "yellow" one, not yet appeared, is spoken of in the past tense because His appearance is certain.

7. Cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 2 and 3: Krishna is the original Lord (svayam bhagavan), the source of all avatars; when He descends Himself, the yuga-avatara too is present in Him.

8. The reasoning of vv. 385–390 is condensed: had the verse listed four colours one after another as four past yugas, the order would be strict; since Garga lists white, red and yellow in the past tense and says "now" of the dark one, the order seems broken; but "tatha" shows that yellow is the colour of the future, of the Kali-yuga.

9. The sense of the verse is unclear. Perhaps the words "but Krishna is Bhagavan Himself" (Bhag. 1.3.28) are meant: which of them is the qualified and which the qualifier (cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 2, where it is discussed which word in this verse is subject and which predicate).

10. Lochana Dasa takes krishnatam gatah not as "has become dark" but as "has become Krishna": the yuga-avatara of every Dvapara is dark, but in this Dvapara Krishna Himself took his place. Cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 3.5–10: Krishna appears once in a day of Brahma, at the end of the Dvapara (of the twenty-eighth chatur-yuga), and in the Kali that follows appears as Sri Chaitanya.

11. This verse (from the Padma-purana) is also quoted in the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 6.182), as the Lord's order to Shiva to spread Mayavada scriptures in Kali. In Bhaktisiddhanta's translation in this edition: "I, ever worshipping Shambhu, shall accept this boon: you, appearing as a portion among men in the Dvapara and the following yugas, turn people away from Me by invented scriptures and conceal Me, so that creation may increase." Lochana Dasa cites the verse for the words "in the Dvapara and the following yugas" as an example of the Lord Himself descending in these yugas; this is his own interpretation.

12. Bhaktisiddhanta's anvaya: "the righteous" are those devoted to the Lord's service; "the wicked" are those hostile to devotees; "to establish dharma" is Himself to practise the dharma of each yuga and teach it to living beings.

13. A play on words: yuga means both "age" and "pair". According to Lochana Dasa, yuge yuge in Gita 4.8 means "in the pair of yugas" — Dvapara and Kali, when the Lord Himself descends — while the partial avatars of every yuga are the subject of verse 4.7 (vv. 409–412).

14. So Lochana Dasa. The Gaudiya commentators usually refer both 4.7 and 4.8 to the Lord's descents in general; here the author distinguishes: in every yuga a partial avatara, in Dvapara and Kali the Lord Himself.

15. A has "in an ashrama" (any of the ashramas); the 1983 edition, "under the supreme shelter".

16. Line 1 is obscure; probably "the bonds of karma fall away only at the dissolution of the world [, and even then not for ever]".

17. That is, one verse of the Vishnu-sahasranama gives names from two periods of Gaura's life. In Bhaktisiddhanta's translation (the text is partly damaged): the first four names ("golden", "with limbs like gold", "of beautiful form", "adorned with sandal") are marks of the pastimes of household life; the rest, of the pastimes in sannyasa: "taking sannyasa", "equipoised" (absorbed in contemplating Hari's mysteries), "peaceful" (firm in the great sacrifice of Hari-kirtana), "devoted to steadfastness and peace" (to the mahabhava that restrains the non-devotees).

18. So Bhaktisiddhanta understands this verse: "In Kali, at the beginning of sankirtana, I shall be born as the son of Shachi — I shall be born, I shall be born, I shall be born, there is no doubt." In the 1983 edition the first line differs: "Be born on earth, be born, be born in the form of devotees" — the Lord's command to the gods.

19. Cf. Bhag. 2.3.10: even one who has all desires, or desires liberation, should worship the Supreme Lord with intense devotion.

20. Cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 3.14–20 and ch. 4: Krishna reflects that for long He has not given prema-bhakti to the world, and appears as Gaura, giving prema to all without discrimination; cf. Rupa Gosvami's verse anarpita-charim chirat...

Word for word: purusha thakura-amsha — the men are portions of the Lord; sakala vaishnava-vamsha — all of Vaishnava lineage; rasamaya — full of rasa; ranga-nama puri — the city named Ranga; aichhana mahima tara — such is its greatness; kahite shakati kara — who has the power to tell; eka-mukhe kahite na pari — I cannot tell with one mouth

496. The men are portions of the Lord, all of Vaishnava lineage;
the city, full of rasa, is named Ranga.¹²
Such is the greatness of that [abode] — who has the power to tell it?
I cannot tell it with one mouth.

rādhā āge kari kare sebā | dbārakāya āchila yata, rukmīṇīra anugata,
āra yata rasa-anubhabā || 497 ||

Word for word: yateka gopikagane — all the gopis; rasa kaila vrindavane — who danced the rasa in Vrindavana; radha age kari — placing Radha at their head; kare seva — serve; dvarakaya achhila yata — all who were in Dvaraka; rukminira anugata — follow Rukmini; ara yata rasa-anubhava — and all others who taste rasa

497. All the gopis who danced the rasa in Vrindavana serve [Him] with Radha at their head;
all who were in Dvaraka follow Rukmini — and all the others who taste rasa.

Word for word: bhakti vinu nahi taya — there is nothing there but bhakti; niravadhi yashah gaya — unceasingly they sing [His] glory; svatantra haiya paradhina — though independent, dependent; mukta punah sarvajana — all are liberated, and yet; prakrita-janera hena — like ordinary people; bhakati karaye yena dina — practise bhakti as if humble

498. There is nothing there but bhakti; unceasingly they sing [His] glory; though independent, they are dependent [on Him];
all are liberated, and yet, like ordinary people, they practise bhakti as if humble.

Word for word: salokya-adi chari mukti — the four liberations, salokya and the rest; vaikunthanathera shakti — the power of the Lord of Vaikuntha; bhakti-hina — devoid of bhakti; apane svatantra — independent in themselves; lakhimi-sampadamaya — full of Lakshmi's riches; dina-bhava nahi raya — keep no humility; bhakati kevala paratantra — bhakti alone depends on Another

499. The four liberations, salokya and the rest, are the power of the Lord of Vaikuntha; devoid of bhakti, they are independent in themselves;
full of the riches of Lakshmi, they keep no humility — bhakti alone depends on Another.

Word for word: sharkara se apane — sugar itself; nija svada nahi jane — does not know its own taste; para jana kare upabhoga — another enjoys it; aichhana mukati-pada — such is the station of liberation; bhakti-pathe dei badha — it bars the path of bhakti; saba-para prema-bhakti-yoga — above all is the yoga of prema-bhakti

500. Sugar itself does not know its own sweetness — another enjoys it;
such is the station of liberation: it bars the path of bhakti — above all is the yoga of prema-bhakti.

Word for word: vidhatara agochara — beyond the reach of the Creator; se puri amara ghara — that abode is My home; dayara karane ailu etha — out of mercy I came here; shri-chaitanya sarveshvara — Sri Chaitanya, Lord of all; gaura dirgha kalevara — golden, tall of body; dekhiya ghuchaha manovyatha — seeing Him, dispel the pain of your heart

501. That abode, beyond the reach of the Creator, is My home; out of mercy I have come here.
Behold Sri Chaitanya, the Lord of all, golden and tall of stature, and the pain of your heart will go.

Word for word: nagnajita jala bhare — Nagnajiti draws water; dei mitravrinda-kare — gives into Mitravinda's hands; mitravrinda sulakshana-kare — Mitravinda into Sulakshana's hands; se dei rukmini-hathe — she gives into Rukmini's hands; devi dhale prabhu-mathe — the goddess pours on the Lord's head; abhisheka suranadi-jale — a bathing with the water of the heavenly river

523. Nagnajiti draws water and gives it into Mitravinda's hands, Mitravinda into Sulakshana's hands, she gives it into Rukmini's hands, and the goddess pours it on the Lord's head — a bathing with the water of the heavenly river.

Word for word: tilottama jala bhare — Tilottama draws water; dei madhupriya-kare — gives into Madhupriya's hands; madhupriya chandramukhi-kare — Madhupriya into Chandramukhi's hands; se dei radhika-hathe — she gives into Radhika's hands; rai dhale prabhu-mathe — Rai pours on the Lord's head; abhisheka kare ganga-jale — performs the bathing with Ganga water

524. Tilottama draws water and gives it into Madhupriya's hands, Madhupriya into Chandramukhi's hands, she gives it into Radhika's hands, and Rai pours it on the Lord's head — a bathing with the water of the Ganga.

Word for word: satyabhama antare — Satyabhama near; divya gandha kari kare — holding divine scents in her hands; divya malya vastra alankara — divine garlands, garments, ornaments; lakshana subhadra bhadra — Lakshmana, Subhadra, Bhadra; satyabhama-paratantra — obedient to Satyabhama; anukrame kare dei tara — in turn give into her hands

525. Satyabhama is near, holding divine scents in her hands, divine garlands, garments and ornaments; Lakshmana, Subhadra and Bhadra, obedient to Satyabhama, in turn hand [everything] to her.

Word for word: ara divya nari yata — and all the other divine women; chari-pashe shata shata — by hundreds on every side; divya bhusha divya upahara — divine ornaments, divine gifts; ratana-stavaka kare — jewelled bouquets in hand; rahe prabhu barabare — stand before the Lord; jaya jaya mangala-uchchara — crying the auspicious "jaya, jaya"

526. And all the other divine women, by hundreds on every side, with divine ornaments and divine gifts, holding jewelled bouquets, stand before the Lord, crying the auspicious "Jaya, jaya!"

Word for word: golokanathera snana — the bathing of the Lord of Goloka; iha bahi nahi ana — there is no other than this; agame kahila maha-dhyana — the Agamas told the great meditation; hema-gaura kalevara — a body golden-fair; mantra chari akshara — a mantra of four syllables; sahaja vaikunthanatha shyama — the Lord of Vaikuntha is by nature dark

527. Such is the bathing of the Lord of Goloka — there is no other;
the Agamas have told the great meditation [on Him]:
a body golden-fair, a mantra of four syllables;¹⁸
the Lord of Vaikuntha is by nature dark.

Word for word: shyama-dehe chari hatha — a dark body with four arms; dharaye vaikunthanatha — has the Lord of Vaikuntha; chari haste chari astra tara — in four hands His four weapons; hema-kiraniya panhu — the Lord radiant with gold; hema-ange hase lahu — golden-limbed, softly smiles; dvibhuja sharira — a two-armed body; shuna sara — hear the essence

528. A dark body with four arms has the Lord of Vaikuntha, in His four hands four weapons;
but the Lord radiant with gold, golden-limbed, softly smiles — hear the essence: His body is two-armed.

Word for word: aichhana samaye muni — at that moment the sage; dekhi gora gunamani — seeing Gora, the Jewel of virtues; vibhora padila padatale — fell enraptured at the feet; ankhi milibare nare — cannot open his eyes; punah chahe dekhibare — again longs to look; sinaila nayanera jale — bathed [Him] with the tears of his eyes

529. At that moment the sage, seeing Gora, the Jewel of virtues, fell enraptured at His feet;
he cannot open his eyes — and again he longs to look;
he bathed [Him] with the tears of his eyes.

Word for word: snana samapiya panhu — the Lord, having finished His bath; hasi kahe lahu lahu — smiling, speaking very softly; narada tuliya laila kole — lifted Narada and took him on His lap; ghuchila samshaya chinta — doubts and anxieties went; khandila manera vyatha — the pain of the heart was broken; prabhu priya lahu lahu bole — the Lord very softly speaks loving words

530. Having finished His bath, the Lord, smiling, speaking very softly, lifted Narada up and took him on His lap;
doubt and anxiety went, the pain of his heart was broken;
the Lord speaks loving words very softly.

1. That is, worldly people, judging by appearances, see in the gopis' love for Krishna only a breach of marital fidelity. The Gaudiya Vaishnavas, following the Bhagavata (10.33.26–39) and the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Adi 4), teach that the gopis' parakiya-rasa is the purest prema, wholly unlike worldly passion; Lochana Dasa himself says that by this prema the Lord is conquered.

2. The words of Uddhava. In the edition the verse is followed by Bhaktisiddhanta's anvaya and translation: "Oh! The gopis in Vrindavana, abandoning kinsmen hard to abandon — husbands, fathers-in-law and others — and the path of dharma, served the lotus feet of Mukunda, which the Vedas seek. Shall I obtain any birth at all in Vrindavana among the bushes, creepers and herbs that serve the dust of the gopis' feet?"

3. An echo of the Bhagavata (10.47.59), where Uddhava says: "Where are these forest women, tainted by infidelity, and where is this love for Krishna, the Supreme Self!" — to show that such love is given irrespective of merit. The words "unchaste", "lustful" express the worldly view; in the Gaudiya understanding the kama of the gopis is pure prema, whose only desire is Krishna's joy (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 4.164–171).

4. The raga and disha are given after the 1983 edition; in A the line is illegible.
 5. A has the past tense ("has taken birth"); the 1983 edition the future ("will take birth"), as also in v. 474.
 6. The 1983 edition has four couplets here: people have abandoned charity, vows and austerity and toil only for the belly; brahmanas have abandoned the worship of Krishna, and kshatriyas, vaishyas and shudras the service of brahmanas; abandoning respect for father and mother, all honour their wives with body, speech and mind. A has a single couplet (from the first and last lines).
 7. Daru-brahman, "Brahman in wood": the Lord Himself, manifest in the wooden Deity of Jagannatha at Puri (Nilachala).
 8. See vv. 257–271: the Lord promised Katyayani (Parvati) to fulfil her vow concerning mahaprasada and to appear in Kali as Gaura; Narada then proclaimed this at His command.
 9. So Lochana Dasa: in Goloka, the highest abode above Vaikuntha, Gaurasundara Himself is king. In the Gaudiya Vaishnava understanding (Bhaktivinoda Thakura, Bhaktisiddhanta) Gaura's abode, Navadvipa-dhama, is non-different from Goloka-Vrindavana and is part of it; Gaura is Krishna Himself with the bhava and lustre of Radha.
 10. Lochana Dasa sets side by side Radha (source of the gopis) and Rukmini (source of the queens of Dvaraka). The Gaudiya Vaishnavas, following the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Adi 4.75–81), teach that Radha is the original hladini-shakti and the source of all the Lord's beloveds: the Lakshmis of Vaikuntha, the queens of Dvaraka and the gopis.
 11. The subject of the stanza is not named; probably the description of Satyabhama as the embodiment of music continues — or the deity of music is introduced as another dweller of Goloka.
 12. Perhaps "Ranga" ("Play") is the name of the city; it may also be understood as "the city full of rasa and play".
 13. Maya here is His energy, not an illusion that rules Him; the "reflections" (chhaya) are His expansions. The expression is Lochana Dasa's own; in Gaudiya theology all avatars are portions and parts (amsha, kala) of Krishna (Bhag. 1.3.28). In the 1983 edition the second half of the stanza reads: "...hundreds of avatars — He alone is the merciful King".
 14. This stanza (like the previous one) differs in the 1983 edition: "I, Vishnu, am His reflection (chhaya), Lakshmi the reflection of [His] wealth, this Vaikuntha the reflection of [His] Vaikuntha"; we follow A ("portion"). The thought agrees with Gaudiya teaching: Narayana of Vaikuntha is a vilasa expansion of Krishna, and Vaikuntha an expansion of Goloka (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 5). Line 3 is obscure; the 1983 edition has "all, established in bhakti, serve...".
 15. Lines 3–4 are obscure; perhaps the "three qualities of shakti" are the Lord's three energies: hladini, sandhini and samvit (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 4.62). In the 1983 edition line 3 differs: "prakriti on the right and left, named Lalita and Vishakha".
 16. Kama (Madana) is the god of love. Here not the worldly Cupid is meant: the spiritual beauty of Goloka is described, where, in the words of the Gaudiya scriptures, Krishna (and Gaura) is aprakrita-Madana, the transcendental Cupid who enchants Cupid himself.
 17. The bathing (abhisheka) of Gaura in Goloka. Among those taking part are queens of Dvaraka (Rukmini, Satyabhama, Nagnajiti, Mitravinda, Lakshmana-Sulakshana, Bhadra), Radhika and companions from Vraja (Chandramukhi, Madhupriya), and Tilottama; Lochana Dasa unites the consorts of Dvaraka and Vraja in one vision.
 18. Which four-syllable mantra is meant the author does not say.

Sutra-khanda, part 8 (portion 08)

Narada glorifies Gaura, who sends him to Balarama in Shvetadvipa; the Lord reveals to His associates why He will be born on earth; Narada with Balarama, who on hearing the command bids His own to take birth on earth; the descent of the associates — Advaita, Nityananda, Sita and many others; praise of Narahari Sarakara, Raghunandana and Mukunda Dasa; the author's humility; the end of the Sutra-khanda

Word for word: muni bole mahaprabhu — the sage says: Mahaprabhu; hena aparupa kabhu — such a wonder ever; na dekhila na shunila ami — I have not seen nor heard; janama saphala aji — today my life bore fruit; dekhila amiya-raji — I have seen a treasury of nectar; dhani dhani apanake mani — I count myself blessed 531. The sage says: "Mahaprabhu, such a wonder I have never seen nor heard of.

Today my life has borne fruit — I have seen a treasury of nectar, and I count myself blessed, blessed.

Word for word: brahmadi na jane tattva — Brahma and the rest do not know the truth; avatara avidita — the descent is unknown; achintya baliya bali toma — I call You inconceivable; jyotirmaya bole keho — some call [You] effulgence; mukhe na nirvache seho — even they cannot express in words; kahibare nahika upama — there is no comparison to tell

532. Brahma and the others do not know the truth; Your coming is unknown [to them];
I call You inconceivable.

Some call [You] effulgence — but even they cannot express [You] in words:
there is no comparison to tell it.

Word for word: keha bale paratpara — some say: higher than the highest; pradhana purusha-vara — the chief, best Purusha; vichare na kare nirupana — by reasoning do not determine; sarvamaya tora shakti — Your shakti is in all; dekhiya na paya mukti — seeing, they do not attain liberation; agochara tora acharana — Your deeds are beyond reach

533. Some say, 'Higher than the highest, the chief, the best Purusha' — but by reasoning they cannot determine [You].
Seeing that Your shakti is in all, they do not attain liberation;
Your deeds are beyond reach.

Word for word: sahasra-phana ananta — thousand-hooded Ananta; na pana gunera anta — not finding the end of virtues; dvijihva dharila saba mukhe — took two tongues in every mouth; na pana gunera ora — not finding the limit of virtues; aichhana thakura gaura — such a Lord, Gaura; kapale dekhilama toke — by fortune I have seen You

534. Thousand-headed Ananta, finding no end to [Your] virtues, has taken two tongues in every mouth;
finding no limit to Your virtues — such a Lord are You, Gaura — by good fortune I have seen You!

537. Why there is contradiction among them they do not consider, and again they say, 'All is one, non-dual'.
Not understanding Your heart, each holding to his side, they perform their rites —
Your word is unknown to all.

eka aṁśe sebā kare, āra aṁśe mahī dhare, hena prabhu balarāma mora | trijagata-adhirāja, dekhiba kṣīroda-māḥa, prabhu-ājñā kariba gocara || 579 ||

Word for word: eka amshe seva kare — with one portion He serves; ara amshe mahi dhare — with another holds the earth; hena prabhu balarama mora — such is my Lord Balarama; trijagata-adhiraja — the supreme King of the three worlds; dekhiba kshiroda-majha — I shall see amid the Ocean of Milk; prabhu-ajna kariba gochara — I shall convey the Lord's command

579. With one portion He serves, with another portion He holds the earth — such is my Lord Balarama.
The supreme King of the three worlds I shall see amid the Ocean of Milk and convey to Him the Lord's command."

*ei dui prabhu mātra, yena rājā mahāpātra, pṛthibī pālaye eka-yukti |
āra yata rudrabamśa, seho yāra aṁśāṁśa, abatāra karibena kṣiti || 580 ||*

Word for word: ei dui prabhu matra — these two Lords; yena raja mahapatra — like a king and chief minister; prithivi palaye eka-yukti — protect the earth with one counsel; ara yata rudra-vamsha — and all others of the Rudras' line; seho yara amshamsha — they too, portions of His portions; avatara karibena kshiti — will descend to earth

580. These two Lords are like a king and his chief minister:
with one counsel they protect the earth; and all the others of the Rudras' line — they too, portions of His portions — will descend to earth.

purī prabeśila mahānande |
dekhi trijagata-nātha, saba-pāriṣada sātha,
aparūpa balarāmacānde || 581 ||*

Word for word: hena manah-katha-rase — in the rasa of these thoughts; muni bhela parabashe — the sage was beside himself; puri praveshila mahanande — entered the city in great bliss; dekhi trijagata-natha — saw the Lord of the three worlds; saba-parishada satha — with all associates; aparupa balarama-chande — the wondrous moon-like Balarama

581. Absorbed in the rasa of these thoughts, the sage, beside himself, entered the city in great bliss and beheld the Lord of the three worlds with all His associates — the wondrous moon-like Balarama.

amṛta-madhura lahu hāse |
rātā-utapala āṁkhi, ḍhulu ḍhulu hena dekhi, ādhabāṇī mukhete nikaṣe || 582 ||*

Word for word: amrita-parvata yena — like a mountain of nectar; basi shveta-simhasana — sitting on a white throne; amrita-madhura lahu hase — smiles softly, sweet as nectar; rata-utapala ankhi — eyes like red lotuses; dhulu dhulu hena dekhi — seen drooping languidly; adha-vani mukhete nikashe — half-words come from the lips

582. Like a mountain of nectar He sits on a white throne,⁶ smiling softly, sweet as nectar;
His eyes red lotuses, seen drooping languidly, half-words come from His lips.

ādha udāsa dui āṁkhi |
maṇi mukutā prabāla, dibya ratnamaya hāra,
aṅga alaṅkāre nāhi lakhi || 583 ||*

Word for word: taraka bhramara adha — the bee-like pupils half; achchhadila tara satha — covered [by the lids]; adha udasa dui ankhi — both eyes half drowsy; mani mukuta pravaḷa — gems, pearls, coral; divya ratnamaya hara — divine jewelled necklaces; anga alankare nahi lakhi — the limbs not seen for ornaments

583. The pupils, like bees, are half covered [by the lids], both eyes half drowsy;
gems, pearls, coral, divine necklaces of jewels —
the limbs cannot be seen for the ornaments.

ḍāhine rebatī-kara dhare | rebatī tāmbula kare, dei prabhu-adhare, anurāge bayāna nehāre || 584 ||*

584. Leaning idly on a pillow, his left hand under his head, with his right he holds Revati's hand;
Revati, betel in hand, puts it to his lips and gazes lovingly at his face.

kaṅkaṇa-kiṅkiṇī-dhbani śuni |
keho bīṇā beṇu bāya, keho bā saṅgīta gāya, tāla sañce parama-ramaṇī || 585 ||*

Word for word: anuchari chari-pashe — maidservants on every side; chamara dhulaya hase — smiling, wave chamaras; kankana-kinkini-dhvani shuni — the tinkling of bracelets and girdle-bells is heard; keho vina venu vaya — some play the vina and flute; keho va sangita gaya — some sing; tala sanche parama-ramani — the loveliest women keep the beat

585. Maidservants on every side, smiling, wave chamaras; the tinkling of bracelets and girdle-bells is heard;
some play the vina and the flute, some sing,
the loveliest women keep the beat.

yāra yei nija niyojita |
echana samaye muni, karila bīṇāra dhwani, ṭhākura dekhila ācambita || 586 ||*

Word for word: tahara antare yata — beyond them all; anugata shata shata — hundreds of followers; yara yei nija niyojita — each at his own appointed task; aichhana samaye muni — at that moment the sage; karila vinara dhvani — sounded his vina; thakura dekhila achambita — the Lord suddenly saw 586. Beyond them are hundreds and hundreds of followers, each at his appointed service.

At that moment the sage sounded his vina, and the Lord suddenly saw him.

Word for word: vihvāla naradamuni — overwhelmed, Narada Muni; talamala pade bhumi — staggering, falls to the ground; thakura tuliya nila kole — the Lord lifted him onto His lap; chiradina-anurage — with long-held love; dekhila se mahabhage — looked on that great fortunate one; tushila shitala maha bole — comforted him with cool, great words

587. Overwhelmed, Narada Muni staggers and falls to the ground;
the Lord lifted him and took him on His lap, and, with long-held love, looked on that great fortunate one and comforted him with cool, great words.

rahasya kahibe hena bāsi |
kahanā kemana kāja, śunite hṛdaya-mājha, ānanda uṭhaye rāśi rāśi || 588 ||*

Word for word: hasi sambhashane panhu — greeting with a smile, the Lord; kaha kotha haite tuhu — say where you are from; rahasya kahibe hena basi — I feel you will tell a secret; kahana kemana kaja — tell, what is the task; shunite hridaya-majha — as I listen, within the heart; ananda uthaye rashi rashi — bliss rises in heaps

588. Greeting him with a smile, the Lord says: "Where have you come from?"

I feel you will tell [Me] a secret.

Tell Me, what is the task? As I listen, within My heart bliss rises beyond counting."

tumi prabhu sarba-antaryāmī |

ye kichu kahite jāni, sei kathā anumāni,

ye juyāya kara prabhu tumi || 589 ||

Word for word: sambhrame kahaye muni — respectfully the sage says; ki kahite jani ami — what can I know how to say; tumi prabhu sarva-antaryami — You, Lord, are the Indweller of all; ye kichhu kahite jani — whatever I can say; sei katha anumani — that I say as I understand; ye juyaya kara prabhu tumi — do what is fitting, Lord

589. Respectfully the sage says: "What can I know how to say?"

You, Lord, are the Indweller of all.

What I can say, I shall say as I understand;

do what is fitting, Lord.

Adi-khanda, part 1 (portion 09)

The beginning of the Adi-khanda: the Lord enters Shachi's womb; Advaita Acharya worships Shachi's womb; the praises of the gods; Gaura's appearance on the full moon of Phalguna during an eclipse; the infant's form and marks; the rapture of the people of Nadia; the name Nimai, the festivals of the eighth and ninth days; the beginning of the Balya-lila

Janma-lila (The Birth)

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. In this khanda first of all the appearance on earth of the transcendental Sri Gaurahari is described. He who is the original cause of all causes, Parabrahman Narayana, appeared in the womb of Shachi. As her womb grew day by day, so day by day the lustre of her body increased. Seeing the wondrous lustre of her body, all were amazed and concluded: "Surely some great personage has appeared in Shachi's womb." When six months were complete, one day Advaita Acharya Prabhu came to the house of Shachi and Jagannatha, bowed to Shachi's womb and circumambulated it; the reason for this neither Shachi nor Jagannatha could then understand. On some days Shachi-devi saw Brahma, Shiva and the other gods come before her womb, offer praise and pray to the Lord, who gives prema even to chandalas, for the love never given before; and in bliss her heart was filled with compassion for all beings. Gradually ten months were completed. Then, on the full moon of Phalguna, on the pretext of an eclipse, accompanied by the sankirtana of Hari's name, Bhagavan Gaurachandra descended to earth from the ocean of Shachi's womb; the ten directions were filled with bliss, and gods and goddesses, men and women, all longing to see the moon-like face of Shachi's son, came to Shachi's house; at that time her house became Vaikuntha. Jagannatha Mishra and the men and women of Nadia (who had come to see) were all amazed to see on the lotus feet of the child — with a lion's neck, an elephant's shoulders and a broad chest — the marks of the flag, the thunderbolt and the goad, and various superhuman marks on His other limbs; all concluded that this child was surely not human. Then are described the distribution of the eight kinds of pulses on the eighth day, the festival on the ninth, and the one-pointed love of the neighbours, men and women, for [Shachi's] son.

Thus ends the description of the Janma-lila.

Balya-lila (The Childhood Pastimes)

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. When six months had passed, Gaurasundara's first feeding with rice and naming were performed according to rule; since with His appearance the whole world was filled with bliss, the wise named Him Vishvambhara. Gradually Vishvambhara, holding His father's finger, began to walk about the courtyard. Before the lustre of Gaurasundara's body, adorned with armlets, bracelets, a pearl necklace and other ornaments, the radiance of millions of moons grows dim. [The moon] can dispel only outer darkness, not inner darkness, but the moon of Gaura dispels darkness both outer and inner. Shachi-devi used to lull her son to sleep singing "Come, come, O moon, come" and other songs; at times she saw various gods and goddesses come and praise her son, and was greatly amazed. At times, seeing Gaurahari dance wildly with the gods, crying "Radha-Govinda", she fell senseless. At times she heard the sound of ankle-bells on His bare feet and was astonished; at times, fearing some coming misfortune, she became very anxious; and the next moment, seeing her son's face, she forgot everything and kissed His face again and again. When some time had passed in this way, Gaurasundara began to play outside the house with His playmates. When Shachi-devi tried to catch Gaurasundara, He would run away; and at times, growing angry, He would come home and spoil everything in the house. At times He explained to His mother the worthlessness of worldly notions of pure and impure and instructed her in the transcendental knowledge that Krishna is the Lord of all. Then are described: how He sat in a pit full of pots of leftover food and instructed His mother; how He struck His mother and, seeing her fall senseless, brought a coconut; various childish pranks; His play with a puppy; how Gaurahari, angry with His mother for letting the puppy go, wept; how the puppy, in a divine body, singing of Hari, went to Vaikuntha; how Brahma and others, seeing the puppy's good fortune, praised Gaura; how Gaurahari wept when Shachi-devi prepared an offering for the worship of Shashthi, and under the guise of words revealed to Shachi that He is the Lord of all.

102. His nose more charming than a parrot's beak, both cheeks radiant, His form beautiful.

1. A has "upon living beings"; the 1983 edition "upon me".

2. That is, not gross-bodied. The Gaudiya Vaishnavas stress that the Lord's birth is not a worldly conception: the eternal Lord, full of knowledge and bliss, first enters the heart of the father, then of the mother, and reveals Himself, as Krishna does in the Bhagavata (10.2.16–18); cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita (Adi 13.83–88).

3. An elder brahmana bowing to a young woman and circumambulating her goes against custom; but Advaita is worshipping the Lord in her womb.

4. A play on words in the praise: "Advaita" ("non-dual") and "Nityananda" ("eternal bliss") are both epithets of the Lord and names of His closest associates.

5. "Gadadhara" ("holder of the mace") is a name of Vishnu; perhaps there is also an allusion to Gadadhara Pandita, Gaura's inseparable companion.

6. Cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita (Adi 13.89–98): the Lord appeared on the full moon of Phalguna during a lunar eclipse, when everyone, according to custom, was chanting the names of Hari.

7. So after Bhaktisiddhanta's summary ("her house became Vaikuntha"); in A the line is corrupt; the 1983 edition has "in Shachi's womb the riches of the great Vaikuntha".

8. Marks on the feet and body of a mahapurusha. The rendering of the last mark ("the elephant's kumbha", i.e. the frontal globe on an elephant's head) is tentative.

9. Here and further on (vv. 59, 75, 90) Lochana Dasa describes the attraction of the women of Nadia to Gaura in the spirit of his nagari-bhava, in which Gaura is the nagara, the beloved of the townswomen. The Gaudiya tradition, following Vrindavana Dasa and Krishnadasa Kaviraja, does not accept worship of Gaura in such a bhava; Bhaktisiddhanta counts the "Gaura-nagari" among the deviant schools. We translate the text as it stands.

10. In A this stanza is given in brackets together with the disha and is unnumbered; in the 1983 edition it is the first stanza of the song.

11. Sindura is red powder, the mark of a married woman; pithali is rice paste for auspicious designs; they are distributed to women at a birth festival.

12. The name comes from nim, the bitter neem tree: by custom a child is given a "bitter" name to avert misfortune and the evil eye. According to the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Adi 13.118), the name Nimai was given by Sita Thakurani to protect Him from witches.

13. Ashtakalai — the distribution to children of eight kinds of pulses and grains on the eighth day after birth; on the ninth night, a festival with music.

Adi-khanda, part 2 (portion 10)

Balya-lila (continued): the first rice-feeding and the name Vishvambhara; the first steps; Shachi's lullaby; at night the gods enthrone the child, and He dances with them singing of Radha and Krishna; the sound of ankle-bells on bare feet; pranks and broken pots; a rite for the boy's welfare; the Lord sits among discarded pots and teaches His mother about pure and impure

207. Looking into each other's faces, both burst out laughing;
happily this Lochana Dasa sings of Gora's virtues.

1. Vishvambhara — "He who sustains (supports) the universe". In Bhaktisiddhanta's summary the name is given by the wise, because with the Lord's appearance the whole world was filled with bliss; in Murari Gupta (1.06.3) the father gives the name.
 2. The ten moons on the ground are His toenails; in the next couplet, His fingernails.
 3. Cf. Bhaktisiddhanta's summary: the moon dispels only outer darkness, but the moon of Gaura dispels both outer and inner darkness.
 4. Hau — a bogey with which children are frightened in Bengal.
 5. "Jagannatha" — "Lord of the universe"; it is both an epithet of the Lord and the name of His father.
 6. So in the 1983 and 1903 editions (nachaha amare); the OCR of Bhaktisiddhanta's edition can also be read na chaha amare — "do not look at Me (do not worship Me)". The following lines (the gods sing, the Lord dances) support the first reading.
 7. The Four-faced one is Brahma, the Five-faced one Shiva.
 8. According to the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Adi 13.73), before Vishvarupa eight daughters were born to Shachi one after another and died; Lochana Dasa speaks of seven.
 9. The eyes are wagtails (khanjana), the face the moon, the tears pearls.
 10. Svastyayana — a rite to avert misfortune and invoke well-being.
 11. Cf. Bhaktisiddhanta's summary: the Lord explained to His mother the worthlessness of worldly notions of pure and impure and instructed her in the transcendental knowledge that Krishna is the Lord of all. The point of v. 197 is not that only matter exists: distinctions of pure and impure concern combinations of the same material elements, while true dharma is service to Krishna's feet. Cf. Murari Gupta (1.06.13–17).
 12. Shachi guesses that her son is the Yajna-purusha Himself, the Lord of all sacrifices, so that a rite to appease a "possessing god" is out of place here.
 13. Vv. 206+1 – 206+2 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition has them in brackets — the way that editor marks lines found in only some manuscripts.
 14. Upendra is Lord Vamana, the younger brother of Indra (both are sons of Aditi); so here Vishvarupa is the elder brother and Vishvambhara the younger.

Adi-khanda, part 3 (portion 11)

Balya-lila (continued): Nimai pretends not to hear His mother; He sits again on the discarded pots, throws a brick at His mother and brings two coconuts; Shachi for a moment realizes that her son is Narayana, but forgets it again in love for her son and recites protective names over Him; Nimai cries for the moon from the sky; His play with a puppy

Raga shri; disha: "O-ki ho re, Gauranga, jaya, jaya!" (murchha). "O-ki na, my prema for Gauranga — nectar and bliss! Ki na, my Gauranga, ki are, jaya, jaya!"

322. In such pastimes the Lord plays — the gods watch and are swept away in bliss;
 cats and dogs the Lord touches — Lochana Dasa marvels.

1. So in Bhaktisiddhanta's edition (kapata murchchha — "a feigned, seeming swoon"); the 1983 and 1903 editions have simply "she fainted". In Murari Gupta (1.06.22) Shachi loses consciousness from the blow. The word "seeming" indicates that this is no worldly misfortune but play: the Lord's mother is His eternal associate, and her swoon is part of the lila.

2. The words "untainted, pure, without form" (nirlepa, niranjana, nirakara) are taken from the language of the Upanishads. The Gaudiya Vaishnavas, following the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 6, the conversation with Sarvabhauma), understand such epithets as denying only material qualities and a material form: the Lord has an eternal form full of being, knowledge and bliss — the very form Shachi sees before her (vv. 245–246).

3. Cf. the Bhagavata (10.8.43): having seen the universe in Krishna's mouth, Yashoda by the Lord's will again forgot His majesty and saw in Him only her son. This is the working of yogamaya, which nourishes vatsalya-rasa, not worldly ignorance.

4. A protective prayer assigning names of Vishnu to each limb — as the gopis protected the infant Krishna after the Putana episode (Bhagavata 10.6.21–29). Giridhara — "the lifter of the hill" (Krishna); Trivikrama — Vamana; Dharadhara — "the upholder of the earth" (Varaha or Shesha).

5. Hau — a bogey used to frighten children (cf. en/10, v. 121).

6. In A an unclear word follows (perhaps an indication of metre).

7. "King of the twice-born" (dvijaraja) — both the best of brahmanas and the moon.

Adi-khanda, part 4 (portion 12)

Balya-lila (continued): by Gaura's touch the puppy gains divine knowledge and departs for Goloka in a celestial chariot, while the gods praise Gaura's mercy; Nimai eats the offering Shachi has prepared for the goddess Shashthi and teaches her that worship of Achyuta is the worship of all the gods; Nimai mimics Murari Gupta expounding yoga and instructs him in bhakti

pr̥thibīte parakāśa | bālakera saṅge, khele nānā raṅge,
kahaye locanadāsa || 380 ||*

Word for word: ki kahiba ara — what more shall I say; sarvadeva-sara — the essence of all the gods; prithivite parakasha — manifest on earth; balakera sange — with the boys; khele nana range — plays in many ways; kahaye lochanadasa — says Lochana Dasa

380. What more shall I say? The essence of all the gods has appeared on earth and plays with the boys in many ways — says Lochana Dasa.

dhūlāya khelāya rājapathe |
e dhūli-dhūsara, hemagiri-kalebara, anugata bayasya-sahite || 381 ||*

Word for word: tabe ara kathodine — then some days later; sei shachinandane — that son of Shachi; dhulaya khelaya rajapathe — plays in the dust on the highway; e dhuli-dhusara — grey with dust; hemagiri-kalevara — His body a golden mountain; anugata vayasya-sahite — with devoted companions

381. And some days later that son of Shachi plays in the dust on the highway;
His body a golden mountain, grey with dust, with Him His devoted companions.

samāna se bayāḥkrama, sabhe meli ekamarma,
gharmabindu khelāya āyāsa || 382 ||*

Word for word: shishu shishu dhula kheli — children playing with dust; kshane haya galagali — now and then squabble; dhula-rane — in the dust-battle; anga digambasa — bodies bare; samana se vayahkrama — all of one age; sabhe meli eka-marma — all of one mind; gharna-bindu khelaya ayasa — sweat-drops from the effort of play

382. The children play with dust, now and then they squabble, in the dust-battle their bodies are bare;
all of one age, all of one mind, drops of sweat from the effort of play.

Word for word: sabhe meli khela khele — while all were playing together; gupta-beja henakale — then Gupta the vaidya; sei pathe aila achambita — suddenly came that way; tara yata nijajana — all his own people; sange kare gamana — go with him; jnanapatha-vichare pandita — a scholar in discussing the path of knowledge

383. While they were all playing together, Gupta the vaidya⁹ suddenly came along that road;
all his own people went with him, and he, a scholar, was discoursing on the path of knowledge.

Word for word: tara sane anumane — reasoning with them; yogashastra vakhane — expounds the yoga-shastra; kara shira kariya chalana — moving hands and head; dekhi vishvambhara raya — seeing, Vishvambhara Raya; tara pachhe pachhe dhaya — runs right behind him; anusari gamana vachana — imitating his gait and speech

384. Reasoning with them, he expounds the yoga-shastra, shaking his head and waving his hands;
seeing this, Vishvambhara Raya runs right behind him, imitating his gait and speech.

Word for word: dekhi vaidya murari — seeing, Murari the vaidya; katakshe tileka heri — glancing sidelong for a moment; punah kare yogera vakhana — again expounds yoga; sei-mate vishvambhara — just so Vishvambhara; yogera vakhana kare — expounds yoga; tena nade hatha mukhakhana — just so moves His hands and face

385. Murari the vaidya, glancing [at Him] for a moment, again expounds yoga;
just so Vishvambhara expounds yoga,
just so He moves His hands and head.

Word for word: ei-mate beri beri — thus again and again; parihase gaurahari — Gaurahari mimics; shishugana samhati kariya — together with the children; dekhiya murari vaidya — seeing, Murari the vaidya; nija acharane gadya — [his] own manners mimicked; kuvachana kahila rushiya — angrily spoke rude words

386. So again and again Gaurahari mimics him together with the children;
Murari the vaidya, seeing his own manners mimicked, grew angry and spoke rude words:

এছারে কে বলে ভাল, দেখিল ত ছাওয়াল,

Word for word: echhare ke bale bhala — who calls this one good; dekhila ta chhaoyala — I've seen the boy; mishra-purandara-suta ei — this is Mishra Purandara's son; sarvatra shuniye katha — everywhere I hear talk; ihara se gunagatha — the songs of his virtues; bhala nama ihara nimai — a fine name he has, Nimai

387. "Who would call this one good? I've seen the boy — this is Mishra Purandara's son; everywhere I hear talk and songs of his virtues —
a fine name he has: Nimai!"¹⁰

Word for word: aichhana shuniya vani — hearing such words; rushila se gauramani — the jewel Gaura grew angry; anugata-kripa karane — for the sake of mercy to His devotee; bhrukuti badana kari — frowning; bole vak-chaturi — speaks teasingly (lit. "with cleverness of speech"); janaiba bhojanera kshane — I'll let you know at mealtime

388. Hearing such words, the jewel Gaura grew angry — for the sake of mercy to His devotee;
frowning, He says teasingly:
"You'll find out at mealtime!"¹¹

Word for word: shuni vishvambhara-vani — hearing Vishvambhara's words; murari se mane guni — Murari pondered; ghara gela vismita-hiyay — went home with a wondering heart; griha-karya-vyaprite — busy with household tasks; pasarila ana-chite — forgot, his mind elsewhere; haila tabe bhojana-samaya — then came mealtime

389. Hearing Vishvambhara's words, Murari pondered and went home with a wondering heart; busy with household affairs, his mind turned elsewhere and he forgot, and then it was time to eat.

Word for word: etha vishvambhara hari — meanwhile Vishvambhara Hari; angera subesha kari — dressing finely; katite tanina pindhe dhada — wraps the dhoti tightly round His waist; shire shobhe tina jhunti — three tufts adorn His head; galaye se rasakanti — rasakanti beads on His neck; kantha-lagna mukuta dubeda — a double pearl string at the throat

390. Meanwhile Vishvambhara Hari dressed Himself finely:
He wrapped His dhoti tightly round His waist, three tufts adorn His head, rasakanti beads hang on His neck,
a double string of pearls at His throat.

Word for word: murari guptera ghare — in Murari Gupta's house; gela nija abhyantare — went into the inner rooms; bhojana karichhe vaidyaraja — where the king of vaidyas was eating; megha-gambhira-nade — in a voice deep as thunder; nija-mana-parasade — by His own grace; murari baliya dila daka — called "Murari!"

392. He entered Murari Gupta's house, into the inner rooms, where the best of vaidyas was eating his meal, and in a voice deep as thunder, by His own grace,
He called: "Murari!"

Word for word: svara shuni songarila — hearing the voice, he remembered; vishvambhara ye balila — what Vishvambhara had said; gupta-beja chamakita chita — Gupta the vaidya was startled; tabe sei gaurahari — then Gaurahari; ki kara ki kara bali — saying "what are you doing, what are you doing"; seikhane haila upanita — came right up there

393. Hearing the voice, Gupta the vaidya remembered what Vishvambhara had said, and was startled;
and Gaurahari, saying "What are you doing, what are you doing?", came right up to the spot.

Word for word: tarasta na hao tumi — don't be alarmed; eikhane achhi ami — I am here; bhojana karaha — go on eating; vani baila — He said; madhya-bhojana-bela — in the middle of the meal; dhire dhire niyade gela — slowly came close; thala bhari muta mutila — urinated, filling the plate

394. "Don't be alarmed: I am here —

go on eating," He said;
and in the middle of the meal, approaching very slowly,
He filled his plate with urine.

Word for word: ki ki bali — crying "what, what"; chhi chhi kari — saying "shame, shame"; uthila se murari — Murari jumped up; karatali diya — clapping His hands; bole gora — Gora says; kara shira nadiya — moving hands and head; bhaktipatha chhadiya — having left the path of bhakti; yoga bale ei abhipari — this trickster speaks of yoga

395. "What's this, what?! Shame, shame!" — up jumped Murari; and Gora, clapping His hands, says:

this trickster expounds yoga!

Word for word: jnana-karma upekhiya — disregarding knowledge and ritual; krishna bhaja mana diya — worship Krishna wholeheartedly; rasika vidagdha chidananda — the relisher of rasa, expert, consciousness and bliss; bhautike yahara drishti — one whose sight is on the material; e nahe bhajana-pushti — has no nourishment of bhajana; nahi bujha — you don't understand; buddhi ati manda — intelligence very dull

396. Disregarding knowledge and ritual, worship Krishna wholeheartedly — the relisher of rasa, the expert, full of consciousness and bliss.

One whose sight is fixed on the material finds no nourishment for bhajana;
you do not understand — your intelligence is very dull.

Word for word: parama dayalu hari — Hari is supremely merciful; tenho sarva-shakti-dhari — He holds all energies; jivete sambhabe e ki katha — is such a thing possible for a jiva; tenho brahma sanatana — He is the eternal Brahman; gopira jivana-dhana — the treasure of the gopis' life; na bhajiya — not worshipping [Him]; kene deha vyatha — why cause pain

397. Hari is supremely merciful, He holds all energies; is such a thing possible for a jiva?¹²
He is the eternal Brahman, the treasure of the gopis' life;
why, not worshipping Him, do you cause [yourself] pain?"

Word for word: iha bali goramani — saying this, the jewel Gora; kati gela nahi jani — went none knows where; murari dekhite nahi paya — Murari cannot see; mane mane anumana — reflects within; e kabhu nahe ana — this is surely no other; satya panhu shachira tanaya — truly Shachi's son is the Lord

398. Saying this, the jewel Gaura vanished — none knows where;
Murari cannot see Him and reflects within himself: "This is surely no one else — truly, the son of Shachi is the Lord."

Word for word: eta anumana kari — having reflected thus; tabe sei murari — then Murari; aste vyaste chalila satvara — hastily set out in agitation; chalite na pare pathe — cannot walk on the road; ati anandita chite — with a heart full of joy; gela yatha mishra purandara — went to where Mishra Purandara was

399. Having reflected thus, Murari set out at once, in haste and agitation;

from great joy he can hardly walk on the road, [yet] he came to where Mishra Purandara was.

1. In the 1903 edition the whole account of the puppy's deliverance (vv. 324–357) is enclosed in brackets — this editor's way of marking lines found not in all manuscripts. In Bhaktisiddhanta's summary the puppy "in a divine body, singing of Hari, went to Vaikuntha"; the text says Goloka ("becoming a dweller of Krishna's realm"; the 1983 edition: "of Vishnu's realm"). Cf. the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Antya 1.16–33): Shivananda Sena's dog, having received the remnants of Mahaprabhu's meal and chanting "Krishna", attained Vaikuntha.
 2. In Bhaktisiddhanta's edition the numbering jumps here from 330 to 340; we keep the edition's numbers.
 3. That is, even Krishna in His earlier pastimes did not bestow mercy so freely. Cf. the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 19.53): Gaura is "the most magnanimous", the giver of prema for Krishna.
 4. Shashthi — the goddess who protects children; women honour her with fasting and offerings under a banyan tree for the welfare of their children.
 5. This is not an assertion of impersonal oneness: all that exists is the energy of the Lord and does not exist apart from Him, while He remains the personal Lord. Cf. the Bhagavata (2.9.33): "Before creation I alone existed...", and Mahaprabhu's teaching of inconceivable oneness and difference (achintya-bhedabheda). This is the sense the following shloka brings out.
 6. In the edition the shloka is followed by Bhaktisiddhanta's anvaya and translation (the OCR is almost illegible); the translation runs: "As watering the root of a tree satisfies its trunk, branches, twigs and so on, and as food offered to the prana satisfies all the senses, so by worshipping Achyuta alone all the gods are worshipped." In the 1903 edition the shloka is given in square brackets as an editorial insertion.
 7. A blade of grass between the teeth is a sign of utmost humility before those whose favour is asked.
 8. In A the raga line is corrupt; "varadi" follows the 1983 edition.
 9. Murari Gupta, a vaidya (physician) by caste, later one of Mahaprabhu's closest associates and author of the Sanskrit biography Sri Krishna-chaitanya-charitamrita. Here he is still devoted to yoga and the path of knowledge.
 10. A gibe: "Nimai" comes from the bitter neem tree (see en/09, note 12).
 11. Lochana Dasa stresses that the Lord's "anger" is mercy: He breaks Murari's attachment to dry yoga and knowledge so as to turn him to bhakti.
 12. That is, the perfections of which yoga speaks are attributes of the Lord; the jiva cannot acquire them by its own efforts — its path is service to Him.

Adi-khanda, part 5 (portion 13)

Balya-lila (conclusion): Murari Gupta prostrates himself before the child Nimai, reveals to His parents that their son is Bhagavan, and tells Advaita Acharya about Him; Nimai and the boys hold a kirtana, and passing pandits join them; Murari tells Damodara Pandita of Vishvarupa's sannyasa; the grief of Shachi and Jagannatha; Vishvambhara promises to take care of His parents

Word for word: etha — here; shachi-jagannatha meli — Shachi and Jagannatha together; putrera dulala kari — fondling the son; tumi mora sarabasa dhana — You are my whole wealth; yekhane sekhane yai — wherever I go; yatha ye ba duhkha pai — whatever sorrow I meet anywhere; dekhi — seeing; pasariye — I forget; chandavadana — the moonlike face

400. Here, meanwhile, Shachi and Jagannatha together are fondling their son: "You are my whole wealth!
Wherever I go, whatever sorrow I meet,
I look at Your moonlike face, and all is forgotten."

Word for word: iha bali — saying this; donhe meli — both together; dui gale chumba dei — kiss on both cheeks; kole karibare tanatani — vie to take on the lap; henakale — at that time; murari — Murari; seikhane barabari — straight to that place; anande — from joy; na nihsaraye vani — no word comes out

401. Saying this, both kiss Him on both cheeks and vie with each other to take Him on their lap.
At that very moment Murari came straight there — from joy he cannot utter a word.

401a. Seeing him, Shachi and Jagannatha hastily rose and went to greet the vaidya;
but he said nothing to anyone and forgot everything else, gazing at Gorachand's face.¹

Word for word: pulakita saba ga — the whole body thrills; apada-mastaka ya — from foot to head; dhara vahe nayanera jale — streams of tears flow from the eyes; aruna-barana ankhi — reddened eyes; e se premara sakshi — these are the witnesses of prema; gadagada — choked; adha-adha bole — speaks half-words

393a. His whole body thrills with ecstasy from head to foot; streams of tears flow from his eyes;
his reddened eyes — these are the witnesses of prema;
in a faltering voice he babbles half-words.

দেখিয়া সে বিশ্বম্ভর, মায়ের কোল-ভিতর, প্রবেশিল যেনক অজান ॥ ৩৯৪ ॥

*thira dāmṛāite nāre, paṛiyā caraṇatale, punaḥ punaḥ kare paraṇāma |
dekhiyā se biśbambhara, māyera kola-bhitara, prabeśila yenaka ajāna || 394 ||*

Word for word: thira danraite nare — cannot stand steady; padia charanatale — falling at the feet; punah punah kare paranama — bows again and again; dekhiya se vishvambhara — seeing this,

Vishvambhara; mayera kola-bhitara pravesbila — went into His mother's lap; yenaka ajana — as if unknowing

394a. Unable to stand steady, he falls at His feet and bows down again and again;
seeing this, Vishvambhara crept into His mother's lap, as if He understood nothing.

শচী-জগন্নাথ বোলে, অহহ কি কৈলে কৈলে, তোরে দেখি দেবতাসমান ।
আশীর্বাদযোগ্য তোরি, এ অতি বালক মোরি, কি করিলে বড় অবিধান ॥ ৩৯৫ ॥

*śacī-jagannātha bole, ahaha ki kaile kaile, tore dekhi debatāsamāna | āśīrbādayogya tori, e ati bālaka mori,
ki karile bāra abidhāna || 395 ||*

Word for word: shachi-jagannatha bole — Shachi and Jagannatha say; ahaha ki kaile kaile — ah, what have you done, done; tore dekhi devatasamana — we regard you as equal to a god; ashirvada-yogya tori — fit for your blessing; e ati balaka mori — this very little boy of mine; ki karile bada avidhana — what a great impropriety you have done 395a. Shachi and Jagannatha say: "Ah, what have you done, what have you done!

We regard you as equal to a god.
This very little boy is fit for your blessing — what a great breach of custom you have committed!"²

তোরে বলি শূদ্রমুনি, সর্বলোকে বাখানি, মোর বালকে কি কৈলে অপরাধ ।
মো দিয়া যে হয় হউ, বাটু শিশু-পরমাউ, চিরাউ বলি দেহ আশীর্বাদ ॥ ৩৯৬ ॥

Word for word: ehena shuniya vani — hearing such words; jagannatha shachirani — Jagannatha and Shachi-rani; donhe meli putra kaila kole — both together embraced their son; dekhi vishvambhara-mukha — seeing Vishvambhara's face; pasarila yata duhkha — forgot all sorrows; e kathā lochanadasa bole — so says Lochana Dasa

456. Hearing such words, Jagannatha and Shachi-rani both together embraced their son; looking at Vishvambhara's face, they forgot all their sorrows —
so says Lochana Dasa.

Thus ends the description of the Balya-lila.

1. The numbering of Bhaktisiddhanta's edition goes astray here: after 399 it prints 400, 401, 401 again, then the count returns to 393 and runs 393–403, after which it continues 404, 405... (and so on through the edition). Apparently the compositor was correcting the jump 330 → 340 of portion 12. To keep the edition's numbers, on which all further numbering depends, we retain the printed numbers and distinguish the repeats by a letter: the second "401" is 401a, the repeated series 393–401 is 393a–400a and 401b. The sequence of the couplets (confirmed by the 1983 and 1903 editions) is unchanged.
 2. Murari, an elder and respected man, prostrated himself before a child; by popular belief, an elder's bow to a younger one brings misfortune on the younger and shortens his life. Hence the parents' alarm and their plea that he bless Nimai with long life.
 3. Murari Gupta was a vaidya (physician) by caste; the parents respectfully call him a "shudra-muni", a sage who is not a brahmana.
 4. "Brahman, the Relisher of rasa" is Brahman as the Person who enjoys rasa (cf. Taittiriya Upanishad 2.7: "He, verily, is rasa"), that is, Krishna Himself. Advaita at once discloses to Murari that Nimai is the Lord Himself, but bids him keep it secret.
 5. Murari Gupta and Damodara Pandita are the narrator and his interlocutor in Murari Gupta's Sanskrit biography (Sri Krishna-chaitanya-charitamrita); Lochana Dasa, who relies on that work, adopts its frame. The story of Vishvarupa is in Murari 1.07.1–10.
 6. In the Gaudiya Vaishnava understanding Vishvarupa is Sankarshana (in Murari, "a portion of Baladeva", 1.07.3). On taking sannyasa he received the name Shankararanya, and he left this world at Pandharpur (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Madhya 9.299–300).
 7. At a cremation it is the son who places fire in the mouth of the dead (mukhagni); Shachi says bitterly that by leaving, her son has as good as performed her funeral rite while she lives.
 8. That is, attachment to home and family is worthless; this is not a claim that the world is illusory, but a statement of the vanity of worldly life (samsara) beside renunciation for God's sake.
 9. In A this couplet was lost in the OCR (its number is restored from the neighbouring ones); the text follows the 1903 edition; the 1983 edition ends the stanza: "whose son is Gorachand".

Adi-khanda, part 6 (portion 14)

The beginning of the Pauganda-lila: Vishvambhara begins to learn His letters; the chudakarana rite; a game on the sandy bank of the Ganga following the tracks of birds; Jagannatha Mishra's anger and Shachi's intercession; Jagannatha's dream: a brahmana reveals to him that his son is the Lord Himself

Pauganda-lila (The Boyhood Pastimes)

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. When Gaurasundara, having heard Murari expound the scripture of yoga, began to mock him by imitating his gestures and manners, Murari in anger spoke harsh words to Him. In return, Sriman Mahaprabhu, to show the worthlessness of yoga and what becomes of the yogi, urinated into Murari's plate during his midday meal and instructed him in the supremacy of devotion to Krishna. Then the author, having described how Sriman Mahaprabhu enacted the pastime of sankirtana with the boys of His age, the sannyasa of Vishvarupa as told in a conversation between Murari and Damodara, the grief of Shachi and Jagannatha and so on, proceeds to describe Gaurasundara's Pauganda-lila. In due time the chudakarana and other rites of Gaurahari were duly performed. As prescribed, at an auspicious moment chalk was placed in His hand;¹ He [...] ² Mishra Purandara, learning [in a dream] that [his son] is Bhagavan, was enlightened; but when this mood of his [...], he became absorbed once more in his parental love (vatsalya). At the appointed time Gaurahari's upanayana rite was performed according to rule. Then the teaching on the avatars of the four yugas is set out. At the end of the Dvapara-yuga, Bhagavan Himself, Sri Krishna, the son of the king of Vraja, appears. In the Kali-yuga, assuming the feelings and the lustre of Srimati Radha, He descends in a hidden way in the form of Sri Gaurasundara to preach the dharma of the age — the sankirtana of Hari's name. Intoxicated with prema, He gave prema away, offering it at the door of every living being. During His life as a householder, by forbidding His mother to eat grains on the day of Ekadashi, He taught the living beings of the world. When Jagannatha Mishra fell ill, He instructed about the impermanence of human life and comforted His mother in many ways. When Jagannatha Mishra passed from this world, Shachi-devi mourned her husband; Gaurahari too mourned His father. After that He began His studies [...].³

1. "Hate khadi", "chalk in the hand": the rite of beginning to learn letters (vidyarambha), when the child first traces letters with chalk.

2. Here in the OCR of the summary the lines are overlaid by text from a neighbouring page (vv. 416–418), and part of the sentence is lost; in substance it concerns the games with the boys, the father's anger (vv. 473–500) and Jagannatha's dream (vv. 501–516).

3. The name or word before "began His studies" is unreadable in the OCR.

4. Vv. 459+1 – 459+3 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition does not have them. "Ka, kha, ga, gha" are the first letters of the Bengali alphabet; "with all their signs" is literally "all the phalas", the signs for conjunct consonants.

5. Chudakarana is the samskara of the first cutting of the hair, leaving a lock (shikha) on the crown.

6. V. 472+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition does not have it, but gives in a footnote, from one manuscript, a different signature: "Meditating on the lotus feet of Narahari, Lochana joyfully sings of Chaitanya."

7. That is, announcing this game; the 1983 edition has "thus".

8. In the dream the brahmana speaks in the person of the Lord Himself. In Murari (1.07.14–16) the brahmana speaks to Jagannatha about his son, and Mishra replies that even if his son is Narayana, it is a father's duty to correct Him.

9. So A ("e bada sahaja"). The 1983 edition reads "e bada sahasa": "this is great audacity".

10. Cf. the Bhagavata (10.8.43–45): Yashoda, having seen the universe in Krishna's mouth, is at once covered again by His yogamaya and sees in Him only her son. The parental love (vatsalya) of Shachi and Jagannatha does not admit the thought of the Lord's majesty, and He Himself by His own will hides it for the sake of their love.

Adi-khanda, part 7 (portion 15)

Pauganda-lila (continued): Vishvambhara's upanayana; during the rite He is overcome by the ecstasy of prema, and the astonished pandits reason about the avatars for a special purpose and the yuga-avatars, about Krishna in the Dvapara and Gaura in the Kali, about Radha and the dharma of service, and conclude that Vishvambhara is the Lord Himself

1. Adhivasa is a preparatory rite on the eve of a samskara, with anointing with fragrances and the distribution of auspicious gifts.
 2. The nandimukha-shraddha is an offering to the ancestors performed before a samskara (upanayana, wedding and the like).
 3. V. 530+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition gives its first line in a footnote as a variant of v. 531. On Lochana Dasa's nagari-bhava see en/09, note 9.
 4. At the upanayana the brahmachari student receives a staff and begs alms like a sannyasi; Lochana Dasa sees in this a foreshadowing of the sannyasa the Lord will take in 1510.
 5. Sudarshana Pandita was one of the Lord's teachers in Navadvipa (in Murari, 1.09.1).
 6. Lochana Dasa's division: "karya-avatars" (avatars for a special purpose — slaying asuras and the like; in the Chaitanya-charitamrita the lila-avatars correspond to them) and "yuga-avatars", who establish the dharma of their age in the colour proper to the yuga (cf. Bhagavata 11.5.20–32).
 7. Literally "gopika-lampata", "avid for the gopis". In the Gaudiya Vaishnava understanding this is Krishna's transcendental love for the gopis, His internal energy, which has nothing in common with worldly lust.
 8. Cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita (Adi 3.6–10): Krishna descends once in a day of Brahma, at the end of the Dvapara of the twenty-eighth chatur-yuga of the Vaivasvata manvantara, and in the Kali following it appears as Sri Chaitanya. Verses 573–574 say the same.
 9. "Prakriti" here is not material nature but the Lord's internal energy (hladini-shakti), personified by Radha; Radha and Krishna are one soul in two bodies (cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 4.55–56, 4.96–98).
 10. "Bhagavatas" are the Lord's devotees; the reading "so says the Bhagavata" is also possible.
 11. That is, in ordinary Kali-yugas the yuga-avatara is "krishna-varna", dark in colour (cf. Bhagavata 11.5.32 and Sridhara Svami's comment: "shining like sapphire"). The line is corrupt in A; the reading of the 1983 edition is adopted; its exact sense is unclear.
 12. Cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita (Adi 4.8–12): the dharma of the age is established by a portion of the Lord, the yuga-avatara; but when Krishna Himself descends, all the avatars, the yuga-avatara included, enter into Him.
 13. "Pita" means yellow, golden; cf. Bhagavata (10.8.13): Garga Muni speaks of the three former colours of the avatars — white, red and yellow (pita) — and the Gaudiya Vaishnavas see in "yellow" an indication of Gauranga.

696. Listen, everyone, to this wondrous account:

Lochana tells something of the deeds of Chaitanya.

1. Ekadashi is the eleventh day of each lunar fortnight, a day of fasting; "anna" means grain (rice and the like). Bhaktisiddhanta's summary (en/14) stresses that by forbidding His mother to eat grain on Ekadashi the Lord taught the whole world. In Murari — 1.07.18–20.
 2. In Murari (1.07.21) the Lord says: "I am going. Guard the body of your son, which will for half a moment become motionless." The conversation of Damodara and Murari (vv. 629–653) interprets exactly these words.
 3. Literally "maya". In Murari (1.07.24, 27) the same question concerns the Lord's "yogamaya": when said of the Lord, maya is His internal power, yogamaya.
 4. "Nirguna" here means beyond the material gunas, not "devoid of form and qualities": in vv. 640–641 Lochana Dasa expressly condemns those who call the Lord "nirguna" in an impersonal sense. In v. 640 "niramila" literally means "made": the Lord Himself manifests His eternal form.
 5. The line also admits the reading: "He Himself is the Lord, and that one (the devotee) depends on Him." From the sense of the whole argument (vv. 624, 653), Lochana Dasa is explaining the words "I am going; the body is your son": in Gaura the Lord Himself plays the part of His own devotee, and that people see "two" here is the working of His maya (yogamaya). The eternal distinction between the Lord and the devotee (vv. 637, 639) is not denied by this.
 6. Here maya is the power by which the Lord conceals Himself, that is, yogamaya.
 7. The reasoning of vv. 634–653 follows Murari (1.08.1–7): the Lord enters the heart of the devotee and regards the devotee's body as His own. In the Gaudiya Vaishnava understanding (Bhaktisiddhanta), the Lord's body is not different from Himself and is not material, and Mahaprabhu is Krishna Himself who has assumed the form and feeling of His own devotee (bhakta-rupa); what is said of the "devotee's body" therefore does not mean that in Gaura the Lord uses a separate, human body.
 8. The subject of the line is Jagannatha Mishra; cf. Murari (1.08.13): the Lord's father too studied Vedanta and other scriptures.
 9. According to the Puranas, Brahma and Rudra, who govern the universe, are also not eternal in these offices: at the end of Brahma's life the universe is dissolved.
 10. Raghunatha ("Lord of the Raghu dynasty") is Sri Ramachandra; Jagannatha says the same words in Murari (1.08.17).
 11. The custom of antarjali: the dying person is carried to the bank of the Ganga and immersed waist-deep in its water so that he may leave the body remembering Hari.
 12. Jagannatha Mishra is an eternal associate of the Lord (in the Gaura-ganoddesh-dipika — Nanda Maharaja and Vasudeva); his departure is not an ordinary death, and Lochana Dasa speaks of it as leaving for Vaikuntha on a chariot.

Here ends the Pauganda-lila.

1. Sarasvati is the goddess of learning and speech; the Lord is the Master of all knowledge (cf. Murari 1.08.12: "husband of Sarasvati").

2. Literally "maya-manusha-vigraha", "a human form by maya": said of the Lord, maya is His yogamaya; so also in Murari (1.09.3).

3. Literally "the speech of the bangajas" — natives of East Bengal (cf. Murari 1.09.4). The Lord's forefathers came from Shrihatta, and He loved to mimic the East Bengali accent in jest.

4. Vallabhacharya's daughter is Lakshmi-priya, Lakshmi herself, who appeared in order to become the Lord's consort; Bhaktisiddhanta in his summary (en/18) calls her Lakshmi-devi. Cf. Murari 1.09.7.

5. That is, she bowed to His feet in her mind. The 1983 edition reads: "took upon her head the dust of the Lord's lotus feet".

6. Draupadi, wife of the Pandavas, whom Krishna saved from disgrace in the assembly of the Kauravas; the king of elephants is Gajendra (Bhagavata, Canto 8); Ajamila (Bhagavata, Canto 6) was saved by uttering the name of Narayana; the courtesan is probably Pingala (Bhagavata 11.8).

7. Literally "a body that spreads disgrace among chaste wives", that is, so beautiful that they lose their composure: a motif of Lochana Dasa's nagari-bhava (see en/09, note 9).

8. V. 756+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition does not have it.

Adi-khanda, part 10 (portion 18)

The beginning of the Kaishora-lila: preparations for Vishvambhara's wedding; the adhivasa of bridegroom and bride; the women of Nadia go to fetch water for the rite; the wedding morning — the nandimukha-shraddha, the tears of Shachi and of the Lord for His departed father; the bridegroom's attire and the wedding procession, the rejoicing of Nadia

Kaishora-lila (The Pastimes of Youth): the Wedding

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. One day, as Gaurasundara, having finished His lessons, was returning home from His teacher's house, He met Vanamali Acharya on the way. Talking with the Acharya, Gaurahari understood that he had gone to His mother Shachi-devi to arrange His marriage, but, not having received the hoped-for answer from Shachi-devi, was returning home with a saddened heart. Without saying a word to the Acharya on the way, Gaurahari went home and by a hint let Mother Shachi know His wish; then Mother Shachi again summoned the matchmaker Vanamali Acharya and told him to arrange her son's marriage. Receiving Mother Shachi's command, Vanamali Acharya came to the house of Vallabhacharya and settled the marriage of Gaurahari with his daughter Lakshmi-devi. When the marriage had been agreed upon, Shachi-devi called her relatives and neighbours and announced her son's wedding, and all were immersed in an ocean of supreme bliss. Meanwhile Shachi-devi set about making all kinds of preparations in the house for her son's wedding. Before long the day of the adhivasa arrived. The respectable ladies, following ancient popular custom, duly performed the anointing of the body with turmeric, the fetching of water¹ and other rites; the Vedic rites too were performed as prescribed. In Vallabhacharya's house all these rites were likewise duly performed. Then on the wedding day Gaurahari, with great pomp, in a festive procession and with many companions, arrived at the house of Vallabhacharya, and the Acharya, according to ancient custom, received his son-in-law by offering Him water for His feet and arghya. Then the Acharya brought his daughter Lakshmi-devi to the wedding pavilion and gave her to Gaurahari. And after completing the rites of kushandika,² the feeding of brahmanas and so on, he sent his daughter to his son-in-law's house.

āna nā śuniye bāṇī |
caudike hāṭe-bāṭe, nāgarīra ṭhāṭe,
dekhite karala uṭhāni || 91 ||*

Word for word: dhani dhani dhani — "Blessed, blessed, blessed!"; kahaye ramani — say the women; ana na shuniye vani — no other word is heard; chaudike hate-bate — on all sides in markets and roads;

nagarira thate — in crowds of nagaris; dekhite karala uthani — rose up to see

91. "Blessed, blessed, blessed!" say the women, no other word is heard;
on all sides, in markets and roads, crowds of nagaris rose up to see.

keha bīṇā bāya, keha gīta gāya,
keha dhāya ullāse |
caudike jaya jaya, maṅgala bijaya,
kahaye locanadāse || 92 ||

Word for word: keha vina baya — some play the vina; keha gita gaya — some sing songs; keha dhaya ullase — some run in delight; chaudike jaya jaya — on all sides "Jaya, jaya!"; mangala vijaya — the auspicious triumph; kahaye lochana-dase — says Lochana Dasa

92. Some play the vina, some sing songs, some run in delight;
on all sides "Jaya, jaya!", the auspicious triumph —
so says Lochana Dasa.

1. The fetching of water (jal-saha; in Lochana Dasa "pani sahi"): on the morning of the wedding the married women go singing to the Ganga to fetch water for the bridegroom's bath (below, vv. 17–33).

2. Kushandika is the rite at the sacred fire that concludes the wedding (in Lochana Dasa, on the day after the wedding).

3. "Aiho-suho" are married women whose husbands are living; only they take part in the auspicious wedding rites.

4. "Pani sahi" — see note 1.

5. Here and below (vv. 18–33, 72, 78–81, 84–92) is a favourite motif of Lochana Dasa: the women of Nadia, forgetting shame, are drawn to Gaura (nagari-bhava; see en/09, note 9). Still more such lines are in the 1983 edition (vv. 40+1 – 40+9, 72+1 – 72+6, 81+1, 86+1 – 86+2); they are absent in A.

6. Vv. 40+1 – 40+9 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition has them in brackets (except v. 40+8) — the way that editor marks lines found in only some manuscripts. This is Lochana Dasa's motif of nagari-bhava (see note 5 and en/09, note 9). "Madana" (Kamadeva) here is an image of the hearts' attraction to Gaura; for a Gaudiya Vaishnava the Lord is the transcendental (aprakrita) Madana, and such attraction to Him, as in the gopis, is not worldly passion; Bhaktisiddhanta, however, does not accept worship of Gaura in the mood of "Gaura-nagari". "Forgot even the duty of a faithful wife" (v. 40+7) — like the gopis, who left family dharma for Krishna's sake.

7. By custom a widow takes no part in the auspicious wedding rites and cannot honour the guests as before; hence Shachi's grief. Cf. Murari 1.10.5–12.

8. That is, the Lord, encouraging His mother, promises to do for the guests by His mere sign more than people can; cf. Murari (1.10.11): "I have the power to do what is beyond mortals, and yet I follow the customs of the world."

9. Vv. 72+1 – 72+6 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition has them in brackets (together with v. 72). The king of birds is Garuda, the enemy of serpents.

10. In the 1983 edition there are two couplets instead of this one (a different redaction): "The Lord mounts a divine palanquin, surrounded by His friends; seeing this, all the people rejoice at heart. The Lord sets out with His friends; in front a dancer dances, singers sing." A and the 1903 edition have one couplet; we follow A.

11. Shinga is a horn; bargo, a wind instrument; damama and dagar, large kettledrums; dosari and mohari (muhammadi), pipes like the shahnai. For bheer, kahāl and the others see the glossary.

12. V. 81+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition has it in brackets (together with v. 81). Ananga ("the Bodiless") is Kamadeva.

13. The Five-arrowed One is Kamadeva, the god of love, armed with five flower-arrows.

14. Stanzas 86+1 – 86+2 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition has them in brackets. Bandhuli (bandhuka) is a bright red flower, a usual simile for lips.

Adi-khanda, part 11 (portion 19)

Kaishora-lila, the wedding (conclusion): the Lord at Vallabhacharya's house; the welcoming of the bridegroom; the bride is brought to the Lord, their first sight of each other; Vallabha honours his son-in-law and gives Him his daughter; the night in the bridal chamber; the kushandika, Vallabha's parting words; the return home with Lakshmi, Shachi receives the couple; a song of the Lord's strolls with His friends (1983 edition only)

Raga bhatiyari; disha: "Behold, my heart, the wonder: the Darling of Navadvipa, dear as life!" (murchha)

184+9. The beauties of Nadia, forgetting themselves, remain absorbed in meditation [on Him] in their hearts.
Lochana Dasa says: in those waves of happiness — just imagine this.

1. "Chhorla" — the raised wedding platform (under a canopy) where the bridegroom stands and the rite is performed.
2. "Bar-urati" (in Lochana Dasa, "bara urathite") — the rite of welcoming the bridegroom: the married women, led by the bride's mother, circle him with lamps and bless him.
3. Godhuli — "the hour of cow-dust", dusk, when the herds come home; in Bengal an auspicious time for a wedding.
4. Rohini — the beloved consort of the Moon god; cf. Murari 1.10.22.
5. The meaning of "chhamuni" is unclear (perhaps the covering that hides the faces of bride and groom until the rite of seeing each other); the 1983 edition reads "they left the chhamuni".

6. When the Lord as Vamana-Trivikrama strode up to Brahma's abode, Brahma washed His foot; cf. Murari 1.10.24.
 7. Vv. 120–128 are in A but absent from the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them in a note as an additional reading of one manuscript.
 8. Lochana Dasa's list of avataras is free: "Hiranyakashipu" apparently stands for the avatara who slew him (Nrisimha), "the mlecchas" for Kalki, who chastises them; Bhrigurama is another name of Parashurama (perhaps Rama of the Raghus was meant); Vyasa is a shaktyavesha-avatara. The sense is clear: all the avataras are portions of Him who appeared as Gauranga; so too the Gaudiya Vaishnava tradition teaches (Gaura is Krishna Himself, the source of all avataras).
 9. Indra, king of the gods, honours the Lord as his master; cf. Murari 1.10.25.
 10. "Pancha-grasi" — the rite of the five mouthfuls: in the bride's house the bridegroom eats five handfuls of food.
 11. Basara — the room where the newly-weds spend the wedding night while the women keep them awake with jests and songs.
 12. Vv. 137+1 – 137+6 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition has them, partly in brackets. On the nagari-bhava see en/09, note 9; cf. en/18, note 6: Lochana Dasa depicts the attraction of the women of Nadia to Gaura in the language of love poetry, but for a Gaudiya Vaishnava this is not worldly passion but attraction to the Lord, the transcendental Madana. The chakora is a bird which, by poetic tradition, feeds on moonbeams.
 13. Vv. 140+1 – 140+3 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition has them.
 14. Vv. 136–147 — again Lochana Dasa's motif of nagari-bhava (see en/09, note 9). Still more such lines are in the 1983 edition (vv. 137+1 – 137+6, 140+1 – 140+3).
 15. Here "maya" is Vallabha's own fatherly attachment: before such a husband as the Lord it counts for nothing.
 16. Lit. "a vehicle carried by men".
 17. Nirmanchhana — a rite in which women wave lamps and auspicious articles around the bridegroom to ward off all that is inauspicious.
 18. Cf. Murari 1.10.27, 1.11.1–2.
 19. The song in raga sindhura (vv. 184+1 – 184+9) is found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition, where the new section begins at once); the 1903 edition has it. The 1983 edition marks stanza 184+2 as the refrain (dhruva). Vv. 184+4 and 184+6 are partly corrupt in both editions and are translated by sense. "The foremost of nagaras" (184+7) and the stanzas on the nagaris are Lochana Dasa's motif of nagari-bhava (see en/09, note 9).

Adi-khanda, part 12 (portion 20)

Banga-vijaya: the Ganga, loving the Lord, rises to touch His feet; a brahmana devoted to the Ganga recognizes Him as Bhagavan and tells how the Ganga was born from the Lord, who melted at Shiva's singing; the Lord journeys to East Bengal, sanctifies the Padmavati and gives the name of Hari to all; Lakshmi serves Shachi in Navadvipa

Kaishora-lila (The Pastimes of Youth): Banga-vijaya — the Lord in East Bengal

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. One day, when Sri Sri Mahaprabhu went at sunset to see the Ganga, Ganga-devi, seeing her beloved Lord, surged up in love and tenderly began to touch His feet again and again. The acharyas, mishras, bhattas and other brahmana pandits who at that time, having finished their evening prayers on the bank of the Ganga, were praising the Ganga, were astonished to see the water suddenly rise and fell to pondering; and then a certain brahmana devoted to the Ganga, by her grace, came to know that the Lord is Bhagavan Himself. In explaining the cause of this rising of the water the author relates a Puranic story: once the devarshi Narada, together with Mahadeva and Ganesha, was singing the glories of Sri Hari, and at that time Bhagavan Sri Hari Himself appeared there. The perspiration that then came out on His divine body as He heard the kirtana about Himself is the Ganga, Brahman in liquid form. [...] Then Bhagavan Gaurahari wished to go to East Bengal [...]; having shown boundless mercy to the people of East Bengal, He returned to Navadvipa, but before that Lakshmi-devi, bitten by the serpent of separation from the Lord, disappeared from this world. Therefore Shachi-devi [...]; and Gaurahari, consoling His mother, [...].¹

108. Shachi-devi is won over by her daughter-in-law's conduct, and the daughter-in-law thrills with joy at Mother Shachi's love.

1. The end of the summary (on the journey to East Bengal and Lakshmi's departure) is almost illegible in the scan of the edition; it is translated from the surviving words, and gaps are marked [...].

2. The name of the raga is illegible in the scan of A; raga shri follows the 1903 edition (the 1983 edition has pathamanjari). In the 1983 edition this section is the "Fifth Chapter".
 3. Vv. 14+1 – 14+2 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition does not have them.
 4. Vv. 22+1 – 22+5 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition gives vv. 22+1 – 22+2 in a footnote as the additional reading of one manuscript, and does not have vv. 22+3 – 22+5.
 5. Thakura ("master") — here the Lord Himself.
 6. Mahesha — Shiva; Lochana Dasa respectfully calls him, like Narada, "Thakura".
 7. Shabda-brahman — Brahman as sound, transcendental sound.
 8. This is the Puranic story of how Vishnu melted on hearing Shiva's song, and so the Ganga was born. The Lord's body is spiritual, and His "melting" is a manifestation of His love for His devotees' singing, not any loss to Him: Bhaktisiddhanta in his summary understands it as the perspiration that appeared on the Lord's body in ecstasy at the kirtana about Him — that moisture is the Ganga.
 9. I.e. the Ganga is the Lord Himself (Janardana) in the form of sacred water.
 10. When the Lord as Vamana-Trivikrama strode upward, the nail of His foot pierced the shell of the universe, and the waters of the Causal Ocean — the Ganga — poured in; Brahma washed that foot (Bhagavata 5.17.1, 8.21.1–4). Cf. en/19, vv. 119–120.
 11. East Bengal was traditionally "the land the Pandavas avoided" (pandava-varjita): in their wanderings the Pandavas did not visit it, and it was held to be impure. The river Padma (Padmavati) is a branch of the Ganga, but the Ganga's sanctity was not acknowledged for it: "the Ganga and yet not the Ganga".
 12. Damodara — a name of Krishna; cf. v. 86.
 13. Here (vv. 76–86, 86+1 – 86+2) is again Lochana Dasa's motif of nagari-bhava (see en/09, note 9); cf. Murari 1.11.6–10.
 14. I.e. Gaura is Krishna Himself, Radha's Beloved, who has taken on Radha's complexion and mood; so too the Gaudiya Vaishnava tradition understands Him (cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 1.5).
 15. Vv. 86+1 – 86+2 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition has them, without brackets.
 16. I.e. the Lord Himself begged people to give Him their sins and take the name of Hari.

Adi-khanda, part 13 (portion 21)

The end of the Banga-vijaya: the serpent of separation bites Lakshmi, and she departs from this world; Shachi's lament; the Lord returns from East Bengal and consoles His mother with the story of the cursed apsara. The beginning of the second wedding: Shachi seeks the daughter of Sanatana Pandita for her son; the Lord's jest with the astrologer and Sanatana's grief; the Lord dispels his grief

Kaishora-lila (The Pastimes of Youth): the Lord's Second Wedding

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. When some days had passed after Lakshmi-devi's ascent to heaven, Mother Shachi grew anxious to have Nimai married again and sent the brahmana Kashinatha to the house of Sanatana Pandita to settle a match with his daughter. When Kashinatha Mishra, coming to Sanatana Pandita's house, conveyed Shachi-devi's words, Sanatana Pandita with the greatest joy agreed to give his daughter to Vishvambhara. An astrologer was called and the day and hour of the wedding were fixed; on the eve of the wedding the respectable ladies and the brahmanas duly performed the popular and the Vedic rites. As before, the anointing with turmeric and the other rites were duly performed. On the wedding day everything was done with great pomp, just as the previous time. After the wedding Sanatana Mishra sent his daughter with his son-in-law to His house.⁷

Word for word: eteka shikhana — having so instructed; prabhu brahmana pathaila — the Lord sent the brahmana; sanatana panditere — to Sanatana Pandita; sakala kahila — he related everything

78. Having so instructed him, the Lord sent the brahmana, and he related everything to Sanatana Pandita.

1. Cf. en/17, note 4: Lakshmipriya is Lakshmi herself. Lochana Dasa presents the serpent's bite as separation from the Lord that has taken the form of a serpent — and so does Bhaktisiddhanta in his summary: "bitten by the serpent of separation". Her departure is not a mundane death: she goes to the Lord (v. 118). Cf. Murari 1.11.21–28.

2. The 1983 edition has it the other way round: a portion of Lakshmi went to heaven (svarga), and Lakshmi herself to Vaikuntha, "her own abode". In A Indra's city is called her abode in agreement with the Lord's story of the apsara (vv. 151–155). Gaudiya Vaishnavas, following Murari (1.12.17) and Vrindavana Dasa, see in Lakshmipriya Lakshmi herself, who went to the feet of her Lord; the story of the apsara is the words with which the Lord consoled His mother while concealing Himself (cf. v. 159).

3. The 1983 edition: "having married, Vishvambhara went to foreign lands".

4. "Mithya" ("deceptive, false") here refers to the transience of worldly life and of bodies, not to the unreality of the world in the Mayavada sense; the one eternal Reality is Krishna (v. 136).

5. Cf. Murari 1.12.13–17, where the Lord tells the same story "concealing everything with words strong to hide His own self" and adds: "Or else it was the Mistress of the world herself, in the form of Lakshmi, who went to the lotus feet of her Lord". See note 2.

6. I.e. without revealing His divinity. V. 158 is absent in the 1983 edition.

7. Bhaktisiddhanta's summary does not include the episode with the astrologer (vv. 45–78); in the scan this summary is damaged in places and is translated from the surviving text.

8. The name of the raga is illegible in the scan of A; raga gandhara follows the 1983 edition (where this is the "Sixth Chapter").

9. Gaudiya Vaishnavas honour Vishnupriya as the embodiment of Bhu-shakti, the Lord's energy. Cf. Murari 1.13.13–15.

10. The Lord's jest: He pretends to know nothing of the wedding. Cf. Murari 1.13.18–21. The second line is the astrologer's advice to Sanatana.

11. Cf. Murari 1.13.22–30.

12. Vv. 54+1 – 54+8 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition gives them in a footnote as the additional reading of one manuscript. Bhishmaka is the king of Vidarbha, Rukmini's father; Rukmini longed to become Krishna's wife, and He carried her away (Bhagavata 10.52–54). Naraka (Bhaumasura) held sixteen thousand princesses captive; Krishna, having slain him, freed them and married them (10.59).

13. On Draupadi, Gajendra and the others see en/17, note 6. Ahalya — the wife of the sage Gautama, freed from a curse by the touch of Rama's foot.

Adi-khanda, part 14 (portion 22)

The second wedding (conclusion): the adhivasa of the Lord and of Vishnupriya; the wedding morning; the bridegroom's attire and the bride's beauty; the wedding procession and the excitement of the women of Nadia; the welcoming of the bridegroom, the exchange of glances and the giving away of the bride in Sanatana's house; the wedding night, the kushandika, Sanatana's farewell; Shachi welcomes the couple home

Word for word: tabe vishvambhara pahun — then the Lord Vishvambhara; muchaki hasiya lahu — gently smiling; basila uttama simhasane — sat on an excellent throne; sanatana dvijavare — Sanatana, the best of brahmanas; kanya sampradana kare — gives away his daughter; padambuje kaila samarpane — offered [her] at His lotus feet

159. Then the Lord Vishvambhara, gently smiling, sat on an excellent throne;
Sanatana, the best of brahmanas, gives away his daughter, offering her at His lotus feet.

যথাযোগ্য যে আছিল, নানাদ্রব্য দান দিল,

Word for word: keho bata bhari tambule — one, filling a tray with betel; dei prabhu-pada-mule — sets it at the Lord's feet; kare dei kusuma-anjali — offers a handful of flowers; tara manah-katha ei — this is what is in her heart; janma janma prabhu tuni — You are the Lord birth after birth; atma samarpaye iha bali — saying so, she gives herself

165. One, filling a tray with betel, sets it at the Lord's feet and offers a handful of flowers;
this is what is in her heart: "You are my Lord birth after birth" — saying so, she gives herself [to Him].

Word for word: eimate rajani gonaila — thus spent the night; gunamani — the jewel of virtues; aiha-gana-bhagyera prakashe — the good fortune of the married women was revealed; prabhate uthiya — rising in the morning; vidhi — duly; kaila prabhu gunanidhi — the Lord, the treasury of virtues, performed; kushandika-karma — the kushandika rite; se-divase — that same day

166. Thus the jewel of virtues spent the night — the good fortune of the married women was revealed; in the morning, rising, the Lord, the treasury of virtues, duly performed that same day the rite of kushandika¹⁸.

Adi-khanda, part 15 (portion 23)

The journey to Gaya: the Lord teaches and resolves to perform the rite for His father; farewell to Shachi; on the way all hasten to see Him; the lesson of the deer; on Mount Mandara — a fever cured by the water of a brahmana's feet, and the teaching about brahmanas; the meeting with Ishvara Puri and initiation; the moods of Vraja; the rites in Gaya, prema at the Vishnupada; the wish to go to Vrindavana and the heavenly voice; the return to Nadia; the conclusion of the Adi-khanda

Kaishora-lila (Youth): the Lord's journey to Gaya

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. After some time Gaurasundara, having concluded the lila of studying, took up teaching. Then, on the pretext of offering pinda for His father, He graciously set out for Gaya. On the way He gave His darshan to all the beasts and birds and drew them to His feet; and to teach reverence for brahmanas He enacted the lila of being cured of His illness by drinking the water that had washed a brahmana's feet, and He also taught that one who does not worship Krishna can never be a brahmana. Then, coming to Gaya and worshipping the gods and the ancestors, He went to see the Vishnupada. There He met Ishvara Puri, the best of devotees, and, to show him mercy, He asked him for a mantra. As soon as the Lord received the Krishna mantra from Ishvara Puri, bhava arose in Him, and He became eager to see the Vishnupada. Seeing the Vishnupada, Sriman Mahaprabhu, overwhelmed with prema, displayed laughter, dancing, singing and other signs of prema, and, staying there only a few days, returned home¹.

Thus ends the Adi-khanda of the Sri Chaitanya-mangala, composed by Sri Lochana Dasa Thakura.

1. Cf. Murari 1.15–1.16. In Lochana Dasa's text the Lord meets Ishvara Puri already on the way to the Vishnupada (vv. 57–58), before the rites at the Phalgu and in Gaya itself.

2. Gaya — a holy city in Bihar where pindas are offered to the ancestors. In performing the shraddha the Lord, as on other occasions, "instructs the people" by His own example (cf. Murari 1.15.6).

3. V. 13+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition does not have it. Shachi asks to share in the blessing of the Gaya-shraddha performed by her son.

4. In Murari (1.15.8) the river is called Chorandhayaka. Mandara — a holy mountain in Bihar where Madhusudana is worshipped (cf. v. 50).

5. The Lord's companions from Bengal found fault with the local brahmanas, whose customs differed from those of Bengal; cf. Murari 1.15.12: these brahmanas had taken refuge in Madhusudana.

6. The Lord is not subject to illness: Bhaktisiddhanta in his summary says that He "enacted the lila of being cured" in order to teach reverence for brahmanas; cf. Murari 1.15.9–13. The 1903 edition gives in its notes several more couplets from individual manuscripts (among them the Lord recalls how once in His childhood His mother gave Him the water of a brahmana's feet); A and B do not have them.

7. Brahmanya — "kind to brahmanas", a name of the Lord. The sage Bhrigu, testing the gods, struck Vishnu on the chest with his foot, and the Lord bears the mark of his foot as a sign of respect for brahmanas (cf. Bhagavata 10.89). The 1903 edition gives vv. 45–47 only in a note as an additional reading of the printed edition.

8. The 1983 edition: "Thus in the Padma Purana". Bhaktisiddhanta's prose rendering of the shloka (anvaya and translation) is not translated.

9. Punahpuna (modern Punpun) — a holy river on the way to Gaya; Rajagiri (Rajagriha, modern Rajgir) with the pond Brahma-kunda — an ancient holy place in Bihar. Cf. Murari 1.15.13–14.

10. The Lord, Himself the Teacher of the world, speaks as a seeking disciple, teaching people that everyone needs initiation from a genuine guru; according to Bhaktisiddhanta's summary He asked for the mantra in order to show mercy to Ishvara Puri. Cf. Murari 1.15.16–19.

11. That is, the mantra of Krishna, the Lord of the gopis. In Murari (1.15.18) and in Vrindavana Dasa (Chaitanya-bhagavata, Adi 17) it is the ten-syllable mantra.

12. After the initiation the moods of Vraja manifest in the Lord: the mood of Radha (vv. 65–67, 70), His own mood as Krishna (vv. 71–73), the mood of a servant (v. 71). Gaudiya Vaishnavas see in Gaura Krishna Himself, who has taken the mood and the radiance of Radha.

13. Vv. 75+1 – 75+2 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition gives them in a note as the additional reading of another printed edition. Madhavendra Puri is Ishvara Puri's guru, the root of the tree of prema (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 9.10–11); apparently his words about Krishna's imminent appearance are meant.

14. The Lord remembered His lila as Rama. According to the tradition of Gaya, Sita, having offered pinda to Dasharatha in Rama's absence, called the Phalgu to witness, but the river lied, and Sita cursed it to flow beneath the sand.

15. The Pretashila, Udichi, Dakshina-manasa, Uttara-manasa, Jihvalola and the Sixteen Altars (v. 82) are holy places of Gaya where the shraddha is performed; cf. Murari 1.16.1–4.

16. Cf. Murari 1.16.6–7. The Lord, as a devotee, laments a seeming lack of love — thus He teaches humility; at once prema awakens in Him (vv. 88–91).

17. Cf. Murari 1.16.8–10. The heavenly voice foretells the Lord's sannyasa and His journey to Vrindavana.

18. Narahari Sarakara Thakura of Shrikhandia is Lochana Dasa's guru. "Your" (vv. 120–122) apparently refers to Gaura (cf. v. 119).

Madhya-khanda, part 1 (portion 24)

The beginning of the Madhya-khanda: the Lord teaches His students that true knowledge is devotion to Krishna; in the mood of Radha He weeps in separation, and by His word Shachi attains prema; prema in the house of Shuklambara; the Lord's associates gather; the sound of the flute and the mood of Gandharvika; the heavenly voice: "You are Ishvara Himself"; the mood of the Boar in Murari's house, the talk about the Vedas, the instruction to worship Radha and Krishna, Murari sees Rama; the explanation of the verse on the holy name

Prema-dana-lila (The Lord bestows prema)

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. The author, having praised the good fortune of those who were Sriman Mahaprabhu's students in His lila of teaching, describes the lila of the Lord's mercy to mother Shachi. One day, when Sriman Mahaprabhu was resting in His house, He suddenly, Himself absorbed in the mood of Srimati Radhika in separation [when Krishna had gone] to Mathura, began to weep, crying: "O Krishna, O Krishna!" Hearing the weeping, Shachi-devi came there and begged Gaurasundara for prema, and Gaurasundara bestowed prema on her. Then in the house of Shuklambara Brahmachari He enacted the lila of the great manifestation of prema. Bereft of all outward awareness, He wept all the time, crying "O Krishna!"; and hearing someone sing the name of Krishna, He fainted in bliss. Moment by moment the eight sattvika-bhavas arose all over His body, and anubhavas such as dancing, singing and rolling on the ground appeared. Gaurasundara, though Bhagavan Himself, accepted the mood of a devotee and revealed the glory of bhakti and of the devotees — therefore He is the crown jewel of all avataras.

When Sriman Mahaprabhu began the lila of preaching prema, the devotees headed by Gadadhara and devotees from various lands and countries all gathered together. By Gaurahari's mercy all were maddened with prema. One day the Lord was walking with Srivasa Pandita and his brothers, and suddenly, hearing the sound of Krishna's flute, He attained the state that Srimati Gandharvika had attained and, like a madman, began to display loud laughter, weeping, silence, humility and other anubhavas. Then a heavenly voice resounded: "O Vishvambhara! You are Bhagavan Himself, descended to the earth to preach prema." When in Murari's house the Lord manifested the form of the Boar, Murari praised Him and begged the Lord for prema; the Lord told him to worship the son of the king of Vraja, served by the cowherd men and women. When Murari wished to see the form of Ramachandra, the Lord showed him that form and glorified the greatness of the name of Krishna. Further are described the coming of Brahma and the other gods to Gaura with prayers for prema, their attaining prema by Gaura's mercy and their dancing with cries of "O Radha, O Govinda!", the mercy to Shuklambara Brahmachari, the garland from the Lord's body given to Gadadhara, the wondrous beauty of the pair Gaura and Gadadhara, and so on¹.

138. Holding a straw between his teeth, Lochana says:
I have no other wealth than the feet of Gaura.

1. The summary covers the whole section; its end (the coming of the gods, the mercy to Shuklambara, Gadadhara) is in the next portion. Cf. Murari 2.1–2.3.

2. A shloka from Rupa Gosvami's Padyavali. The hunter, Dhruva, Gajendra, Kubja, Sudama, Vidura, Ugrasena — devotees whom the Lord accepted for their devotion, not for their qualities. Bhaktisiddhanta's prose renderings of the shlokas (anvaya and translation) are not translated here or below.

3. The Lord speaks in the mood of Radha separated from Krishna, whom Akrura has taken away to Mathura (cf. Bhaktisiddhanta's summary). The reproaches to Krishna ("cheat", "rake") are the language of the gopis' love in separation, not blasphemy.

4. V. 31+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition does not have it. Cf. Murari 2.1.9–18; in Vrindavana Dasa too (Chaitanya-bhagavata, Madhya 22) Shachi obtains prema only by the mercy of a Vaishnava (Advaita).

5. Vv. 50–51 anticipate the teaching of Krishnadasa Kaviraja (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 4): the chief reason for Gaura's appearance is the tasting of His own rasa (Radha's love), while the deliverance of souls is a secondary reason.

6. Gandharvika — a name of Radha. Hearing the flute, the Lord experiences what Radha experienced (so in Bhaktisiddhanta's summary). Cf. Murari 2.2.1–6.

7. Lit. "like Kishora and Kishori" — the youthful Krishna and Radha. Gaudiya Vaishnavas see in Gaura both of Them in one form.

8. Cf. Murari 2.2.7–10, where the voice from above likewise calls the Lord Bhagavan, descended to give people prema.

9. Cf. Murari 2.2.11–24. The Upanishadic verse denies the Lord material hands and feet, but not a spiritual form: that is why He is "swift" and "grasps". The Lord jokingly calls it "mockery" when these words are taken as a denial of all form: the Vedas cannot describe Him directly (vv. 101–107). So also in Gaudiya Vaishnava theology: the Lord is a person with a spiritual body, and the impersonal Brahman is the radiance of His body (v. 115).

10. "The original prakriti" (mula-prakriti) here means the Lord's original energy (shakti): Radha is the source of all His shaktis, not material nature.

11. Cf. the Brahma-samhita (5.29, 5.40): Krishna's abode with ground of chintamani stones, wish-fulfilling trees and surabhi cows; the impersonal Brahman is the radiance of His body. In Bhaktisiddhanta's summary: the Lord told Murari to worship the son of the king of Vraja, served by the cowherd men and women.

12. In the Rama lila Murari Gupta is Hanuman. Cf. Murari 2.7.13–18, where the Lord names him Ramadasa.

13. Vv. 128–135 are an explanation of the verse "harer nama", following Murari (2.2.29–33). According to Lochana Dasa, the word "kevalam" ("only") points to kaivalya — liberation; but liberation is given already by namabhasa (the "shadow of the Name"), whereas the pure Name bestows prema (v. 133); so too Gaudiya Vaishnavas, following Haridas Thakura (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Antya 3), teach that liberation is only a by-product of namabhasa. Krishnadasa Kaviraja (Adi 17.21–25) explains differently: the threefold "name of Hari" is for emphasis, and "kevala" excludes knowledge, yoga, austerity and karma.

14. Cf. Murari 2.2.34.

Madhya-khanda, part 2 (portion 25)

The gods come to the Lord and receive prema; mercy to Shuklambara and Gadadhara; the dance in Srivasa's house — Vrindavana in Navadvipa; the Lord disperses the clouds over the kirtana; the section "Mercy to Mukunda": a song of Gaura's dance

Mercy to Mukunda

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. The author, having described the wondrous beauty and loveliness of Sriman Mahaprabhu, glorifies the lila of planting the mango tree. One day Sriman Mahaprabhu, before the devotees, planted a mango stone; before their eyes it at once sprouted, gradually became a tree and blossomed; mangoes appeared on the tree and at once ripened; the devotees offered them to Bhagavan and all together honoured the prasada. Afterwards they saw that none of it was there any more — everything had vanished. Then Sriman Mahaprabhu, by the example of that tree, showed the illusoriness of samsara and taught how to conquer maya; He instructed Mukunda Datta in the worship of Sri Krishna, whose form is full of sweetness, and bade him give up speculation about the Self (adhyatma) and serve Bhagavan. When Murari Gupta asked Sriman Mahaprabhu for the mercy of bhakti, the Lord blessed him. Srivasa and Sri Rama Pandita are very dear to Sriman Mahaprabhu; in their house Sriman Mahaprabhu enjoyed the bliss of kirtana with the devotees. One day, when a certain foolish brahmana called Sri Krishna a product of maya, Sriman Mahaprabhu, hearing it, bathed in the Ganga with His clothes on¹⁰.

Raga shyamagada. [Opening:]

*Like the peak of Sumeru is His beautiful tall body;
under the weight of prema He sways.
His whole body thrills from feet to crown,
His red eyes brim with tears.*

*kṣaṇe alaukika bole, yena mada-mātoyāle,
kṣaṇe bole muṇi bhagabān |
kṣaṇe paraṇāma kare, kṣaṇe āśīrbāda bole, kṣaṇe nijajane dei bara dāna || 6 ||*

Word for word: kshane alaukika bole — now He speaks unearthly things; yena mada-matoyale — as if intoxicated; kshane bole — now He says; muni bhagavan — "I am Bhagavan"; kshane paranama kare — now He bows; kshane ashirvada bole — now He blesses; kshane nija-jane dei bara dana — now He gives boons to His own

6. Now He speaks unearthly things, as if intoxicated, now He says: "I am Bhagavan!"
Now He bows down, now He pronounces blessings, now He grants boons to His own.

প্রেম প্রকাশয়ে প্রভু, যা নাই দেখয়ে কভু, saptadbīpe lāgila tarāsa | ki nārī puruṣa saba, dekhi' gorā-anubhaba, preme bhuli' gela e locanadāsa || 7 ||

Word for word: prema prakashaye prabhu — the Lord reveals prema; ya nahi dekhaye kabhu — such as was never seen; sapta-dvipe lagila tarasa — a trembling seized the seven continents; ki nari purusha saba — all, women and men; dekhi gora-anubhava — seeing Gora's experience; preme bhuli gela — forgot himself in prema; e lochanadasa — this Lochana Dasa

7. The Lord reveals a prema never seen before:
a trembling seized the seven continents.
All — women and men — seeing what Gora experienced, [forgot themselves], and in prema this Lochana Dasa forgot himself.

Raga dhanashi, tune taraja; refrain: "What creator is this — he made beautiful Gauranga and kept his own body? How hard he is, with a heart of wood and stone: seeing this beauty, he did not melt away!"¹²

Word for word: amiya mathiya keba — who, churning nectar; navani tulila go — took off the butter; tahate gadhila gora-deha — fashioned Gora's body from it; jagat chhanina keba — who, sifting the world; rasa ningadila go — squeezed out the rasa; eka kaila sudhui suneha — blended it into pure tenderness

8. Who, churning nectar, took off its butter and from it fashioned Gora's body?
Who sifted the whole world, squeezed out its rasa and blended it into one — pure tenderness?

Word for word: anuragera dadhikhani — the curd of anuraga; premara sanchana diya — with a culture of prema; keba patiyachhe — who has set (made); ankhi duti — the two eyes; tahate adhika mahu — sweeter than honey; lahu lahu katha go — soft words; hasiya bolaye guti guti — smiling, He speaks them one by one

9. Who set the curd of anuraga with a culture of prema and made [of it] His two eyes?

Sweeter still are His soft words:

smiling, He lets them fall one by one.

Word for word: akhanda-piyusha-dhara — the unbroken stream of nectar; ke na autila go — who boiled down; sonara varana haila chini — became gold-coloured sugar; se chini mariya keba — who, beating that sugar; pheni tulila go — raised the froth; hena baso — so it seems to me; gora-angakhani — Gora's body

10. Who boiled down an unbroken stream of nectar till it became sugar the colour of gold?

Who, beating that sugar, raised the froth? —

so Gora's body seems to me.

11. Who, grinding lightning, rubbed His body with it, rubbed His face with the moon?
Who, grinding loveliness, painted this picture —
the wondrous fashioning of [His] form?

Word for word: sakala purnimara chande — all the full moons; bikala haiya kande — weep distraught; kara-pada-padumera gandhe — at the fragrance of the lotuses of the hands and feet; kudita nakhera chhata — the radiance of the twenty nails; jagat ala kaila go — lit up the world; ankhi paila janamera andhe — the born-blind received eyes

12. All the full moons weep, distraught, at the fragrance of the lotuses of His hands and feet.
The radiance of His twenty nails lit up the world:
those blind from birth received sight.

Word for word: emana vinodiya gora — such a charming Gora; kothao dekhiye nai — is seen nowhere; aparupa premara vinode — in the wondrous play of prema; purusha prakriti-bhave — men in the mood of women; kandiya bikala go — weep distraught; nari kemane prana bandhe — how can a woman keep her life

13. Such a charming Gora is seen nowhere — in the wondrous play of prema.

Men, in the mood of women, weep, distraught —
how can a woman keep life [in her body]?

Word for word: sakala rasera rase — from the rasa of all rasas; vilasa hridayakhani — the heart, an abode of play; ke na gadhaila ranga diya — who fashioned with delight; madana batiya ke ba — who, grinding Madana; badana gadhila go — fashioned the face; vini bhava — pining without [Him]; mo malun kandiya — I die weeping

14. Who made His heart — an abode of play — from the rasa of all rasas, shaping it with delight?
Who, grinding Madana, fashioned His face?
And I, without Him, must die in tears.

Word for word: indrera dhanuka ani — bringing Indra's bow; gorara kapale go — on Gora's forehead; ke na dila chandanera rekha — who drew the line of sandal; o-rupa svarupe — [seeing] that form truly; yata kulera kamini go — all the women of noble families; dui hatha karite chahe pakha — long to make their two arms wings

15. Who brought Indra's bow and drew with it the line of sandal on Gora's forehead?
At the sight of this form all the women of noble families long to turn their arms into wings.

Word for word: rangera mandirakhani — the temple of delight; nana-ratna diya go — of many jewels; gadhaila bada anubandhe — was carved with great care; lila-vinoda-kala — the art of playful lilas; bhavera vilasa go — the play of bhavas; madana-bedana bhavi kande — thinking of Madana's pain, she weeps

16. [His body,] a temple of delight, was carved with great care from many jewels.
The art of playful lilas, the play of bhavas...
thinking of Madana's pain, [a woman] weeps.

Word for word: na chahe ankhira kone — He does not glance from the corners of the eyes; sadai sabhara mane — always in everyone's heart; dekhibare ankhi-pakhi dhaya — the eye-birds fly to see; ankhira piyasa dekhi — seeing the eyes' thirst; mukhe lalasa go — longing in the mouth; alasala jarajara gaya — the body languid and exhausted

17. He does not glance from the corners of His eyes, yet always in everyone's heart the eye-birds fly to see Him.
Seeing the eyes' thirst, the lips too are filled with longing;
the body is languid and exhausted.

Word for word: kulavati kula chhade — chaste wives leave their families; pangu dhaya ubha-rade — the lame run headlong; guna gaya asura-pashanda — asuras and atheists sing the qualities; dhulaya lotana kande — rolling in the dust they weep; keho sthira nahi bandhe — no one stays composed; gora-guna amiya akhanda — Gora's qualities are unending nectar

18. Chaste wives leave their families, the lame run headlong, asuras and atheists sing His qualities, roll in the dust and weep; no one can stay composed:
Gora's qualities are unending nectar.

Word for word: dhaore dhaore bali — crying "run, run!"; premanande kolakuli — embracing in the bliss of prema; keho nache — some dance; keho atta hase — some laugh aloud; sushila kulera badhu — the modest wife of a noble house; se bole sakala yau — she says, "let everything go"; gora-guna-rupera batase — in the breeze of Gora's qualities and beauty

19. "Run, run!" they cry, and embrace in the bliss of prema;
some dance, some laugh aloud.
Even the modest wife of a noble house says: "Let everything go!" — in the breeze of Gora's qualities and beauty.

Word for word: nadiya-nagara-badhu — the wives of the town of Nadia; heri gora-mukha-vidhu — beholding the moon of Gora's face; jharajhara nayane sadai — ever shed streams of tears; anurage buka bhare — breasts filled with love; pulakita kalebare — bodies thrilling; manamajhe sadai jagai — in the heart [He] is ever awake

20. The wives of the town of Nadia, beholding the moon of Gora's face, ever shed streams of tears.
Their breasts fill with love, their bodies thrill, in their hearts [He] is ever awake.

Word for word: yogindra munindra kiba — even the best of yogis and sages; mane gane ratri diba — pondering day and night; gora-gune lagi gela dhandha — are bewildered by Gora's qualities; akhila-bhuvana-pati — the Lord of all worlds; dhulaya lotana kande — rolls in the dust and weeps; sadai sonare radha-radha — ever remembering "Radha, Radha!"

21. Even the best of yogis and sages, pondering day and night, are bewildered by Gora's qualities.

The Lord of all worlds rolls in the dust and weeps, ever remembering: "Radha, Radha!"

Word for word: lakhimi-vilasa chhadi — leaving the play with Lakshmi; prema-abhilashi go — longing for prema; anurage ranga duti ankhi — both eyes red with love; radhara dheyane hiya — the heart in meditation on Radha; bekata na haya go — is not revealed; oi gora tanu tara sakhi — that golden body is its witness

22. Leaving His play with Lakshmi, He longs for prema; both His eyes are red with love.

[His] heart, absorbed in meditation on Radha, is not revealed;
the witness to it is that golden body¹³.

Word for word: dekhare dekhare loka — look, look, people; hena prema aparupa — such wondrous prema; trijagat-natha-natha hana — being the Lord of the lords of the three worlds; akinchana-jana-sange — in the company of the destitute; ki jani ki dhana mage — who knows what wealth He begs; kiba sukhe bulaye nachiya — with what joy He goes dancing

23. Look, look, people — what wondrous prema!

Though He is the Lord of the lords of the three worlds, in the company of the destitute — who knows what wealth He begs? — with what joy He goes about dancing!

Word for word: jaya re jaya re jaya — glory, glory, glory; hena prema-rasalaya — such a storehouse of the rasa of prema; bhangī bilāila gora-raya — Gora-raya broke open and gave away; nirjibe jibana paila — the lifeless received life; paṅgu giri ḍiṅgaila — the lame leapt over mountains; anande lochanadase gaya — joyfully sings Lochana Dasa

24. Glory, glory, glory! Such a storehouse of the rasa of prema

Gora-raya broke open and gave away.

The lifeless received life, the lame leapt over mountains — joyfully sings Lochana Dasa.

1. The four-faced one is Brahma, the five-faced Shiva, the six-faced Skanda (Karttikeya). Cf. Murari 2.3.1–2.
2. Cf. Murari 2.3.3–4: the Lord touches the devotees' bodies with His feet, and they beg devotion to His feet.
3. Cf. Murari 2.3.5–8. The Lord does not belittle Mathura and Dvaraka: He says that mere bodily residence in holy places, without love for Krishna, does not yet bear fruit (cf. Bhagavata 10.84.13).
4. "True feeling" (sad-bhava) is explained by Bhaktisiddhanta in his gloss on the verse as purity of mind. The source of the verse is not given in the edition.
5. V. 174+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition; the 1903 edition lacks it too).
6. Cf. Murari 2.3.10–17; there the Lord tells Gadadhara that in the morning he will distribute His prasada to the Vaishnavas.
7. According to Gaudiya Vaishnava tradition, Gadadhara Pandita is Sri Radha Herself (Gaura-ganoddeshā-dīpikā 147–153); Murari (2.3.17) compares this service to Radha preparing Krishna's bed.
8. Vv. 188–196: Vrindavana and the rasa-līla appear in Srīvaṣa's house; Gadadhara is Radha, Narahari Madhumati (see the Sūtra-khaṇḍa, en/08, v. 645), Raghunandana "the transcendental (aprakṛita) Madana", i.e. Kāṇḍarpa, not the mundane god of lust (in the Gaura-ganoddeshā-dīpikā — Pradyumna; cf. en/08, note 19). The rasa here is a spiritual līla, not mundane love. "Circle within circle" — lit. "in the order of the enclosures (avarana)": the associates surround the Lord in circles, as in meditation on His abode. Lochana Dasa, a disciple of Narahari, brings the Shrikhaṇḍa devotees into this scene; other biographies do not describe it.
9. Vv. 198–213 — cf. Murari 2.3.18–27. The brahmanas' wives raise the auspicious cry "ulu-ulu".
10. The summary covers the whole section; this portion contains only the song of Gaura's dance (vv. 1–24); the rest (the mango tree, the instructions to Mukunda and Murari, Srīvaṣa and Sri Rama, the blaspheming brahmana) is in the next portion.
11. Pandita Gosani is Gadadhara Pandita. The "market" is an image of the lavish distribution of prema.
12. The voices of this song are the women of Nadiā (vv. 13–20); here again is Lochana Dasa's "nagari-bhava" (see en/09, note 9). The "creator" who supposedly made Gaura is a poetic figure: the Lord's form is eternal and created by no one.
13. That is, the Lord hides that His heart is absorbed in Radha, but His golden complexion — Radha's complexion — betrays it. So too in Gaudiya Vaishnava theology: Gaura is Krishna who has taken Radha's bhava and complexion (cf. Chaitanya-charitāmṛita, Adī 4).

Madhya-khanda, part 3 (portion 26)

The mango tree — a lesson on maya and on offering all acts to Krishna; instruction to Mukunda on worshipping two-armed Krishna; Murari begs for mercy; Srivasa and Sri Rama; the blaspheming brahmana and the Lord's bath; the section "The Truth about Advaita": the Lord with Advaita Acharya
Raga varadi; refrain: "Hari, Rama, Narayana — Gora, Shachi's darling!"

The Truth about Advaita

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. One day Sriman Mahaprabhu [with the devotees] came to the house of Sri Advaita Prabhu to see Him; Advaita Prabhu fell at the feet of Sriman Mahaprabhu. Mahaprabhu lovingly embraced Advaita Prabhu and in conversation glorified the pre-eminence of prema-bhakti in the age of Kali. Seeing a certain godless brahmana, Srivasa Pandita grew alarmed, and by the will of Sriman Mahaprabhu that brahmana was bewildered by maya. Then [the Lord], having enjoyed kirtana and a meal in Advaita's house, returned home. Afterwards Sriman Mahaprabhu, [having expounded the doctrine of the Self,] spoke of the greatness of supreme bhakti.

Sri Advaita Acharya Prabhu came to Navadvipa and prostrated Himself fully at the feet of Sriman Mahaprabhu. At that time Sriman Mahaprabhu, in Srivasa's house, was worshipping His weapon, the club, in order to destroy the godless. Sriman Mahaprabhu, [greatly pleased] with Acharya Gosani, declared before the people, "Bhagavan descends by Advaita's desire," mounted a couch and ordered Advaita Prabhu to dance and sing kirtana. When Srivasa Pandita asked about the truth of Advaita, Sriman Mahaprabhu told the truth about Advaita and instructed everyone to serve Bhagavan"¹³.

Raga bhatiyari; refrain: "Hari, Narayana, Gorachand, Shachi's darling — with the noose of prema He has bound the hearts of living beings!"

Word for word: henamate — thus; dine dine bade parakasha — day by day the manifestation grows; shunina — hearing; ananda hiya — glad at heart; e lochanadasa — Lochana Dasa

35. Thus day by day [His] manifestation grows.

Hearing of it, Lochana Dasa rejoices at heart.

1. "Illusory" (michha) in the sense of transient and deceptive: the world is created by the Lord's energy and is real, but it is false to regard it as one's own and to seek happiness in it (v. 39). Cf. Murari 2.4.6–11, where the same miracle with the tree is called "a conjurer's trick".

2. Cf. Bhagavad-gita 7.14: the Lord's maya is hard to overcome, but those who surrender to Him overcome it. Here maya is the Lord's external energy, which He controls.

3. Not merging with Krishna: one who has given everything to Krishna has no interests left apart from His will (cf. Bhagavata 7.5.23 on atma-nivedana, and 11.29.34).

4. Cf. Murari 2.4.10–11: everything done for the Master bears fruit.

5. A verse of the Padma-purana; it is quoted by Murari (2.4.14) and in the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 9.29). The Lord jokingly "praises" Mukunda for his knowledge of Brahman and shows that the Supreme Brahman is Rama Himself, a Person.

6. So also in Gaudiya Vaishnava theology: Krishna is the original Personality of Godhead Himself ("krishnas tu bhagavan svayam", Bhagavata 1.3.28), and Narayana is His manifestation. Cf. Murari 2.4.15–17.

7. Cf. Murari 2.4.18–21.

8. Lit. "give up the gita (song)...". In Murari (2.4.22–23) the Lord reproaches Murari for his song on the doctrine of the Self and tells him to compose a shloka about Hari. The vaidya is Murari Gupta, who like Mukunda was of the vaidya community.

9. Murari's humble exaggeration: in Gaudiya Vaishnava theology Lakshmi is the Lord's internal energy and Ananta His expansion, and maya has no power over them. The point is that no one can conquer maya by his own strength (cf. Gita 7.14).

10. Cf. Murari 2.4.22–27; there the Lord's blessing is understood as permission for Murari to tell of His descent.

11. Cf. Murari 2.4.27–32. Kapila is the sage, a descent of Vishnu, teacher of sankhya.

12. Cf. Murari 2.4.33–34. The words "Krishna is maya" express the Mayavada view, in which Krishna's form is a product of maya; for Vaishnavas this is the gravest offence: Krishna's form is eternal and spiritual (cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Madhya 17.129–133).

13. The summary covers the whole section; this portion contains vv. 1–35 (the Lord at Advaita's), the rest is in the next portion. Some places in the summary are illegible in the OCR of the edition and are restored by sense (in square brackets).

14. Cf. Murari 2.5.1–19: the Lord goes to Advaita in Shantipur.

15. Cf. Murari 2.5.3–5: the Lord first prostrates Himself before Advaita, "honouring the Vaishnava as Vishnu Himself", and Advaita in dismay falls at His feet. In Gaudiya Vaishnava theology Advaita is Maha-Vishnu and the Lord's eternal servant; His humility is an example for devotees.

16. "Gracious love" — in the original "prasanna maya": the Bengali word maya is used here in its ordinary sense of "tenderness, love, compassion", not illusion. Cf. Murari 2.5.7–10.

17. Cf. Murari 2.5.11–13: "blinded by the maya of Vishnu". Maya here is the Lord's external energy, which by His will keeps non-devotees away from the kirtana.

Madhya-khanda, part 4 (portion 27)

The Lord expounds the path of knowledge and proclaims what is highest — bhakti; meditation on Radha and Krishna in Vrindavana; Advaita comes to Navadvipa; the Lord with His club threatens the haters of devotees; Advaita's dance; the truth about Advaita; the ban on speculating about the Self; a song of the beauty of dancing Gaura

Raga varadi; refrain: "I take upon myself all misfortunes of Gora's beauty! He has given away the treasure of prema, filling the world with it"

114. Like a lion cub, He roars deeply again and again;
"hum!" — the waves of the ocean of prema.
He cries "Hari, Hari!" — and the world fell into rapture, and the wives of noble houses forgot the honour of both houses¹¹.

118. To what shall I compare Him — the essence of compassion embodied?

Such is my Gora-rayā.

In prema the people of Nadia know neither night nor day;
joyfully sings Lochana Dasa.

1. Vv. 36–46 (as in Murari, 2.5.20–28) set out the path of knowledge (jnana-yoga) as those seeking liberation understand it; the Lord expounds it in order then to place bhakti above everything (vv. 47–49) and to forbid speculation about the Self (vv. 101–106). In v. 42 the 1983 edition has "without bhakti" instead of "without liberation". According to the teaching of the Gaudiya Vaishnavas (and of Bhaktisiddhanta), Krishna is reached by bhakti alone ("bhaktyaham ekaya grahyah", Bhagavata 11.14.21), and liberation is not a precondition but a by-product of devotion.

2. "Knowledge" here is the understanding that Krishna is Bhagavan Himself; it leads to firm faith and to causeless, uninterrupted bhakti (cf. Bhagavata 1.2.7). Cf. Murari 2.5.29–30.

3. Cf. the Brahma-samhita (5.29, 5.56) and en/24, note 11. On Lakshmi's longing for the rasa of Vraja see Chaitanya-charitamrita, Madhya 9. Vv. 56–58 — cf. Murari 2.5.30–33.

4. Cf. Murari 2.6.1–6. The hater of devotees is perhaps the brahmana Gopala Chapala, struck with leprosy for offending Srivasa (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 17).

5. Cf. Murari 2.6.7–9. "To go to the forest" hints at the coming sannyasa.

6. According to Gaudiya Vaishnava tradition, the Lord descended in answer to the loud calls (hunkaras) and worship of Advaita, who offered tulasi leaves and Ganga water to the Shalagrama (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 3). Cf. Murari 2.6.10–13.

7. The "children" are Advaita's sons (Achyutananda and others) or His disciples. Cf. Murari 2.6.14–15.

8. Cf. Murari 2.6.16–22. So too in Gaudiya Vaishnava theology: Advaita is Maha-Vishnu, who has taken the form of a devotee (bhakta-avatara); Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 6. Kamalaksha is Advaita's worldly name.

9. That is, "you heard it from Advaita". According to the Chaitanya-bhagavata (Madhya 19), Advaita for a time deliberately preached the doctrine of the Self (the Yoga-vasishtha) so as to provoke the Lord's punishment. Cf. Murari 2.6.23–26.

10. "Hari-Hara" — so also in Murari (2.6.27); probably Hari is Gaura, and Hara is Advaita, revered as one with Sadashiva.

11. That is, they cast aside the honour of both their fathers' and their husbands' houses — an image from the songs of the gopis; cf. Lochana Dasa's "nagari-bhava" (en/09, note 9).

Madhya-khanda, part 5 (portion 28)

The section "Meeting Nityananda": the name of Srivasa; Murari's Raghuvara-ashtaka and the name "Ramadasa"; service to Srivasa is worship of the Lord; the search for Nityananda and the meeting in the house of Nandana Acharya; the glory of Nityananda; Shachi accepts Nityananda as her son; in Srivasa's house the Lord reveals to Nityananda His six-armed, four-armed and two-armed forms

Meeting Nityananda

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. One day Sriman Mahaprabhu asked Srivasa Pandita the meaning of his name and Himself revealed its sense: "Srivasa is the abode (avasa) of devotion (shri)." Then, when at the Lord's command Murari recited the Raghuvara-ashtaka, Sriman Mahaprabhu wrote the name "Ramadasa" on his forehead and showed him the form of Rama whom he worshipped. Having instructed Sri Rama Pandita to serve his brother Srivasa, a supreme devotee (parama-bhagavata), Sriman Mahaprabhu sent the devotees to look for Sriman Nityananda Prabhu. [Learning] that Sriman Nityananda Prabhu was staying in the house of Nandana Acharya, Mahaprabhu came there with His associates and met Him; before everyone He glorified the greatness of Nityananda Prabhu and [explained] the way to prema-bhakti for Krishna. When Sriman Nityananda Prabhu was taking His meal in the house of Srivasa Pandita, Sriman Mahaprabhu revealed to Him His six-armed, four-armed and two-armed forms¹.

1. The summary covers the whole section (vv. 1–106). Some places in the OCR of the edition are illegible and have been restored by sense (in square brackets). The section as a whole follows Murari Gupta (2.7–2.8).

2. So also in Murari (2.7.7): "Shri is devotion, and you are its abode."

3. Gopinatha is a brahmana of Navadvipa, an associate of the Lord; in Murari (2.7.8): "You are known as My servant."

4. Vv. 7–8 are the first two stanzas of Murari Gupta's Ramashtaka (eight verses on Rama) (Murari 2.7.10–11); Brihaspati and Kavi (Shukra) are the planets Jupiter and Venus. Murari is a devotee of Rama, in Gaudiya Vaishnava tradition Hanuman (en/24, note 12). Bhaktisiddhanta's anvaya and translation of the verses are not translated here or below.

5. Cf. Murari 2.7.18. Ramadasa means "servant of Rama".

6. This instruction is not in Murari. In the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 15.137–157) the Lord, testing Murari, advises him to worship Krishna, and then glorifies his unshakeable fidelity to Rama. Cf. also en/24, where the Lord instructs Murari to worship Radha and Krishna.

7. The verse is Bhagavata 11.14.20; vv. 18–23 — cf. Murari 2.7.19–23. Sri Rama Pandita is the younger brother of Srivasa (Srinivasa).

8. Cf. Murari 2.7.25–27; in Murari the remnants of the meal are received also by Narayani, Srivasa's niece, the future mother of Vrindavana Dasa.

9. Cf. Murari 2.8.1–9. Shripada is a respectful address to a sannyasi; an Avadhuta is a wandering renunciant who stands above external rules. Rama is Sri Rama Pandita; Mukunda is Mukunda Datta. According to the Chaitanya-bhagavata (Madhya-khanda), Nityananda came to Navadvipa after many years of pilgrimage and stayed in the house of Nandana Acharya.

10. Literally "consider, all, your own dwelling"; so in A and in the 1983 edition. We understand it from v. 37 and from Murari (2.8.6–7), where the Lord says the Avadhuta can be found in the evening and sends everyone home.

11. Vv. 47–55 describe Nityananda. According to Gaudiya Vaishnava theology Nityananda is Balarama Himself, Krishna's elder brother (cf. Murari 2.9.12); His staff, roar and gait "subdue Kali" — that is, His mercy breaks the power of the age of Kali. The yellow cloth is Lochana Dasa's; in Murari (2.9.12) Balarama wears blue.

12. Nityananda is in the mood of Balarama: Kanai is Krishna, His younger brother; Revati is Balarama's consort; "honey" (madhu) is the intoxicating honey-wine (varuni) that Balarama drinks (cf. Murari 2.9.12, 2.14). This intoxication is the ecstasy of prema, not worldly drunkenness; the Avadhuta's strange behaviour (vv. 56–58) is likewise a manifestation of prema.

13. An image from the songs of the gopis, as in Lochana Dasa's descriptions of Gaura (cf. en/09, note 9, on "nagari-bhava"); the beauty of the Lord and His associates draws souls away from worldly attachments; it is not worldly passion.

14. Cf. Murari 2.8.10–13: the Lord bows to Nityananda with devotion. Thus the Lord honours Nityananda as His elder brother (Balarama) and shows how to honour a Vaishnava.

15. Nityananda had wandered for many years through the holy places in search of Krishna, and found Him "hiding" in Navadvipa in the form of Gaura. The "thief" is Krishna, the Stealer of butter and of hearts.

16. V. 69+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks it); it nearly repeats v. 60.

17. Vv. 75–78 — cf. Murari 2.8.15–16. "Knowledge" here is the knowledge of Krishna as Bhagavan Himself (cf. en/27, note 2); according to Gaudiya Vaishnava teaching, devotion itself brings both knowledge and detachment (Bhagavata 1.2.7; 11.2.42).

18. Cf. Murari 2.8.18–19.

19. Vv. 80+1 — 80+17 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition gives vv. 80+1 — 80+16 in a footnote as an additional reading. By distributing pieces of the Avadhuta's kaupina to the devotees and giving them the water of His feet to drink, the Lord teaches them to honour Nityananda as the supreme guru (cf. the Chaitanya-bhagavata, Madhya-khanda, where the Lord likewise has the devotees tie pieces of Nityananda's kaupina on their heads). Shachi recognizes in Nityananda her elder son Vishvarupa: according to Gaudiya Vaishnava understanding, Nityananda is Balarama Himself and Vishvarupa an expansion of Sankarshana, and tradition holds that Vishvarupa, on leaving this world, entered into Nityananda; cf. also the Chaitanya-bhagavata, where Shachi sees Nityananda and Nimai in a dream as Balarama and Krishna. Vv. 80+10 — 80+11 are not quite clear in either edition (lit. "listen, my father" — an endearment; "Vishvarupa — that son, your uterine..."; "keep my dear Vishvambhara near you"); they are translated by sense.

20. Vv. 81–90 are not in Murari. Nityananda, according to Gaudiya Vaishnava theology, is Balarama, and Vishvarupa too is an expansion of Sankarshana; hence Shachi naturally loves Nityananda as her son.

21. Vv. 91–102 — cf. Murari 2.8.20–29. "The past" is His former pastimes with Krishna as Balarama (in Murari, 2.8.29, the Lord says: "You are My brother who sported in Vrindavana!"). In Murari Nityananda tells no one of what He saw.

22. The six-armed form unites Rama (bow and arrows), Krishna (flute) and Gaura the sannyasi (staff and waterpot); by tradition, the Lord also revealed the same form to Sarvabhauma (en/45, vv. 243–245 and note 22; according to the Chaitanya-charitamrita, Madhya 6, Sarvabhauma sees a four-armed and then a two-armed form). The vision of Radha and Krishna in Gaura: according to Gaudiya Vaishnava theology, Gaura is Radha and Krishna in one body (cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 4; Madhya 8, Ramananda Raya's vision).

23. The song of vv. 106+1 — 106+30 is found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition, where a new section begins at once); the 1903 edition gives it in a footnote as an additional reading. Nityananda sees the six-armed form (see note 22) and then abides in the bhava of Balarama: He calls the cowherd boys and cows of Vraja and asks Kanai (Krishna) for honey. This bhava is His own: according to Gaudiya Vaishnava understanding, Nityananda is Balarama Himself (the comparison "just like the intoxicated Baladeva" in v. 106+7 is poetic). In vv. 106+26 — 106+29 the Lord recalls with Him the pastimes in Vraja, as Krishna with His elder brother.

24. Slapping one's arms (malasat) is the gesture of a wrestler challenging to a fight; this is Balarama's heroic mood.

25. Vv. 106+12 — 106+14 are Lochana Dasa's nagari-bhava motif, here transferred to Nityananda (see en/09, note 9); the subject is the Lord's beauty that captivates hearts, not worldly passion.

26. Honey (madhu) and varuni (106+17) are the intoxicating drink Balarama loves; Nityananda's "intoxication" is the ecstasy of prema, not worldly intoxication (cf. note 12).

Madhya-khanda, part 6 (portion 29)

The section "Meeting with Advaita and Haridasa": the Lord weeps after seeing Krishna in a dream; Nityananda beholds the Lord's forms; Nityananda at Advaita's; Advaita worships the Lord in Srivasa's house; the arrival of Haridasa; Nityananda's kaupina; the Lord vanishes with Srivasa and returns; the greatness of prema

Meeting with Advaita and Haridasa

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. One night, in the third watch, Sriman Mahaprabhu suddenly began to weep; Shachi-devi in alarm asked the reason for His weeping, and Mahaprabhu told His mother how He had seen Krishna in a dream. Sriman Nityananda Prabhu [beheld] the six-armed and other forms of Mahaprabhu; then at Mahaprabhu's command the devotees took Him to Advaita's [house], and there They spent two days in great bliss. [When] Murari [told the Lord] of Nityananda Prabhu's manifestations of prema, [the Lord laughed]. When Advaita [Prabhu], seeing Sriman Mahaprabhu in the house of Srivasa Pandita, worshipped Him, the Vaishnavas [danced in bliss]. [Thakura] Haridasa came [and met the Lord]. When Nityananda Prabhu [was taking leave] of Sriman Mahaprabhu, Mahaprabhu took Nityananda's kaupina [and distributed it] to the devotees, [and they tied it] on their heads. [When the Lord disappeared,] the devotees lamented, and when He returned, they were seized with boundless bliss.¹

1. The summary covers the whole section (vv. 1–109). In the OCR of the edition it is almost illegible (lines of two columns are mixed); it has been restored from the surviving words and from the table of contents in Bhaktisiddhanta's preface (the fifth chapter of the Madhya-khanda); what is restored by sense is in square brackets. The section as a whole follows Murari Gupta (2.9–2.10).

2. The raga is given only in the 1983 edition. The refrain is read after the 1903 edition (in the OCR of Bhaktisiddhanta's edition it is garbled); it refers to the Lord's weeping in vv. 5–12: Gora remembers His former pastimes — the pastimes of Krishna.

3. Vishnu-maya here is the Lord's external energy, which by His will keeps the godless away from Him (cf. en/26, note 17); the Lord Himself is never subject to maya.

4. Vv. 5–14 — cf. Murari 2.9.2–6, where the Lord sees the Boy Krishna in a dream. The request to tell no one: the Lord conceals His intimate bhava.

5. Vv. 15–23 — cf. Murari 2.9.6–11: Nityananda sees the form of Hari with club, discus, conch, flute, bow and lotus, then the four-armed and two-armed forms. The translation of the second line of v. 20 is tentative.

6. Vv. 24–35 — cf. Murari 2.9.13–16. Advaita lived in Shantipura, on the bank of the Ganga. Rama is Sri Rama Pandita; Narayana is an associate of the Lord in Navadvipa.

7. Gadadhara is Radha (en/25, note 8). Narahari Sarakara is Lochana Dasa's guru, and Raghunandana his nephew, both of Shrikhanda; only Lochana Dasa mentions their presence in this scene. In Murari (2.9.17–18) Advaita sees the Lord on the seat of honour in Srivasa's shrine room.

8. Vv. 44–55 — cf. Murari 2.9.17–22. Kaivalya and nirvana are liberation as merging into Brahman; for the devotees it is insignificant beside prema.

9. Vv. 59–65 — cf. Murari 2.10.2–5. Haridasa Thakura is the great devotee of the holy name; the Lord Himself feeds him mahaprasada.

10. Vv. 68–76 — cf. Murari 2.10.6–9. The kaupina is a renunciant's loincloth; the Lord gave the pieces of Nityananda's kaupina to the devotees as a holy relic.

11. Vv. 83–101 — cf. Murari 2.10.10–13: the Lord carries Srivasa away from the circle of dancers and, seeing the devotees' alarm, appears again of Himself. Shachi's lament is only in Lochana Dasa.

12. The devotees ascribe the Lord's return to the grace of Srivasa, whom He had taken with Him: thus the Lord's mercy comes through His devotee.

13. Ananta (Shesha) is an expansion of the Lord; Sanatana is one of the four Kumaras (possibly also an epithet of Shiva, "the eternal Shiva"). Cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Madhya 8–9: even Lakshmi did not attain the rasa of the gopis; the prema that Gaura bestowed is the highest treasure, rare even for the greatest.

Madhya-khanda, part 7 (portion 30)

The section "Pastimes with the Devotees and the Deliverance of Jagai and Madhai": the devotees place on their heads the water of Nityananda's feet; Haridasa in the form of Brahma; the arrival of Advaita; the Lord speaks of the reasons for His descent; He bids the devotees give the holy name from house to house; the sins of Jagai and Madhai; sankirtana through the town; the brothers wound Nityananda; the Lord summons Sudarshana, and Nityananda pleads for the offenders

Pastimes with the Devotees and the Deliverance of Jagai and Madhai

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. One day, when Sriman Mahaprabhu was sporting in the bliss of prema with the devotees headed by Srivasa, Haridasa, Murari and Mukunda, Sriman Nityananda Prabhu came there. At Sriman Mahaprabhu's command the devotees placed on their heads the water of Sriman Nityananda Prabhu's feet and [began] to dance in the bliss of prema. When Haridasa and Sriman Advaita Prabhu came there, [Haridasa] offered Him praise; then Sriman Mahaprabhu rose together with the devotees and showed him due honour, fed him and told him of preaching prema without distinction between the worthy and the unworthy, and commanded His devotees to go from door to door and distribute the holy name and prema. But when the devotees refused, [fearing] two great sinful brahmanas named Jagai and Madhai, Sriman Mahaprabhu Himself glorified before the devotees the greatness of the holy name — for example, the deliverance of the great sinner Ajamila by namabhasa, [the name uttered while intending another,] — and, to deliver these two sons of brahmanas, expressed His wish to go round the town Himself with the devotees, performing kirtana with mridangas and karatalas. Delighted at Sriman Mahaprabhu's words, the devotees all gathered together and began kirtana; all around resounded with the holy name. Hearing the kirtana, Jagai and Madhai in great anger began to abuse Sriman Mahaprabhu in every way; [Sriman Mahaprabhu and] Nityananda by Their own will [paid no heed] and [looked on them with mercy]. At last they struck Sri Nityananda on the head with a shard of a pot. Sriman Mahaprabhu, unable to bear [the insult and pain] of His own [devotee], summoned Sudarshana to destroy those two. Sri Nityananda Prabhu forgave Jagai and Madhai all their offences and begged for their lives, [and Mahaprabhu] cast a merciful glance on them. [By the grace] of Sri Nityananda, Jagai and Madhai were delivered and became great devotees. Then the author glorified the compassion of Nityananda and Mahaprabhu.¹

1. The summary covers the whole section (vv. 1–169); this portion contains vv. 1–126, the rest is in the next. In the OCR of the edition many places are garbled or illegible (part of the summary ended up among the verses); what is restored by sense is in square brackets. Cf. Murari 2.10 and 2.13; Chaitanya-bhagavata, Madhya 13; Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 17.

2. Vv. 2+1 — 2+7 are found only in the 1983 edition (absent from Bhaktisiddhanta's edition); the 1903 edition has them in the main text. Cf. Murari 2.10.16–17, where this play is understood as a repetition of Krishna's play with the gopis' garments; here it is the Lord's playful sport with His intimates, in which He, "who knows every rasa", gives them joy.

3. Vv. 5–23 — cf. Murari 2.10.18–21. Nityananda's swaying gait, red eyes and loud cries are signs of His intoxication with prema (cf. en/28, note 12). The washing of His feet at the Lord's command teaches honour to the Vaishnava: the water of a devotee's feet purifies and bestows prema.

4. In the 1983 edition this couplet stands after Advaita's arrival (vv. 29–30), and the honours and the meal refer to Him (cf. v. 34); in Bhaktisiddhanta's edition it comes before His arrival, so that they may also be referred to Haridasa (cf. Murari 2.10.4, where the Lord feeds Haridasa mahaprasada). We keep the order of the edition.

5. According to Gaudiya Vaishnava tradition, Brahma and Prahlada are united in Haridasa Thakura (Gaura-ganoddesha-dipika); here Brahma manifests in him and praises the Lord with four mouths. Cf. Murari 2.10.24.

6. Vv. 36–41 — the reasons for the Lord's descent: to taste His own bhava and to establish the dharma of the age, the sankirtana of the name (cf. Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 3–4, where the inner reason is to taste Radha's love, and the outer one to spread the holy name and the prema of Vraja). Cf. Gita 4.8 on "destroying irreligion and establishing dharma".

7. Vv. 43–46 — a list of associates; the presence of Narahari and Raghunandana, as above (en/29, note 7), is mentioned only by Lochana Dasa.

8. "Tying it fast" — literally "making a knot (granthi)": perhaps counting the names on knots of a string is also meant.

9. "Masters (thakuras) of Navadvipa" — according to the Chaitanya-bhagavata (Madhya 13), Jagai and Madhai, brothers of a noble brahmana family, were the town's keepers of order (kotwals) and were sunk in vice.
10. V. 62+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives it in a footnote as an additional reading of one printed book. Kayasthas are the caste of scribes. Cf. en/31, v. 148+1.
11. The story of Ajamila is Bhagavata 6.1–2: the dying sinner called his son named Narayana, and even such an utterance of the name — namabhasa, the "shadow of the name", the name directed to another — saved him. Bhaktisiddhanta's summary stresses precisely this.
12. V. 96+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks it).
13. Shani is Saturn, the planet-deity who brings misfortune; "Shani hangs over your life" is a threat: "you are done for".
14. V. 99+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks it).
15. V. 101+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks it); it nearly repeats v. 93.
16. Vv. 102+1 — 102+4 are found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks them). In the 1983 edition v. 103 also differs: "Madhai runs in anger with a stick in his hand", so that Madhai alone throws the shard, while Jagai, touched by Nityananda's gaze, stands rooted to the spot (see note 17).
17. In Bhaktisiddhanta's edition both brothers throw the shard. According to the Chaitanya-bhagavata (Madhya 13), only Madhai struck Nityananda, while Jagai held him back from a second blow and was the first to receive mercy; the 1983 edition is close to this (vv. 102+1 — 102+4 and its reading of v. 103), and there, moreover, Nityananda, heedless of the pain, asks the brothers to sing the name of Hari (vv. 105+1 — 105+5). In Murari (2.13) the Lord promises to deliver Jagai and Madhai at Srivasa's request.
18. Vv. 105+1 — 105+5 are found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks them). Nityananda grieves not over His wound but over the evil plight of the offenders — an image of His unparalleled mercy (see note 23).
19. That is, they have offended a saint — Nityananda, a sannyasi and a Vaishnava; offence to a Vaishnava (vaishnava-aparadha) is the gravest of sins.
20. Nityananda is Balarama, the Lord Himself (Sankarshana, the source of Ananta-Shesha); to spill His blood on the earth is a great offence that threatens the world with calamity.
21. Vv. 111+1 — 111+4 are found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks them). Murari Gupta, according to Gaudiya Vaishnava tradition, is Hanuman (en/24, note 12) — hence his warlike roar.
22. V. 117+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks it); these are the author's words inserted into Nityananda's speech.
23. The Lord's anger at the offenders of His devotee is also a manifestation of His love; and in the age of Kali the Lord takes up no weapons, but delivers by the holy name and prema (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 3, 17). Nityananda's intercession for His offenders is an image of His unparalleled mercy: according to Gaudiya Vaishnava teaching, Nityananda's grace makes no distinction between the worthy and the unworthy (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 5).
24. Vv. 122+1 — 122+2 are found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks them).
25. The son of Rohini is Balarama; thus Lochana Dasa directly calls Nityananda Balarama, as does the whole Gaudiya Vaishnava tradition.
26. Vv. 123+1 — 123+2 are found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks them). In the 1983 edition v. 123 itself also differs: "Hearing Nityananda's words, Lord Gaurachandra began to weep, embracing Nityananda"; and the words "Blessed, blessed is Nityananda, the son of Rohini" stand there after v. 125 as the author's exclamation: "Blessed, blessed is Gaurachandra, the merciful Lord; blessed, blessed is Nityananda, the son of Rohini!" According to Gaudiya Vaishnava teaching, it is by Nityananda's mercy that one obtains Gaura's mercy (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 5, 8).

Madhya-khanda, part 8 (portion 31)

The section "Pastimes with the Devotees and the Deliverance of Jagai and Madhai" (end): the repentance of Jagai and Madhai; the Lord takes their sins upon Himself and embraces them. The section "Wondrous Pastimes of Mahaprabhu in the Bhava of Bhagavan": the poor brahmana Vanamali and his son see Krishna in Vrindavana in the Lord — the "new Creator"; the bhava of Nrisimha in Srivasa's house; the singer of Shiva and the Lord in Shiva's bhava on his shoulders

Wondrous Pastimes of Mahaprabhu in the Bhava of Bhagavan

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. One day, while Sriman Mahaprabhu was joyfully sporting with the devotees, a poor brahmana named Vanamali, a native of East Bengal, came there with his son, and Sriman Mahaprabhu cast a merciful glance upon them. At this they suddenly became mad with the bliss of prema, and when the sankirtana began, they saw Sriman Mahaprabhu right there in the form of Shyamasundara and fainted with supreme bliss; on regaining consciousness they praised Sriman Mahaprabhu, the Giver of prema, and called Him the "new Creator", since, freeing [people] from Vedic rites, He bestows prema on all living beings. Then one day in Srivasa's house, while listening to the hymn "The Thousand Names of Vishnu", [the Lord] suddenly roared in the bhava of Nrisimha; and when everyone in fear began to flee in all directions, He restrained His bhava of Nrisimha. On another day, when a worshipper of Shiva began to sing of Shiva's qualities, Gaurasundara, greatly pleased at hearing the qualities of the [great] devotee Shiva sung, climbed onto his shoulders and danced in the bhava of Shiva. On yet another day, when a brahmana woman touched Sriman Mahaprabhu's feet, Sriman Mahaprabhu, deeply grieved, leapt into the Ganga; the devotees drew Him out onto the bank and satisfied Sriman Mahaprabhu with all kinds of prayers and praises. Then Sriman Mahaprabhu taught that everyone who has obtained the rare human body must serve Hari, and that without serving Hari there is no meaning in human birth; [then are described] the embrace [of Murari], [his] humble words, the manifestation [by the Lord] of His divine form, the bathing [of the Lord] with Ganga water by Srivasa Pandita, the cleaning of the temple together with the devotees headed by Advaita Acharya, and so on; [at the end] the author, singing Gaura's qualities, instructs everyone to serve Gaura.⁸

Raga dhanashi; refrain: "O Lord, Dvijachand! To deliver the world He lays many snares"

Madhya-khanda, part 9 (portion 32)

The section "Wondrous Pastimes of Mahaprabhu in the Bhava of Bhagavan" (end): a brahmana takes the dust of the Lord's feet, and the Lord leaps into the Ganga; Nityananda brings Him out onto the bank; the Lord goes off to the northern bank and returns at the devotees' entreaties; in Srivasa's house — words on serving Krishna and on His departure; Murari, embraced by the Lord, recites the verse of Sudama; the Lord reveals His radiance, and Srivasa bathes Him; the Lord and the devotees clean the temple; Lochana Dasa calls on all to serve Gaura. The section "The Leper's Release from Sin and the Bhava of Baladeva": a leper who had offended Srivasa begs the Lord for deliverance; the Lord rejects him and delivers him only when Srivasa forgives

Refrain: "Who does not weep at the qualities of my Gauranga? He has bound the minds of all living beings with prema"

The Leper's Release from Sin and the Bhava of Baladeva

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. One day, when Sriman Mahaprabhu was walking with the devotees, absorbed in prema, a brahmana afflicted with leprosy on that road appealed to Sriman Mahaprabhu for his deliverance. Sriman Mahaprabhu at first rejected him as an offender against a Vaishnava, then told him to beg Srivasa Pandita's forgiveness for his offence, and at last, freeing him from the offence against the Vaishnava, bestowed prema on him. A certain brahmana wished to see Gaurasundara's dancing, but the devotees of Gaura headed by Srivasa did not admit him, and his desire was not fulfilled; so one day, seeing Sriman Mahaprabhu bathing in the Ganga, he angrily cursed Him: "May Your worldly happiness be destroyed!" Sriman Mahaprabhu accepted the brahmana's curse with joy. Then the brahmana came to his senses and in fear began to praise Sriman Mahaprabhu, and Sriman Mahaprabhu consoled him, revealing that the brahmana's curse was what He Himself desired. Then are described wondrous pastimes: Sriman Mahaprabhu in the bhava of Balarama cries out "Give Me honey!"; with the devotees, performing kirtana, He goes to the house of Sri Advaita Acharya; the next day, when He has fainted in the bhava of Baladeva, Gadadhara comes and He restrains His bhava; the devotees headed by Acharyaratna arrive; Srivasa and the other devotees see Sriman Mahaprabhu in the form of Baladeva; He goes with the devotees to bathe in the Ganga, and so on.¹¹

Refrain: "Hari, Rama, Narayana — Shachi's darling, golden Gora!"

1. The text has "a brahmana" (so also the 1983 edition); in Bhaktisiddhanta's summary (en/31, at the head of the section "Wondrous Pastimes of Mahaprabhu in the Bhava of Bhagavan") and in Murari (2.11.21) it is a brahmana woman. The Lord, playing the role of a devotee, grieves at having received an honour befitting the Lord. Vv. 64–79 — cf. Murari 2.11.19–25.

2. V. 77+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives it in a footnote as an additional reading (in another form: "Gadadhara and Narahari weep, holding the Lord; Vasudeva and Jagadananda weep, gazing at the Lord").
 3. Vv. 80–92 — cf. Murari 2.12.1–4. Vijaya is probably Vijaya Dasa, a devotee of Navadvipa and copyist of books.
 4. The Lord is already thinking of sannyasa. Vv. 93–102 — cf. Murari 2.12.5–8.
 5. Bhagavata 10.81.16 — the words of the poor brahmana Sudama whom Krishna embraced; Murari applies them to himself. In the edition the verse is followed by Bhaktisiddhanta's anvaya and translation: "Where am I, a sinful pauper, and where is Krishnachandra, full of all opulence! Only because I am the lowest of brahmanas did Bhagavan embrace me with both arms." Cf. Murari 2.12.9–11.
 6. Literally "I am Chidananda": the Lord's body is not material — it is consciousness and bliss (cf. Murari 2.12.13: "this body is the highest concentration of being and consciousness"). Vv. 107–111 — cf. Murari 2.12.12–15.
 7. Vv. 114–123 — cf. Murari 2.13 (the Lord and the devotees clean the temple). Narahari, Raghunandana and Mukunda Dasa in this list appear only in Lochana Dasa (cf. en/30, note 7); "Rama" is Sri Rama Pandita, Srivasa's brother.
 8. A haddipa is a sweeper of the lowest caste of scavengers. The Lord Himself takes on the lowliest service, teaching humility and service to the Deity; cf. the cleaning of the Gundicha temple (Chaitanya-charitamrita, Madhya 12).
 9. Vv. 126–133: the other avatars return service for service (cf. Gita 4.11: "as they surrender to Me, so I reciprocate"), while Gaura Himself goes from house to house offering prema even to those who do not serve Him.
 10. V. 133+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks it).
 11. The summary covers both this section (the leper, vv. 1–44; the brahmana's curse, vv. 45–69) and the pastimes in the bhava of Balarama, which in the text of the edition already form the next section. The OCR of the summary is garbled in places; gaps are filled from the table of contents in the edition's preface. Cf. Murari 2.13; Chaitanya-charitamrita, Adi 17. In the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Adi 17) this is the brahmana Gopala Chapala, who slandered Srivasa and was struck with leprosy; the Lord refused him and later told him to beg Srivasa's forgiveness.
 12. Vv. 11–19 speak of the gravity of offence against a Vaishnava (vaishnava-aparadha): the Lord does not forgive it Himself until the offended Vaishnava forgives. The words "the Vaishnava is My life within" convey the teaching that the devotee is dearer to the Lord than His own body (cf. Bhagavata 9.4.68: "the sadhus are My heart, and I am the heart of the sadhus").
 13. The Lord is the independent Master, but of His own will He submits to the love of His devotees (bhakta-adhina); therefore He places the Vaishnava's forgiveness above His own.
 14. In the 1983 edition this story is given in a different redaction (the 1903 edition agrees with Bhaktisiddhanta; we follow Bhaktisiddhanta's edition). Instead of vv. 20–24 it has: "Hearing this, the brahmana was filled with anguish and, falling to the ground, began to plead piteously: 'Glory, glory to Mahaprabhu, be merciful to me! The Vedas call You the Purifier of the fallen. If You bear the name Purifier of the fallen, You will surely deliver me. How many great sinners You have delivered — deliver me too, O lotus-eyed One! There is no sinner in the three worlds equal to me; I am suffering — free [me] from leprosy.'" V. 25 there reads: "Then compassion awoke in the Lord's heart, yet He is subject to the Vaishnavas, not independent." Instead of v. 34: "The Lord says: 'Srinivasa, listen to Me: take everyone and go to where the leper is.' Then all went there together joyfully and sprinkled him with the water of Srivasa's feet. As soon as the drops of that water touched his body, his body shone like gold and the disease vanished. Then his heart was filled with great bliss, and he joyfully began to dance, crying 'Hari, Hari!'" From v. 35 on the two redactions agree. The sense is the same: an offence against a Vaishnava is removed only by the mercy of the offended Vaishnava himself (the water of his feet).
 15. V. 36+1 is found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks it).
 16. "Friend of Gadadhara" — a name of Gaura, inseparable from Gadadhara Pandita (in the Gaudiya Vaishnava understanding, Radha; en/25, note 7).
 17. Vv. 43+1 — 43+2 are found only in the 1983 edition (the 1903 edition lacks them).

Madhya-khanda, part 10 (portion 33)

The section "The Leper's Release from Sin and the Bhava of Baladeva" (end): a brahmana who was not admitted to see the Lord's dancing curses Him — "Be outside samsara!" — and the Lord accepts the curse as a blessing. The section "Shachi's Grief over the Brahmana's Curse" (only in the 1983 edition): Shachi in despair, the Lord consoles her. The section "Mahaprabhu Distributes Prema in His Bhavas": the Lord in the bhava of Balarama demands honey; the vision of Halayudha and His words to Gadadhara; the fragrance of varuni and Balarama's divine companions; the Lord tells of Varaha and Halayudha and asks for His flute

Mahaprabhu Distributes Prema in His Bhavas

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. Sriman Mahaprabhu [one day] danced together [with the devotees] in the bhava of Varaha. Then, [saying] that Shiva, Shuka, Narada, Brahma and other sages worship God by song, that the best [dharma] of the Kali age is the sankirtana of the name, and that [Gaurahari] has descended to distribute this dharma at the door of every living being, Sriman Mahaprabhu ordered the devotees headed by Advaita Acharya [to preach it] and, singing with His own the stories of the gopis, in the bhava of a gopi He went with sankirtana to the house of Chandrashekhara Acharya; [Srivasa] Pandita was filled with the bhava of Narada. In His bhava Sriman Mahaprabhu glorified before all the greatness of Gadadhara Pandita and revealed that he is Radhika, [worshipped by] Brahma, Shiva, Narada and others. Then Thakura Haridasa [came], and all the Vaishnavas joined them in the sankirtana of the name and prema. [Dancing] in the bhava of a gopi, [the Lord] suddenly became filled with the bhava of His majesty; then the devotees saw Him in the form of Lakshmi and offered praise to Lakshmi. [In the bhava of Lakshmi the Lord] distributed the prema of service; at that time someone came and loudly called Sriman Mahaprabhu "Prabhu!" — and [the Lord, giving up] that bhava, in the bhava of Ishvara distributed prema to all.⁶

Raga vibhasa; disha: "Glory, glory to Gaurachand, risen in Nadia in the Kali age!" (murchha); refrain: "Hear the story of my Lord, whose qualities have lit up the three worlds! Hear the story of Gaurangachand!"

parasange haya bhorā, hena bhakti kaila tārā, kathāmātra se ābeśa dhare || 96 ||*

Word for word: kamala yahara pada — whose feet Kamala; seva kare unamata — serves in rapture; hena prabhu gopikara tare — such a Lord, for the gopis' sake; parasange haya bhora — is overwhelmed at the mention; hena bhakti kaila tara — such devotion they showed; katha-matra se avesha dhare — at mere words takes on that bhava

96. The Lord whose feet Kamala serves in rapture — such a Lord, for the gopis' sake, is overwhelmed at the mere mention [of them]: such was the devotion they showed!
At mere words He takes on their bhava.

śrīcandraśekharaścārya-ghare | nācaye ānande bholā, śrībāsa henai belā, nārada-ābeśa bhela tāre || 97 ||*

Word for word: tabe vishvambhara hari — then Vishvambhara Hari; gopikara vesha dhari — putting on a gopi's dress; shri-chandrashekharaacharya-ghare — in Sri Chandrashekhara Acharya's house; nachaye anande bhola — dances, lost in bliss; shrivasa henai bela — Srivasa at that very hour; narada-avesha bhela tare — the bhava of Narada came upon him

97. Then Vishvambhara Hari, putting on a gopi's dress, in the house of Sri Chandrashekhara Acharya dances, lost in bliss; and at that very hour
the bhava of Narada came upon Srivasa.⁸

Word for word: prabhure pranama kare — bows to the Lord; vinaya-vachane bole — says humbly; dasa kari janiha amare — know me as a servant; emana kahiya vani — having spoken such words; tabe sei maha-muni — then that great sage; gadadhara-panditere bole — speaks to Gadadhara Pandita

98. He bows to the Lord and humbly says:

"Know me as Your servant."

Having spoken these words, that great sage then addresses Gadadhara Pandita:

শুনহ গোপিকা তুমি, যে কিছু কহিয়ে আমি,
তোর পূর্বকথা কিছু জান । অপূর্ব কহিয়ে আমি, জগতে দুর্লভ তুমি, tora pūrbakathā kichu jāna | apūrba kahiye āmi, jagate durlabha tumi,

tora kathā śuna sābadhāna || 99 ||*

Word for word: shunaha gopika tumi — listen, gopi; ye kichhu kahiye ami — to what I say; tora purva-katha kichhu jana — do you know anything of your past; apurva kahiye ami — I tell a wonder; jagate durlabha tumi — you are rare in the world; tora katha shuna savadhana — hear attentively about yourself

99. "Listen, gopi, to what I shall say:

do you know anything of your past?

I shall tell a wonder: you are rare in the world — hear attentively about yourself.

gokule janmilā jane jane | chāḍi' nija patibrata, sebā kaila abirata, abhimata pāñā br̥ndābane || 100 ||*

Word for word: shuna to-sabhara katha — hear about all of you; ami kahi guna-gatha — I tell your qualities; gokule janmila jane jane — you were born one by one in Gokula; chhadi nija pativrata — leaving your fidelity to husbands; seva kaila avirata — served unceasingly; abhimata pana vrindavane — attaining your desire in Vrindavana

100. Hear about all of you — I shall sing your qualities:

you were born, one and all, in Gokula;

leaving your fidelity to your husbands, you served [Krishna] unceasingly and attained your heart's desire in Vrindavana.⁹

প্রধান প্রকৃতি তুমি, কৃষ্ণশক্তি রাধা তুমি, *pradhāna prakṛti tumi, kṛṣṇaśakti rādhā tumi,

ki jāni tā kahibāre āmi || 101 ||*

Word for word: pradhana prakriti tumi — you are the first prakriti (shakti); krishna-shakti radha tumi — you are Radha, Krishna's shakti; ki jani — what do I know; ta kahibare ami — for me to tell of it

101. You are the first of prakritis, you are Radha, Krishna's shakti:¹⁰ what do I know, that I could tell of it?

রমনীর শিরোমণি, কৃষ্ণপ্রেম-সোহাগিনী, *ramaṇīra śiromaṇi, kṛṣṇaprema-sohāginī,

tora tattva ki balite jāni || 102 ||*

Word for word: ramanira shiromani — crown of women; krishna-prema-sohagini — favoured in Krishna's love; tora tattva — your truth; ki balite jani — how could I know to tell 102. Crown of all women, the favoured one in Krishna's love — how could I tell your truth?

parama nigūṛha tina-loke | brahmā, maheśvara debā, lakhimī ananta kibā,
tāke adhika parasāda toke || 103 ||*

Word for word: enchhana karile bhakti — you showed such devotion; keho nahe sama-yukti — none is equal; parama nigudha tina-loke — the supreme secret in the three worlds; brahma maheshvara deva — Brahma, the god Maheshvara; lakhimi ananta kiba — Lakshmi, and even Ananta; take adhika parasada toke — more grace than to them — to you

103. You showed such devotion that none can equal [you]; it is the supreme secret of the three worlds.
Brahma, the god Maheshvara, Lakshmi and even Ananta have less grace than you.

Word for word: prahlada-naradadika — Prahlada, Narada and others; sanatana adi shuka — Sanatana, Shuka and the rest; na janaye tora bhakti-lesha — do not know a drop of your devotion; trailokya-lakhimi-pati — the Husband of the Lakshmi of the three worlds; chahe tora piriti — longs for your love; sva-aṅge dharaye bara-vesha — puts a lovely dress on His own body

104. Prahlada, Narada and others, Sanatana, Shuka and the rest know not a drop of your devotion.

The Husband of the Lakshmi of the three worlds longs for your love — and puts this lovely dress on His own body.¹¹

Word for word: lakhimi yahara dasi — He whose maidservant is Lakshmi; tora prema-pratyashi — hoping for your prema; hridaye dharaye anuraga — holds longing in His heart; sakala-bhuvana-pati — the Lord of all worlds; bhulaila se piriti — you enchanted with that love; dhani dhani tohari sohaga — blessed, blessed is your tenderness

105. He whose maidservant is Lakshmi, hoping for your prema, holds in His heart a longing [for you];

the Lord of all the worlds you have enchanted with that love — blessed, blessed is your tenderness!

piriti bāndhili bhālamate | uddhaba-akrūra-ādi, sabhe tora padasebī, anugata nā chāriha cite || 106 ||*

Word for word: tora se janili tattva — you have known the truth; prabhu-marma-mahattva — the greatness of the Lord's inmost heart; piriti bandhili bhalamate — bound [Him] fast with love; uddhava-akrura-adi — Uddhava, Akrura and others; sabhe tora pada-sevi — all serve your feet; anugata na chhadiha chite — do not forsake your followers in your heart

106. You have known the truth — the greatness of the Lord's inmost heart — and have bound [Him] fast with love.

Uddhava, Akrura and the rest — all serve your feet:

do not forsake in your heart those who follow you."

Word for word: eteka kahila vani — spoke such words; shrinivasa dvija-mani — Srinivasa, jewel of brahmanas; shuni anandita sarvajana — hearing, all rejoiced; sakala vaishnava mili — all the Vaishnavas together; sabhe kare kolakuli — embrace one another; dekhi vishvambhara-charana — gazing at Vishvambhara's feet

107. Such words spoke Srinivasa, the jewel of brahmanas; hearing them, all rejoiced.
All the Vaishnavas together embrace one another, gazing at Vishvambhara's feet.

Word for word: nachaye anande bhora — they dance, lost in bliss; preme garagara tara — they overflow with prema; henakale aila haridasa — at that hour Haridasa came; danda eka kari kare — taking a staff in his hand; sammukhe dandaiya bole — standing in front, he says; guna gaya parama ullasa — sings the qualities in supreme delight

108. They dance, lost in bliss, overflowing with prema — and at that hour Haridasa came.
Staff in hand, he stood in front and proclaims, singing [the Lord's] qualities in supreme delight:¹²

hariguṇa-gāṇe bhorā, dunayāṇe bahe dhārā, ānande phiraye cāripāṣe || 109 ||

Word for word: hari-guṇa-sankirtana — the sankirtana of Hari's qualities; kara bhai anukshana — perform, brothers, without cease; iha bali atta atta hase — so saying, laughs aloud; hari-guṇa-gane bhora — lost in singing Hari's qualities; dunayane bahe dhara — streams flow from his eyes; anande phiraye charipashe — in joy turns to every side

109. "Brothers, perform the sankirtana of Hari's qualities without cease!" — so saying, he laughs aloud.
Lost in singing Hari's qualities, he sheds streams from his eyes and in joy turns round to every side.

Word for word: shuni haridasa-vani — hearing Haridasa's words; sakala vaishnava-mani — all the jewel-like Vaishnavas; amrite sinchila saba ga — [as if] their whole bodies were sprinkled with nectar; harashete nache gaya — in joy they dance and sing; majhe nache goraraya — in the midst dances Gora-raya; kandiya dharaye ranga pa — weeping, they clasp His reddish feet

110. Hearing Haridasa's words, all the jewel-like Vaishnavas — as if their whole bodies were sprinkled with nectar:
in joy they dance and sing, in their midst dances Gora-raya, and, weeping, they clasp His reddish feet.

Word for word: tabe sarva-guṇa-dhama — then the abode of all virtues; advaita-acharya nama — named Advaita Acharya; aila saba vaishnavera raja — came, the king of all Vaishnavas; rupe alokita mahi — the earth lit by His beauty; sammukhe danday chahi — stands in front gazing; prabhu-amshe janma maha-teja — born of the Lord's portion, of great might

111. Then came the abode of all virtues, named Advaita Acharya, the king of all the Vaishnavas;

His beauty lit up the earth; He stands in front and gazes — born of the Lord's portion, of great might.¹³

Word for word: hari hari bali dake — calls "Hari, Hari!"; chamaka lagila loke — the people start;
anande nachaye premabhare — dances in joy, full of prema; pulakita saba ga — the whole body thrills; apada-mastaka ya — from feet to head; prema-bari dunayane jhare — tears of prema stream from His eyes

112. "Hari, Hari!" He calls, and the people start;
in joy He dances, filled with prema;
His whole body thrills from feet to head, tears of prema stream from His eyes.

Word for word: vishvambhara-shri-charane — at Vishvambhara's holy feet; neharai ghane ghane — gazes again and again; hunkare mare malasata — roars and slaps His arms; sakala vaishnava mili — all the Vaishnavas together; premera pasara dali — baskets of the wares of prema; pasarila aparupa hata — spread out a wondrous market

113. Again and again He gazes at Vishvambhara's holy feet, roars and slaps His arms like a wrestler;
all the Vaishnavas together, opening baskets of the wares of prema,
spread out a wondrous market.
সকল বৈষ্ণবগণে, অতি আনন্দিত মনে,

Word for word: ekthane kahiba shuna — now I shall tell, listen; savadhane sarvajana — all, attentively; gopika-avesha-basha prabhu — the Lord in the sway of a gopi's bhava; hridaye kanchali pare — puts a bodice on His breast; shankha-kankana kare — conch bangles on His wrists; duti ankhi rase dubudubu — both eyes drowning in rasa

115. And now I shall tell — listen, all, attentively:
the Lord, in the sway of a gopi's bhava, puts a bodice on His breast, conch-shell bangles on His wrists;
both His eyes are drowning in rasa.

Word for word: patta-basana pare — wears silk; nupura charane dhare — anklets on the feet; muthe pai kshina majhakhani — a slender waist a fist could clasp; rupe trijagata mohe — the beauty charms the three worlds; upama dibara kahe — to what to compare; gopi-veshe thakura apani — the Thakura Himself in a gopi's dress

116. He wears silk, anklets on His feet,
His waist so slender a fist could clasp it;
His beauty charms the three worlds — to what can it be compared? — the Thakura Himself in a gopi's dress.¹⁴

Word for word: alaukika anga-teje — from the unearthly radiance of His body; vayu bahe malayaje — a Malaya breeze blows; tahe nava malatira mala — on Him a garland of fresh malati; sumeru-shikhare yena — as on the peak of Sumeru; suradhuni-jala hena — the waters of the heavenly river; gora-ange bahe dui dhara — two streams flow on Gora's body

117. From the unearthly radiance of His body a Malaya breeze blows, on Him is a garland of fresh malati;
like the waters of the heavenly river on the peak of Sumeru, two streams [of tears] flow over Gora's body.

Word for word: tabe stava kaila sabhe — when all had offered praise; sura-kṛta maha-stave — with great hymns composed by the gods; tushta hañā bole adya-shakti — pleased, the primal Shakti says; devata-asane vasi — seated on the Deity's seat; kahe lahu lahu hasi — says with a soft smile; dekhibare ailun prema-bhakti — I have come to see prema-bhakti

122. When all had offered praise with the great hymns of the gods, the primal Shakti, pleased, speaks;
seated on the Deity's seat, She says with a soft smile:
"I have come to see [your] prema-bhakti.

তো-সভার নৃত্যগীতে, আইলুঁ দেখিবার চিতে, কহিলুঁ আপন অভিলাষ । এ বোল শুনিঞা পুন, কহে সেই সব জন,

*to-sabhāra nṛtyagīte, āilum dekhībāra cite,
kahilum āpana abhilāṣa |
e bola śuniñā puna, kahe sei saba jana, nijabhakti kara parakāśa || 123 ||*

Word for word: to-sabhara nṛtya-gite — your dancing and singing; ailun dekhibara chite — I came wishing to see; kahilun apana abhilasha — I have told My desire; e bola shuniña puna — hearing this, again; kahe sei saba jana — all those people say; nija-bhakti kara parakasha — reveal devotion to Yourself

123. I have come wishing to see your dancing and singing —
I have told you My desire."
Hearing this, all those people say again:
"Reveal [in us] devotion to You."

এ বর মাগিল যবে, আদ্যাশক্তি বোলে তবে, śuna śuna śuna sarvajane |

āmi caṇḍī paracaṇḍa, tomārao habe daṇḍa, ei bara dila sarvajane || 124 ||*

Word for word: e bara magila yabe — when they asked this boon; adya-shakti bole tabe — then the primal Shakti says; shuna shuna shuna sarvajane — listen, listen, listen, all; ami chandi parachanda — I am Chandi, the fierce; tomaro habe danda — you too shall have the rod; ei bara dila sarvajane — this boon She gave to all

124. When they asked this boon, the primal Shakti said:

"Listen, listen, listen, all!

I am Chandi, the fierce: you too shall have the rod!" — such was the boon She gave to all.¹⁷

এ বোল শুনিঞা তবে, পরণাম করে সবে,

Word for word: e bola shuniña tabe — hearing this; paranama kare sabhe — all bow down; dandavata bhumite padiya — falling to the ground like a stick; tabe sei ishvari — then that Mistress; haridasa-kare dhari — taking Haridasa by the hand; kole vasaila se hasiya — smiling, seated him on Her lap

125. Hearing this, all bow down, falling to the ground like a stick.

Then that Mistress, taking Haridasa by the hand, smiling, seated him on Her lap.

বসিয়া তাহার কোলে, হরিদাস ঘন দোলে,

Word for word: vasiya tahara kole — sitting on Her lap; haridasa ghana dole — Haridasa rocks to and fro; pancha-barishera yena shishu — like a child of five; ashcharya dekhiya mane — seeing the marvel; anandita sarvajane — all rejoiced at heart; harisha paila pakshi pashu — birds and beasts were glad

126. Sitting on Her lap, Haridasa rocks to and fro like a child of five.

Seeing this marvel, all rejoiced at heart;

even the birds and beasts were glad.

এইক্ষণে একজন, কহেন এই বচন,

Word for word: eikshane ekajana — at that moment someone; kahena ei vachana — speaks these words; murarিকে chaha daya-dithi — look on Murari with a merciful glance; e tomara nija-dasa — he is Your own servant; e bola shuniña hasa — hearing this, a smile; amiya-adhika lahu mithi — soft, sweeter than nectar

127. At that moment someone spoke these words:

"Cast a merciful glance on Murari:
he is Your own servant." Hearing this, [She] smiled softly, sweeter than nectar.

Word for word: nayana karuna-jale — the eyes in tears of compassion; prema chhalachhala kare — brim with prema; karuna aruna mukha-chandra — the tender moon of the face grew red; henakale shachi-devi — at that hour Shachi-devi; apane shri-pada sevi — herself serving the holy feet; premanande bhela paratantra — was overcome by the bliss of prema

128. Her eyes are full of tears of compassion, brimming with prema, the tender moon of Her face grew red.
At that hour Shachi-devi, herself serving [His] holy feet, was overcome by the bliss of prema.

তবে সেই কাত্যায়নী, সর্বজন কাছে আনি',

Word for word: tabe sei katyayani — then that Katyayani; sarvajana kachhe ani — drawing all near; nija suta kari hena mane — regards them as Her sons; matri-sneha kare loke — shows the people a mother's tenderness; sarvajana dekhi take — all, looking at Her; prema-jale bhare dunayane — fill their eyes with tears of prema

129. Then that Katyayani, drawing all near, regards them as Her own sons;
She shows the people a mother's tenderness, and all, looking at Her, fill their eyes with tears of prema.¹⁸

হেনকালে সেইক্ষণে, আসি' এক ব্রাহ্মণে,

Word for word: henakale seikshane — at that hour, at that moment; asi eka brahmane — a brahmana came; prabhu bali dake uchchanade — called loudly "Prabhu!"; arta-jana-arti dekhi — seeing the suffering of the sufferer; chhalachhala kare ankhi — the eyes filled with tears; bhai gela ishvara-unmade — He entered the rapture of Ishvara

130. At that hour, at that very moment, a brahmana came and loudly called: "Prabhu!"
Seeing the suffering of the sufferer, His eyes filled with tears, and He entered the rapture [of the bhava] of Ishvara.

nijaguṇe kare ṭhākurala |
sarvajana beṛi beṛi, daṇḍa-paraṇāma kari',
dekhi' īśvara-ābeśa punarbāra || 131 ||

Word for word: apani ishvara haña — becoming Ishvara Himself; nija-prema prakashiña — revealing His prema; nija-gune kare thakurala — shows His lordship by His qualities; sarvajana bedi bedi — all, surrounding Him; danda-paranama kari — prostrating; dekhi ishvara-avesha punarbara — seeing again the bhava of Ishvara

131. Becoming Ishvara Himself, revealing His prema,
He shows His lordship by His own qualities.

All, surrounding Him, prostrated themselves, seeing again [in Him] the bhava of Ishvara.

yata jana saṅge yāya, dekhe yena gorārāya,
kevala pracaṇḍa daṇḍa dhare || 132 ||*

Word for word: ei-mate saba nishe — thus the whole night; gonaiya rasaveshe — spending in the rapture of rasa; prabhate chalila nija-ghare — at dawn He went home; yata jana sange yaya — all who go with Him; dekhe yena goraraya — see as if Gora-raya; kevala prachanda danda dhare — holds a fierce rod

132. Thus, spending the whole night in the rapture of rasa, at dawn He went home.
All who went with Him saw Gora-raya
as if holding a fierce rod.¹⁹

Word for word: henamate gaurahari — thus Gaurahari; karuna prakasha kari — revealing mercy; akhila bhuvane eka-karta — the one Maker in all the worlds; karuna-karana asi — coming for mercy's sake; dina-bhava parakashi — showing humility; ape kare prithivira chinta — Himself cares for the earth

133. Thus Gaurahari, the one Maker of all the worlds, revealed His mercy;
having come for mercy's sake and showing humility,
He Himself cares for the earth.

Word for word: hena aparupa katha — such a wondrous story; shuniña — hearing; samsara-vyatha — the pain of samsara; na ghuchaye yahara antare — is not removed from whose heart; na ghuchiba konakale — will never be removed; ye ithi samshaya dhare — whoever doubts this; tare dhika — shame on him; nahika pamare — no [worse] wretch

134. If anyone, hearing so wondrous a story, is not freed in his heart from the pain of samsara — he will never be freed from it; and whoever doubts this — shame on him: there is no worse wretch.

Word for word: yukti anubhava shastra — reason, experience and scripture; tine kahe ei-matra — the three say just this; sakshate na dekhi parachara — one does not see it openly proclaimed; vichara na kare iha — who does not ponder this; na chhila se haila siya (?) — what was not has come to be; kemane tara haiba nistara — how will he be delivered

135. Reason, experience and scripture — all three say just this, though one does not see it openly proclaimed; whoever does not ponder this — that what never was has come to be — how will such a one be delivered?²⁰

Word for word: gora-avatara hena — such an avatara as Gora; karuna prakasha yena — such a revelation of mercy; nahi haya na haiba ara — is not and will not be again; ye balu se balu loke — let people say what they will; anubhava kahi take — I tell them what I have realised; mane mane karuka vichara — let them reflect within

136. Such an avatara as Gora, such a revelation of mercy, has never been and never will be.

Let people say what they will — I tell them what I have realised:
let them reflect on it within themselves.

Word for word: ei-matra mora chinta — this alone is my care; antare antara-vyatha — a pain deep in the heart; hena avatara yaya pachhe — lest such an avatara pass by; ta lagi kandaye hiya — for this the heart weeps; kahare kahiba iha — to whom shall I tell this; guna gaya e lochana dase — this Lochana Dasa sings the qualities

137. One care I have, a pain deep in my heart:

lest such an avatara pass [people] by.

For this my heart weeps — to whom shall I tell it?

This Lochana Dasa sings [Gora's] qualities.

Madhya-khanda, part 12 (portion 35)

The section "Before Sannyasa": seven days of radiance in Chandrashekhara's house; Srivasa asks about the dharmas of the yugas, and the Lord proclaims sankirtana; the Lord's longing for Vrindavana and Murari's persuasion; the dream of the sannyasa mantra; the arrival of Keshava Bharati; Mukunda reveals the Lord's resolve to the devotees; the devotees' lament and the Lord's answer: He is burning in separation from Krishna

Before Sannyasa

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. In answer to Srivasa Pandita's question Sriman Mahaprabhu told of the dharmas of the four yugas [and revealed that] in the Kali age [the best dharma] is the sankirtana of the name; [then,] in the bhava of Radha, He became agitated, [crying,] "Where is Vrindavana? Where is Lalita? Where is Govardhana?" Then, at Murari's words, Sriman Mahaprabhu grew calm and [again] gave Himself fully to [kirtana] with the Vaishnavas, and one day He told [His mother] that He had received the sannyasa mantra in a dream. Some days later Keshava Bharati came to Sriman Mahaprabhu's house, and the Lord received him fittingly. [At the sight of the sannyasi] Sriman Mahaprabhu's separation from Krishna became unbearable. Learning that Mahaprabhu would take sannyasa, the devotees, in fear of the coming separation from Him, began to lament bitterly, and the Lord, telling them [of the pain of separation from Krishna and of the nature of samsara], consoled them.¹

Word for word: jagate yateka — everything in the world; dekha aparupa — that you see as wondrous; krishna-avaraka sabhe — all of it hides Krishna; tabahi sarthaka — only then meaningful; manusha-janama — is human birth; shri-krishna bhajiye yabe — when one serves Sri Krishna

139. Everything wondrous you see in the world —

all of it hides Krishna;
human birth has meaning only then when one serves Sri Krishna.

Word for word: manusha-janama — human birth; durlabha janiye — is known to be rare; krishna bhajibara tare — for serving Krishna; hena deha pana — having obtained such a body; shri-krishna chhadiya — abandoning Sri Krishna; mariye michha-samsare — they die in false samsara

140. Human birth, as is known, is rare —

[it is given] for serving Krishna;
yet, having obtained such a body, people abandon Sri Krishna and die in this false samsara.

Word for word: krishnera charita — Krishna's deeds; gaun avirata — to sing unceasingly; badane lagaye sadhe — the lips long; shri-mukha-kamale — on His lotus face; nayana-yugale — the two eyes; hiya bandhon shri-pade — I shall bind My heart to His holy feet

142. To sing Krishna's deeds unceasingly — this is what My lips long for;
My eyes — on His lotus face,
My heart I shall bind to His holy feet.

143. What shall I say of My heart? Not seeing Krishna, the fire of separation burns in its depths;
fallen into the ocean of samsara, into the deep,
My mind is distraught.

144. He alone is father and mother, he alone is a deity, he alone a guru and friend, who lets one hear and tells of Krishna, who brings one to serve Krishna's feet.

157. Shachi's heart beats anxiously, she finds no peace.
Lochana says: how can He wish to leave such an ocean of love?

Mother Shachi's Grief

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. Hearing from people that Srīman Mahāprabhu would soon take sannyasa, mother Shachi, beside herself with grief, weeping, earnestly begged the Lord not to take sannyasa in His youth but to keep the dharma of a householder. Then Srīman Mahāprabhu, telling [her the story] of Dhruva and of the instruction his mother gave him — to serve Krishna — [revealed to her] that apart from Krishna the living being has no other refuge; that therefore whoever teaches one to serve Krishna is one's true father, mother, brother and friend; that those intoxicated by the conceit of "I" and "mine" are the greatest fools; and that service to Krishna is the meaning of human life. Having declared this, He instructed her to give up attachment to her son such as souls in the grip of maya have, and vowed that, not like other sons [who bring their mothers] silver, gold and other perishable things, He would bring her the eternal, highest good — prema. Then Gaurahari showed Himself to her in the form of Sri Krishna and dispelled mother Shachi's grief.⁴

Word for word: abhagira udare — from an unfortunate woman's womb; putra janma haila tora dhruva — my son Dhruva, you were born; krishna-seva nahi kari ami — I did not serve Krishna; bapera dulala naha — you are not your father's darling; simhasane chadite chaha — you want to climb the throne; hatabhaga na janmile tumi — poor child, better you had not been born

65. "From the womb of an unfortunate woman, my son Dhruva, you were born: I did not serve Krishna.
You are not your father's darling, yet you want to climb onto the throne — poor child, better you had not been born [to me]!

না কান্দ না কান্দ ধ্রুব, তোরে কহি অনুভব,

শুন শুন আমার বচন ।

তোমার সতাই পূর্বে, কৃষ্ণ আরাধিয়াছিল,

সৌভাগ্য হইল তে-কারণ ॥ ৬৬ ॥ nā kānda nā kānda dhruva, tore kahi anubhaba,

śuna śuna āmāra bacana |

tomāra satāi pūrbe, kṛṣṇa ārādhiyāchila,

saubhāgya haila te-kāraṇa || 66 ||

Word for word: na kanda na kanda dhruva — do not cry, Dhruva; tore kahi anubhava — I tell you what I know; shuna shuna amara vachana — listen to my words; tomara satai purve — your stepmother once; krishna aradhiyachhila — worshipped Krishna; saubhagya haila te-karana — that is why she became fortunate

66. Do not cry, do not cry, Dhruva, I shall tell you what I know — listen, listen to my words:

your stepmother once worshipped Krishna — that is why she became fortunate.

কৃষ্ণের চরণ ভজে, সিংহাসন কিসে লাগে,

যাহা চাহ তাহা তুমি পাবে ।

মিছা অভিমান তেজ, কৃষ্ণের চরণ ভজ,

অনায়াসে সব তুমি পাবে ॥ ৬৭ ॥ kṛṣṇera caraṇa bhaje, siṁhāsana kise lāge,

yāhā cāha tāhā tumi pābe |

michā abhimāna teja, kṛṣṇera caraṇa bhaja,

anāyāse saba tumi pābe || 67 ||

Word for word: krishnera charana bhaje — if one serves Krishna's feet; simhasana kise lage — what need of a throne; yaha chaha taha tumi pabe — whatever you desire you will obtain; michha abhimana teja — give up empty pride; krishnera charana bhaja — serve Krishna's feet; anayase saba tumi pabe — you will easily obtain everything

67. If you serve Krishna's feet, what need have you of the throne?

Whatever you desire, you will obtain.

Give up empty pride, serve Krishna's feet — and you will easily obtain everything.

তুমি হেন মোর বেটা, সংসার জুড়ে খোঁটা,

কেমনে চড়িবে বাপের কোলে ।

আমি জন্ম অভাগিনী, এ বোল শুনিয়া রাণী,

ভাসিতে লাগিল অশ্রুজলে ॥ ৬৮ ॥

Madhya-khanda, part 15 (portion 38)

The section "Vishnupriya's Lament": Vishnupriya learns of the coming sannyasa and begs the Lord not to leave; the Lord consoles her, instructs her and shows her His four-armed form; Srivasa asks to be taken along; in Murari's house the Lord tells him to worship Advaita. The section "The Consolation of the Devotees" (only in the 1983 edition): the last days at home and the last night with Vishnupriya

Vishnupriya's Lament

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. [When mother Shachi could not tell] her of this, Vishnupriya-devi, beside herself with grief, wept unceasingly, and [the Lord] asked her the reason for her tears. Vishnupriya-devi laid her grief at the Lord's feet; [He], [learning] the cause of her grief, consoled her with many sweet words and at last, giving her full instruction in the truth — [that it is vain] to see one's husband in a body of blood and flesh [and that the true Lord of the soul's life is Sri Hari], — showed Vishnupriya-devi His four-armed form of Narayana. Then Srivasa, Murari and other devotees, hearing in anxiety the news that the Lord would take sannyasa, came to Him, poured out their grief and asked to go with the Lord; Gaurasundara, giving them instruction in the truth, consoled them.¹

Raga varadi, the "dhulakhela" tune

তবে দেবী শচীরানী, কহে মন-কাহিনী, হিয়া-দুঃখে বিরস-বদন ।
মুখে না নিঃসরে বাণী, দু-নয়ানে ঝরে পানী, দেখি' বিষ্ণুপ্রিয়া অচেতন ॥ ১ ॥ *tabe debī śacīrāṇī, kahe mana-kāhinī, hiyā-duḥkhe birasa-badana |

mukhe nā niḥsare bāṇī, du-nayāne jhare pānī, dekhi' biṣṇupriyā acetana || 1 ||*

Word for word: tabe devi shachi-rani — then queen Shachi-devi; kahe mana-kahini — [would] tell what is in her heart; hiya-duhkhe virasa-vadana — her face wan with grief; mukhe na nihsare vani — no word comes from her lips; du-nayane jhare pani — tears stream from both eyes; dekhi vishnupriya acetana — seeing this, Vishnupriya [falls] senseless

1. Then queen Shachi-devi [wishes] to tell what is in her heart — her face is wan with grief;
but no word comes from her lips, tears stream from her eyes — seeing this, Vishnupriya fell senseless.

সুধাইতে নারে কথা, অন্তরে মরম-ব্যথা, lokamukhe śuni' ghānāghusā | iṅgite bujhila kāja, paṛila akāla-bāja, cetana harila sei dīnā || 2 ||*

Word for word: sudhaite nare katha — she cannot ask; antare marama-vyatha — deep pain in her heart; loka-mukhe shuni ghanaghusha — having heard people's whispers; ingite bujhila kaja — by hints she understood the matter; padila akala-baja — an untimely thunderbolt fell; chetana harila sei dina — the poor one lost her senses

2. She cannot ask; deep in her heart is pain;
she had heard people's whispers — and by hints understood the matter: a thunderbolt fell out of season, and the poor one lost her senses.

gharete āilā tbarite |
kariyā bhojana-pāna, sukhe śayyāya śayāna, biṣṇupriyā āilā turite || 3 ||*

Word for word: vishnupriya mane gunes — Vishnupriya ponders; prabhu dina-avasane — the Lord at day's end; gharete aila tvarite — came home quickly; kariya bhojana-pana — having eaten and drunk; sukhe shayyaya shayana — lies contentedly on the bed; vishnupriya aila turite — Vishnupriya came quickly

3. Vishnupriya ponders in her heart. At the close of day the Lord came home in haste;
having eaten and drunk, He lay down contentedly on His bed — and Vishnupriya hurried [to Him].

Word for word: charana-kamala-pashe — by the lotus feet; nihshvasa chhadiya vaise — sighing, she sits; neharaye katara-bayana — gazes with a sorrowful face; hridaya-upare thuña — placing on her bosom; bandhe bhujalata diya — binds with creeper-arms; priya-prananathera charana — the feet of her beloved Lord of life

4. Sighing, she sits by His lotus feet and gazes [at Him] with a sorrowful face;
laying on her bosom the feet of her beloved Lord of life, she binds them with her creeper-arms.

দু-নয়ানে বহে নীর, ভিজিল হিয়ার চীর,

Word for word: du-nayane vahe nira — tears flow from both eyes; bhijila hiyara chira — the cloth on her bosom is soaked; charana vahiya pade dhara — streams run down the feet; chetana paiya chite — feeling it; uthe prabhu achambite — the Lord suddenly rises; priyaya puchhe abhipara — asks His beloved what is wrong

5. Tears flow from both her eyes, the cloth over her bosom is soaked, streams run down [the Lord's] feet.
Feeling it, the Lord suddenly rises and asks His beloved what is wrong.²

kaha priye ihāra uttara |
thuiyā urura upara, cibuke dakṣiṇa kara, puche kichu madhura akṣara || 6 ||*

Word for word: mora prana-priya tumi — you are dear to Me as life; kanda ki karane jani — why do you weep, I want to know; kaha priye ihara uttara — answer, beloved; thuiya urura upara — setting on His lap; chibuke dakshina kara — right hand on her chin; puchhe kichhu madhura akshara — asks in sweet words

6. "You are dear to Me as life — why do you weep? I want to know:
answer Me, beloved."
Setting her on His lap, taking her chin in His right hand,
He asks in sweet words.

কান্দে দেবী বিষ্ণুপ্রিয়া, বিদারিয়া যায় হিয়া, puchite nā kahe kichu bāṇī | antare gumare prāṇa, dehe nāhi sambidhāna, nayāne jharaye mātra pānī || 7 ||*

Word for word: kande devi vishnupriya — Vishnupriya-devi weeps; bidariya yaya hiya — her heart bursts; puchhite na kahe kichhu vani — asked, she says no word; antare gumare prana — life smoulders within; dehe nahi samvidhana — the body is senseless; nayane jharaye matra pani — only tears stream from her eyes

7. Vishnupriya-devi weeps, her heart is bursting;
when asked, she says not a word;
life smoulders within her, her body is senseless — only tears stream from her eyes.

Word for word: punah punah puchhe pahun — again and again the Lord asks; sumati na dei tabhu — still she gives no answer; kande matra charane dhariya — only weeps, clasping His feet; prabhu saba kala jane — the Lord knows every art; puchhe nana-vidhane — asks in many ways; anga-vase bayana muchhiya — wiping her face with His cloth

8. Again and again the Lord asks — and still she does not answer, but only weeps, clasping His feet.
The Lord, who knows every art, asks in many ways, wiping her face with the edge of His cloth.

Word for word: nana-ranga parathava — playful talks of many kinds; kariya badhaya bhava — making them, He stirs feeling; ye kathaya pashana munjare — at such words a stone would blossom; prabhura vyagrata dekhi — seeing the Lord's eagerness; vishnupriya chandramukhi — moon-faced Vishnupriya; kahe kichhu gadgada-svare — speaks in a faltering voice

9. He begins one playful talk after another, awakening feeling in her — at such words even a stone would blossom.
Seeing the Lord's eagerness, moon-faced Vishnupriya spoke in a faltering voice:

শুন শুন প্রাণনাথ, মোর শিরে দেহ হাত,

Word for word: shuna shuna prananaatha — listen, Lord of my life; mora shire deha hata — put Your hand on my head; sannyasa karibe naki tumi — will You really take sannyasa; loka-mukhe shuni iha — hearing this from people; bidarite chahe hiya — my heart would burst; agunite praveshiba ami — I shall enter fire

10. "Listen, listen, Lord of my life, put Your hand on my head [and tell the truth]:
are You really going to take sannyasa?
Hearing it from people, I feel my heart will burst —

hiyā pore yena biṣa-jbālā || 11 ||*

Word for word: toma lagi — for You; jivana-dhana — life and wealth; rupa nava yauvana — beauty, fresh youth; besha-vilasa-bhava-kala — dress, graces, feelings, arts; tumi yabe chhadi yabe — when You go away; ki kaja e chhara jive — what use this wretched life; hiya pode yena visha-jvala — the heart burns as with poison

11. For You are my life and wealth, my beauty and youth, my dress, my graces, feelings and arts;
when You go away, what use is this wretched life? —

আমা হেন ভাগ্যবতী, নাহি কোন যুবতী,

Word for word: ama hena bhagyavati — as fortunate as I; nahi kona yuvati — there is no young woman; tumi mora priya pranana — You are my beloved Lord of life; bada priti asha chhila — great were love and hope; nija deha samarpila — I gave myself; e nava yauvane diba hata — [that] You would give Your hand in this youth

11+1. There is no other young woman as fortunate as I:³

You are my beloved Lord of life;
great were my love and hope — I gave myself to You, [trusting] that You would give me Your hand in this youth.

Word for word: dhik rahu mora dehe — shame on my body; eka nivediye tohe — one thing I ask You; kemanē hantiya yabe pathe — how will You walk the roads; shirisha-kusuma yena — like shirisha flowers; sukomala sri-charana — the tender holy feet; parashite dara lage hathe — my hand fears to touch

12. Shame on my body! One thing I ask You:

how will You walk the roads on foot?
Your feet are tender as shirisha flowers — my hand is afraid to touch them.

Word for word: bhumite danrao yabe — when You stand on the ground; dare prana hale tabe — then my heart quakes with fear; shihariya padaye saba gaya — my whole body shudders; aranya-kantaka-vane — in thorny forests; kotha yabe kon khane — where will You go, to what place; kemanē hantibe ranga paya — how will You walk on crimson feet

13. When You stand on the ground, my heart quakes with fear and my whole body shudders;

in the forests, among thorns, where will You go, to what lands?
How will You walk on Your crimson feet?

Word for word: sudhamaya mukha-indu — the nectarean moon-face; tahe gharma-bindu bindu — drops of sweat on it; alpa ayasa matra dekhi — I see at the slightest effort; barisha-badala-bela — in the rainy season; kshane vari kshane khara — now rain, now heat; sannyase karaye mahadukhi — sannyasa makes one suffer greatly

14. On Your nectar moon-face drops of sweat appear at the slightest effort;
in the rainy season — now downpour, now scorching heat:
sannyasa will bring [You] great suffering.

Word for word: tomara charana vini — apart from Your feet; ara kichhu nahi jani — I know nothing else; amare pheliha kara thaye — to whom will You leave me; dharma-bhaya nahi tora — You have no fear of [breaking] dharma; shachi vridhda adhamara — Shachi is old, half-dead; kemane chhadibe hena maye — how will You leave such a mother

15. Apart from Your feet I know nothing — to whom will You leave me?
Have You no fear of [breaking] dharma? Shachi is old and half-dead — how will You leave such a mother?

Word for word: murari-mukunda-datta — Murari, Mukunda Datta; hena saba bhakata — such devotees; srinivasa ara haridasa — Srinivasa and Haridasa; advaita-acharya adi — Advaita Acharya and others; chhadiya ki karya sadhi — leaving them, what will You achieve; kemane va karibe sannyasa — how will You take sannyasa

16. Murari, Mukunda Datta — such devotees,

Srinivasa and Haridasa,

Advaita Acharya and the others — leaving them, what will You achieve?

How can You take sannyasa?

Word for word: tumi prabhu prema-rashi — You, Lord, are a treasury of prema; jagajane hena basi — so the world thinks; viparita charita ashaya — Your deeds and intent are contrary; tumi deshantare yabe — You will go to far lands; shunile maribe sabe — hearing it, all will die; habe saba apayashamaya — all will be full of disgrace

17. You, Lord, are a treasury of prema — so the whole world thinks — yet Your deeds and intentions are the opposite.

You will go to far lands — hearing it, everyone will die, and all will be covered with disgrace.

Word for word: ki kahiba munni chhara — what shall I, worthless, say; mula tomara samsara — [if I am] the root of Your household; sannyasa karibe mora dare — You will take sannyasa because of me; tomara nichhani lana — taking Your misfortunes on myself; mari yana visha khana — let me die by taking poison; sukhe nivasaha nijaghare — live happily in Your home

18. What shall I, worthless one, say? If I am the root of Your household life

and You live happily in Your own home.

badana cāhite poṛe hiyā |
kahite nā pāre kathā, antare marama-byathā, kānde mātra caraṇe dhariyā || 19 ||*

Word for word: prabhu na yaiha deshantare — Lord, do not go to far lands; keho nahi e samsare — I have no one in this world; vadana chahite pode hiya — looking at Your face my heart burns; kahite na pare katha — she can say no word; antare marama-vyatha — pain in her heart; kande matra charane dhariya — only weeps, clasping His feet

19. Lord, do not go to far lands: I have no one in this world;
when I look at Your face my heart burns."
She can say no more — deep in her heart is pain;
she only weeps, clasping His feet.

basane muchiyā mukha, kare nānā kautuka,
michā duḥkha nā bhābiha bole || 20 ||*

Word for word: shuni vishnupriya-vani — hearing Vishnupriya's words; tabe sei gauramani — then that jewel Gaura; hasiya tuliya nila kole — smiling, took her on His lap; vasane muchhiya mukha — wiping her face with His cloth; kare nana kautuka — jests in many ways; michha duhkha na bhaviha bole — says, "do not dwell on needless grief"

20. Hearing Vishnupriya's words, then that jewel Gauranga smiling, took her onto His lap; wiping her face with His cloth, He jests in many ways

আমি তোরে ছাড়িয়া, সন্ন্যাস করিব গিয়া,

Word for word: ami tore chhadiya — that I, leaving you; sannyasa kariba giya — will go and take sannyasa; e katha va ke kahila toke — who told you this; ye kari se kari yabe — whatever I do, when I do it; tomare kahiba tabe — I shall tell you then; ekhane na mara michha-shoke — now do not die of needless sorrow

21. That I will leave you and go to take sannyasa — who ever told you that?
Whatever I do, when I do it, I shall tell you then — but now do not die of needless sorrow."

Word for word: iha bali gaurahari — saying this, Gaurahari; ashlesha-chumbana kari — embracing and kissing; nana rasa-kautuka-vihare — in many sweet playful pastimes; ananta vinoda prema — endless the delights of His prema; lila-lavanyera sima — the limit of grace in lila; vishnupriya tushila prakare — comforted Vishnupriya in every way

22. Saying this, Gaurahari embraces and kisses her in many sweet and playful pastimes; endless are the delights of His prema, He is the limit of grace in lila — so in every way He comforted Vishnupriya.⁵

Word for word: vinoda-vilasa-rase — in joyful play; bhai gela rajani-sheshe — the night came to an end; punah kichhu puchhe vishnupriya — Vishnupriya asks again; hiyaya aguni achhe — there is fire in her heart; te-karane punah puchhe — therefore she asks again; priya-prananatha-mukha chaña — gazing at her beloved Lord's face

23. In joyful play the night came to an end, and Vishnupriya asks again:
there is fire in her heart — that is why she asks again, gazing at the face of her beloved Lord of life.

Word for word: prabhu-kara buke diya — pressing the Lord's hand to her breast; puchhe devi vishnupriya — Vishnupriya-devi asks; michha na kahio mora dare — do not lie for fear of me; hena anumana kari — so I suspect; yata kaha se chaturi — all You say is playfulness; palaibe mora agochare — You will flee without my knowing

24. Pressing the Lord's hand to her breast, Vishnupriya-devi asks:

"Do not lie to me for fear of me.
This is what I think: all You say is mere playfulness —
You will run away without my knowing.

Word for word: tumi nijavasha prabhu — You, Lord, are Your own master; paravasha naha kabhu — never in another's power; ye karaha apanara sukhe — You do what pleases You; sannyasa karibe tumi — if You take sannyasa; ki balite pari ami — what can I say; nishchaya kariya kaha moke — tell me truly

25. You, Lord, are Your own master, never in another's power, and You do what pleases You.
If You will take sannyasa — what can I say?
[Only] tell me the truth."

Word for word: e bola shuniña pahun — hearing these words, the Lord; muchaki hasiya lahun — smiling softly; kahe shuna mora priya-priya — says: listen, My beloved; kichhu na kariha chite — do not grieve at heart; ye kahiye tora hite — what I say for your good; savadhane shuna mana diya — listen attentively

26. Hearing these words, the Lord smiled softly and says: "Listen, My beloved, do not grieve at all in your heart: what I say for your good listen to attentively.

Word for word: jagate yateka dekha — all you see in the world; michha kari saba lekha — count as empty; satya eka sabe bhagavan — Bhagavan alone is true; satya ara vaishnava — true also the Vaishnavas; ta-vine yateka saba — all else besides; michha kari karaha geyana — regard as empty

27. All that you see in the world count as empty:
Bhagavan alone is true,
and true are the Vaishnavas; all else besides them count as empty.⁶

Word for word: michha suta, pati, nari — empty are son, husband, wife; pita mata yata bali — father, mother — all so called; pariname keba va kahara — in the end who is whose; sri-krishna-charana vahi — apart from Sri Krishna's feet; ara ta kutumba nahi — there is no other kin; yata dekha e maya tanhara — all you see is His maya

28. Empty are son, husband, wife, father, mother — all that goes by such names:
in the end, who belongs to whom?
Apart from Sri Krishna's feet there is no other kin;
all that you see is His maya.

Word for word: kiba nari, purusha dekha — whether woman or man, see; sabhari se atma eka — the soul of all is one [in nature]; michha maya-bandhe bhabe dui — falsely, in maya's bonds, one thinks "two"; sri-krishna sabhara pati — Sri Krishna is the husband of all; ara saba prakriti — all others are prakriti; ei katha na bujhayē koi — this no one understands

29. Whether woman or man — see: the soul of all is one [in nature]; only in the bonds of maya does one imagine 'two'.
Sri Krishna is the husband of all, and all others are prakriti:
this no one understands.⁷

bāla, yubā, bṛddha hañā, nānā duḥkhe kaṣṭa pāñā, dehe gehe kare abhimāna || 30 ||*

Word for word: rakta-retah-sammilane — from the union of blood and seed; janma vishttha-mutra-sthane — birth in a place of filth; bhume pade hana ageyana — falls to the ground unknowing; bala, yuva, vridhdha hana — as child, youth, old man; nana duhkhe kashta pana — suffering many miseries; dehe gehe kare abhimana — takes pride in body and home

30. From the union of blood and seed a person is born in a place of filth and falls to the ground knowing nothing; as a child, a youth, an old man, he suffers many miseries — and takes pride in his body and home.

Word for word: bandhu kari yare pali — those he raised as his own; tara saba dei gali — they all revile him; abhimane vridha-kala vanche — in pride he spends old age; shravana nayana andhe — hearing and sight grow dim; vishada bhaviya kande — he weeps thinking of his woes; tabhu nahi bhajaye govinde — still he does not serve Govinda

31. Those he raised as his own all revile him; in pride he lives out his old age;
hearing and sight grow dim, he weeps thinking of his woes — and still he does not serve Govinda.

Word for word: krishna bhajibara tare — in order to serve Krishna; deha dhari e samsare — taking a body in this world; maya-bandhe pashare apana — in maya's bonds forgets himself; ahamkare matta hana — drunk with conceit; nija-prabhu pashariya — forgetting his own Lord; sheshe mare naraka-yantrana — in the end dies in hell's torments

32. He took a body in this world in order to serve Krishna — yet in the bonds of maya he forgets himself;
drunk with conceit, forgetting his own Lord,
in the end he dies in the torments of hell.

Word for word: tora nama vishnupriya — your name is Vishnupriya; sarthaka karaha iha — make it meaningful; michha shoka na kariha chite — keep no needless grief at heart; e tore kahilun katha — I have told you this; dura kara ana-chinta — put away other thoughts; mana deha krishnera charite — give your mind to Krishna's deeds

33. Your name is Vishnupriya ('dear to Vishnu'): make it meaningful, do not keep needless grief in your heart.
I have told you this — put away other thoughts and give your mind to the deeds of Krishna."

Word for word: apane ishvara hana — being Himself the Lord; dura kare nija-maya — removes His own maya; vishnupriya parasanna-chita — Vishnupriya's heart grew clear; dure gela duhkha-shoka — grief and sorrow went away; anande bharala buka — her breast filled with joy; chaturbhuja dekhe achambita — suddenly she sees the four-armed form

34. Being Himself the Lord, He removed His own maya,⁸ — and Vishnupriya's heart grew clear:
grief and sorrow went away, her breast filled with joy — and suddenly she sees [Him] four-armed.

Word for word: tabe devi vishnupriya — then Vishnupriya-devi; chaturbhuja dekhiya — seeing the four-armed form; pati-buddhi nahi chhade tabhu — still does not give up thinking of Him as husband; padiya charana-tale — falling at His feet; pranati minati kare — bows and pleads; eka nivedana shuna prabhu — hear, Lord, one request

35. Yet even seeing the four-armed form, Vishnupriya-devi does not give up thinking of Him as her husband;
falling at His feet, she bows and pleads:
"Hear, Lord, one request of mine.

Word for word: mo ati adhama chhara — I, the lowest and worthless; janamilun e samsara — was born in this world; tumi mora priya pranapati — You are my beloved husband, Lord of my life; ehena sampada mora — such was my fortune; dasi haiyachhilun tora — I had become Your maidservant; ki lagiya bhela adhogati — why such a fall

36. I, the lowest and most worthless, was born in this world, and You are my beloved husband, the Lord of my life;
such was my good fortune — I had become Your maidservant — why then [now] such a fall?"

Word for word: iha bali vishnupriya — saying this, Vishnupriya; kande utaroli hana — weeps aloud; adhika badala paramada — the distress grew greater; priyajana-arti dekhi — seeing His beloved's anguish; chhala chhala kare ankhi — His eyes brim with tears; kole kari karila prasada — taking her in His arms, He bestowed grace

37. Saying this, Vishnupriya wept aloud, and her distress grew greater still.
Seeing His beloved's anguish, the Lord, His eyes brimming with tears, took her in His arms and bestowed His grace:

শুন দেবী বিষ্ণুপ্রিয়া, এ তোরে কহিল ইহা,

Word for word: shuna devi vishnupriya — listen, Vishnupriya-devi; e tore kahila iha — this I tell you; yakhane ye tumi mane kara — whenever you think [of Me]; ami yatha tatha yai — wherever I go; achhiye tomara thai — I am with you; satya satya kahilama dadha — truly, truly I say firmly 38. "Listen, Vishnupriya-devi, this is what I tell you:

whenever you think of Me —
wherever I may go, I am with you;
truly, truly I tell you firmly."⁹

Word for word: krishna-ajna-vani shuni — hearing Krishna's word of command; vishnupriya mane guni — Vishnupriya thought; svatantra ishvara ei prabhu — this Lord is the independent Master; nija-sukhe kare kaja — He does as He pleases; ke dibe tahate badha — who will hinder Him; pratyuttara na dileka tabhu — and she gave no reply

39. Hearing the word of Krishna's command, Vishnupriya thought:

"This Lord is the independent Master,
He does what pleases Him — who can stand in His way?" —
and she made no reply.

Word for word: vishnupriya hentamukhi — Vishnupriya with lowered face; chhala chhala kare ankhi — her eyes brimming; dekhi prabhu sarasa sambhashe — seeing this, the Lord speaks tenderly; prabhu-acharana-katha — the account of the Lord's deeds; shunite lagaye vyatha — is painful to hear; guna gaya e lochanadase — this Lochana Dasa sings the qualities

40. Vishnupriya lowered her face, her eyes brimming with tears;

seeing this, the Lord speaks tender words to her.
It is painful to hear of the Lord's deeds — this Lochana Dasa sings of [His] qualities.

Madhya-khanda, part 16 (portion 39)

The section "The Lord's Sannyasa" (beginning): at dawn the Lord leaves Navadvipa and swims across the Ganga; the lament of Shachi, Vishnupriya and the devotees; Nityananda with Chandrashekhara and others follows the Lord; the Lord in Kantakanagara with Keshava Bharati; Bharati hesitates to give Him sannyasa, and the Lord whispers the sannyasa mantra into his ear; the grief of the people of Kantakanagara; the Lord asks for their blessing

The Lord's Sannyasa

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. [Sri Gaurasundara, having consoled the devotees] with instruction in the truth, [left home] and, in order to take sannyasa, crossed the Ganga and came to Katwa, to Keshava Bharati. [Mother Shachi and] Vishnupriya [were overwhelmed] in separation from the Lord; Nityananda Prabhu, consoling them, came with Chandrashekhara Acharya, Damodara Pandita and other devotees to the Lord in Kantakanagara. The Lord asked Keshava Bharati for sannyasa, but he would not agree to give Him sannyasa. Then Bhagavan Himself, [wishing to receive] the sannyasa mantra and knowing what was in Bharati's heart, on some pretext first spoke the sannyasa mantra into Keshava Bharati's ear, and then Bharati agreed to give Him sannyasa. All the inhabitants of Kantakanagara — children, old people, youths, women and men — lamented bitterly on seeing the Lord's sannyasa; Sri Gaurachandra consoled them and, [bearing Himself] as a devotee, asked them for [the blessing of] devotion to Krishna. [A voice from the sky proclaimed the name "Sri Krishna Chaitanya": the Lord] awakened [all to Krishna] — therefore His name in sannyasa became "Sri Krishna Chaitanya". Then, having taken sannyasa, Srīman Mahāprabhu, absorbed in prema, wandered for three days in Rādhā-dēśa.¹

1. The OCR of the summary is badly garbled; gaps are filled by sense and from the table of contents in the edition's preface (ch. 13: "consolation of the devotees by instruction in the truth; leaving home, the Lord goes to Kantakanagara, to Keshava Bharati; Nityananda Prabhu consoles Shachi and Vishnupriya; Nityananda's coming to Kantakanagara with Chandrashekhara Acharya, Damodara Pandita and other devotees; the Lord's request for the sannyasa mantra, Bharati's refusal and consent; the Lord speaks the sannyasa mantra into Bharati's ear; the grief of the villagers; the Lord consoles them and, as a devotee, asks for devotion to Krishna; the Lord's sannyasa name — Sri Krishna Chaitanya; after sannyasa, wandering in Radha-deshā absorbed in prema"). The summary runs ahead: the end of the section is in the next portion. In the 1983 edition the disha is longer: "Why have You become like this, Gaurāṅga, why? Why have You given up the dress of the best of dancers? Stand just a moment on the bank of the Ganga, Nīmai, let me gaze at Your moon-face — and then go. If You will keep one word of mine, Nīmai — no need of sannyasa, stay at home. Do not become a sannyasi, Nīmai, do not become a vairagi, do not leave Your unfortunate mother. Your mother calls: stay, O Gaurāṅga; do not go leaving Your mother, O Gaurāṅga!"

2. Kantakanagara is Katwa, on the west bank of the Ganga. Below (vv. 38, 51, 96) Lochana Dasa calls it Kanchananagara; the 1983 edition has that name here too.

3. According to svāra-shāstra, setting out when the breath flows through the right nostril is a good omen.

4. Cf. Murari 3.1.7: "Bhagavan crossed the divine river and went away."

5. That is, like Krishna entering the arena against Kamsa's wrestlers in Mathura.

6. Lochana Dasa here depicts the Lord in the mood of Krishna pining for Radha; according to the teaching of the Gaudiya Vaishnavas (Krishnadāsa Kavirāja, Bhaktisiddhanta), Gaura is Krishna in the bhava of Radha, tasting Her love for Krishna; so Bhaktisiddhanta also interprets a similar passage above (en/35, note 5).

7. "Narayana!" is the customary greeting of sannyasis.

8. Bharati speaks by the general rule of sannyasa, that with age the senses grow calm. Worldly passions have no bearing on the Lord, whose body and senses are spiritual; in the lila Bharati speaks to Him as to a young brahmana.

9. Maya here means "dissembling, pretence": the Lord asks Bharati not to evade Him with plausible excuses. So also in v. 67.

10. Cf. Murari 3.2.7–9: "Thus the one Lord of the worlds... on a plausible pretext gave initiation to His own guru." On the meaning of the sannyasa mantra see en/35, note 10. In the lila Keshava Bharati is the Lord's sannyasa-guru; the Lord, the guru of the world, Himself accepts him as guru in order to establish reverence for the guru.

11. Vv. 91+1 — 91+3 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript (with one more couplet).

12. Vv. 95+1 — 95+5 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript. Narahari Sarakara is Lochana Dasa's guru. The Chaitanya-bhagavata (Madhya 28) also speaks of Gadadhara at Katwa.

13. Lit. "so beautiful that they do not recognise their own shadow" — that is, they live in seclusion and never go out in public.

14. Vv. 100+1 — 100+3 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript.

15. Vv. 105+1 — 105+3 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript. Vv. 96–107 — cf. Murari 3.1.10–18 and 3.2.2.

16. The Lord speaks in the mood of a gopi: Krishna is the one husband of all souls (cf. en/38, note 7).

Madhya-khanda, part 17 (portion 40)

The section "The Lord's Sannyasa" (conclusion): the Lord has His head shaved and receives the sannyasa mantra from Keshava Bharati; a voice from the sky names Him Sri Krishna Chaitanya; night kirtana with the guru; farewell to Bharati; three days absorbed in prema in Radha-desha; the Lord sends Chandrashekhara back to Navadvipa

Word for word: kahaye lochana — says Lochana; iha kahane na yaya — this cannot be told; shri-chandrashekhara Acharya — Sri Chandrashekhara Acharya; navadvipa paya — reaches Navadvipa

185. Says Lochana: this cannot be told in words.

Sri Chandrashekhara Acharya reaches Navadvipa.

1. Acharyaratna is Chandrashekhara Acharya, who came to Kantakanagara with Nityananda (en/39, v. 43). Cf. Murari 3.2.6.

2. "Once" — in Krishna's lila in Vraja; a chuda is a topknot adorned with a peacock feather. Lochana Dasa speaks of Gaura's hair as the hair of Krishna Himself.

3. Vv. 124+1 — 124+2 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript.

4. Vv. 125+1 — 125+3 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition does not have them. The second line of v. 125+2 is unclear in the 1983 edition; we understand it as "let me go to hell like Kamsa".

5. A barber's trade is to shave and pare nails, touching people's feet; having touched the Lord's head, he can no longer touch the feet of others.

6. V. 135+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition does not have it. The barber is called Haridasa here — not to be confused with Haridasa Thakura.

7. Vv. 136+1 — 136+4 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript (with the lines of v. 136+3 in reverse order).

8. That is, at the sun's passage from Capricorn into Aquarius — at the end of the solar month of Magha (January–February). Cf. Murari 3.2.10.

9. Cf. Murari 3.2.11. In the 1983 edition a new chapter, "Acceptance of Sannyasa", begins at v. 138; in Bhaktisiddhanta's edition the section continues.

10. Vv. 143+1 — 143+4 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript (with one more couplet: Gadadhara and Narahari dance beside the Lord, and all the Vaishnavas dance around Gora).

11. Chaitanya means "consciousness", "awakening". Mahamaya keeps in oblivion the living beings who have turned away from Krishna; the Lord awakens them to Krishna consciousness. In the Chaitanya-bhagavata (Madhya 28) Keshava Bharati himself gives the Lord this name, with the same explanation; in Lochana Dasa it is proclaimed by a voice from the sky.

12. Vv. 151+1 — 151+6 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition vv. 151+1 — 151+5 stand in the main text and v. 151+6 is in a footnote, as part of an additional reading of one manuscript. Cf. Murari 3.2.12: the guru himself puts the staff, together with the cloth, into the Lord's hand.

13. Cf. Murari 3.2.13–14.

14. Vv. 155+1 — 155+4 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they stand in the main text. Cf. Murari 3.2.15–18: Bharati relates that someone snatched the staff from his hands and told him to dance.

15. In Bhaktisiddhanta's edition v. 162 is misnumbered 161. Bharati speaks in humility: the Lord, the guru of the world, has placed him in the position of His guru (cf. en/39, v. 85).

16. V. 163+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition it stands in the main text. Nilachala ("the Blue Mountain") is Puri, the abode of Jagannatha.

17. Cf. Murari 3.3.17.

18. Radha-desha (Rarh) is the region west of the Ganga. Vv. 164–180 — cf. Murari 3.3.1–10, 16–18; Chaitanya-bhagavata, Antya 1.

19. As in Murari (3.3.6), the Lord speaks and acts in the mood of a devotee for whom life without the name of Hari is unbearable; this is a manifestation of prema, not the despair of a conditioned soul. The Lord's body is spiritual, and He, the independent one, is free to manifest and withdraw it.

20. Vv. 181+1 — 181+2 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript. Vv. 181–185 — cf. Murari 3.3.11–14, 19.

21. V. 183+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition it is in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript (there: "burnt in the fire of Navadvipa's grief").

Madhya-khanda, part 18 (portion 41)

The section "The Lord's Arrival at Shantipura": the lament of Shachi and Vishnupriya on Chandrashekhara's return; the devotees of Navadvipa chant the Name, and the Lord, bound by it, sends Nityananda for them; Nityananda in Navadvipa; Shachi and all the people of Nadia go to Advaita's house; the Lord comes to Shantipura; the meal and kirtana

The Lord's Arrival at Shantipura

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. When Chandrashekhara Acharya returned to Nadia, at the sight of him the fire of Shachi's and Vishnupriya's grief blazed up twice as fierce; lamenting bitterly, they began to question the Acharya about Sriman Mahaprabhu. Meanwhile Bhagavan Gaurahari, the Knower of hearts, [seeing] the anguish of the people of Nadia and wishing to show Himself to them, resolved to come to Shantipura and sent them word of it through Sri Nityananda Prabhu. As soon as Nityananda Prabhu arrived in Nadia, at the sight of Him life returned to the bodies of the people of Nadia, who were wasting away in separation. When Shachidevi began to weep, Nityananda Prabhu consoled her and told her of the Lord's coming to Shantipura. Hearing this news, all the people of Nadia in great joy [came] to the house of Sri Advaita [Acharya], to the feet of Sriman Mahaprabhu, and the Lord received them fittingly. Thus that night passed in great bliss.¹

1. The OCR of the summary is garbled in places; gaps are filled by sense and from the table of contents in the edition's preface (ch. 14: "Chandrashekhara Acharya's coming from Kantakanagara to Nadia; the grief and lament of Mother Shachi and Vishnupriya; Nityananda Prabhu announces Mahaprabhu's coming to Shantipura; Nityananda Prabhu's conversation with Mother Shachi; the people of Nadia come to Advaita's house to see the Lord; Mahaprabhu speaks fittingly with everyone").
 2. Words of a mother's grief; cf. en/39, vv. 100+1–100+3. In the lila Keshava Bharati is the Lord's revered sannyasa-guru (en/39, note 10).
 3. Vishnupriya is the Lord's eternal consort, His Bhu-shakti (en/21, note 9); her separation from the Lord is not worldly grief (cf. en/38, note 5).
 4. Vv. 15+1 — 15+15 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition does not have them.
 5. Lit. "whose vow is broken": Vishnupriya apparently reproaches herself for having failed in the vow of a faithful wife — to keep her husband and serve him.
 6. Lit. "all Your worthy women" — the women of Nadia devoted to the Lord; cf. en/09, note 9.
 7. V. 31+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition does not have it.
 8. V. 32+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition does not have it. Cf. en/38 (the Lord consoles Vishnupriya before His sannyasa).
 9. The Lord's name is not different from Him, yet it is more merciful than He, for it is open to all — a common teaching of the Gaudiya Vaishnavas.
 10. The independent Lord submits to the love of His devotees and to their chanting of His name.
 11. In the 1983 edition a new chapter, "Pastimes at Shantipura", begins at v. 46. Vv. 46–64 — cf. Murari 3.4.3–10.
 12. The customary greeting of sannyasis (en/39, note 7); cf. Murari 3.3.13. The 1983 edition reads "Namo narayanaya".
 13. Thakura here is Nityananda.
 14. Lit. "their backs broke". In Bhaktisiddhanta's edition the number of v. 65 is printed as "1"; the numbers of vv. 60 and 85 are missing, and vv. 62 and 92 are printed as 61 and 91 — restored.
 15. Vv. 71–90 — cf. Murari 3.4.12–23; Chaitanya-charitamrita, Madhya 3.
 16. Vv. 75+1 — 75+5 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition vv. 75+2 — 75+5 are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript. V. 75+1 is close to v. 76.
 17. Vv. 76+1 — 76+5 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition does not have them.
 18. Bhiksha is a sannyasi's meal, taken in a householder's home.
 19. Vv. 88+1 — 88+3 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript. Sita-devi is Advaita's wife; Narayani is probably Srivasa's niece, later the mother of Vrindavana Dasa (possibly also an epithet of Sita). The Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 3) also says that Shachi cooked at Advaita's house.
 20. The Lord is Himself Krishna; singing of Krishna, He sings of Himself.
 21. Vv. 91+1 — 91+4 are found only in the 1983 edition; in the 1903 edition they are in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript.
 22. The 1983 edition has another redaction of this couplet: "Shachi watches happily together with Sita and Narayani; Advaita Acharya dances merrily with His son."

Madhya-khanda, part 19 (portion 42)

The section "The Lord's Journey to Nilachala; the Broken Staff" (beginning): at Shantipura the Lord takes leave of the devotees and tells them to chant the name of Hari; Haridasa's plea; the devotees' sorrowful speeches; the Lord promises to live in Nilachala and consoles Shachi; Advaita laments that He feels no prema, and the Lord unties the knot of His cloth

The Lord's Journey to Nilachala; the Broken Staff

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. [Then] Bhagavan, having instructed the devotees to do good to all living beings by ceaseless chanting of the name of Hari, prepared to go to Nilachala; Thakura Haridasa, falling at His feet, poured out a humble and sorrowful plea. When the other devotees, telling of the grief of Shachi and Vishnupriya, began to follow the Lord, [the Lord] consoled them and Shachidevi with sweet words and, absorbed in prema, reciting the verse "Rama Raghava, Rama Raghava, Rama Raghava, protect me" and others, set out for Nilachala. Then, [when, having given His staff to Nityananda,] He was walking absorbed in prema in an excess of bliss, Nityananda Prabhu broke His staff, and Gaurahari showed anger towards Him.¹

Raga bhatiyari; disha: "Brothers, O brothers, sing the glory and the virtues of Gora Gosani! (murchha) O brothers, my dear brothers, give up worldly desires: as long as you live in the world, do not leave the feet of Mahaprabhu!"

1. The OCR of the summary is badly garbled; gaps are filled by sense and from the table of contents in the edition's preface (ch. 15: "the Lord instructs the devotees to do good to all living beings by chanting the name of Hari; when He prepares to go to Nilachala — Thakura Haridasa's humble words to the Lord; when the devotees begin to follow — He consoles them with the sweetest words and leaves for Nilachala reciting the verse 'Rama Raghava, Rama Raghava, protect me' and others; on the way Nityananda breaks the staff; the Lord shows anger"). The summary runs ahead: the journey to Nilachala and the broken staff are in the next portion.

2. "The Lord" here is Jagannatha.

3. A sign of utmost humility. Vv. 11–15 — cf. Murari 3.4.28–30.

4. The Lord speaks in the mood of a devotee longing for the darshana of Jagannatha.

5. A poetic image: the Lord's form is eternal and spiritual, and no one created it; the devotees, in their love, speak of Him as the most beautiful of creations.

6. Vv. 47–54 — cf. Murari 3.4.24–26. The Lord kept this promise: the devotees from Bengal came to Him at Puri every year.

7. "What you knew before" — that her son is Bhagavan Himself (this is hidden from her by yogamaya, which nourishes her motherly love: en/37, note 16). "Vain" (michha) means "futile", not "unreal" (en/37, note 14).

8. A danda is a measure of time, about 24 minutes.

9. Cf. Murari 3.4.32–33: Advaita asks why He feels no love on hearing of the Lord's departure, and the Lord replies: "If Your love had shown itself, how could I have left?"

10. Vv. 75+1 — 75+2 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition does not have them.

11. Apparently the Lord reminds Advaita — Maha-Vishnu in the form of a devotee (en/27, note 8) — that it was He who by His prayers called the Lord into the world, and of the work for which the Lord came, the spreading of sankirtana.

12. In the 1983 edition chapter 15 ends here; the next chapter, "The Journey to Nilachala", begins with v. 81.

Madhya-khanda, part 20 (portion 43)

The section "The Lord's Journey to Nilachala; the Broken Staff" (end): the Lord walks with His companions to Nilachala absorbed in prema, singing the verse "Rama Raghava"; toll-collectors release the pilgrims; Nityananda breaks the Lord's staff and answers His anger

1. In the 1983 edition chapter 16, "Sri Nilachala-yatra" ("The Journey to Nilachala"), begins here with new numbering; we follow Bhaktisiddhanta's numbering. Bhaktisiddhanta's summary of this section is at the beginning of en/42. The town is left empty because the Lord has left Bengal for good.

2. In Murari (3.5.1) the Lord goes "with Mukunda, Gadadhara and others," putting the Avadhuta in front. According to the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 3), Advaita sent four with the Lord: Nityananda, Jagadananda, Damodara Pandita and Mukunda Datta; Lochana Dasa names the companions differently.

3. The Dola-yatra is the spring swing festival of Krishna on the full moon of the month of Phalgun. According to the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 7), the Lord came to Nilachala in Phalgun and saw the Dola-yatra.

4. Vv. 85–92 — cf. Murari 3.5.2–3. As a sannyasi, the Lord teaches people by His own example (loka-shiksha): to accept only food offered to Krishna and to live on alms.

5. The same verse is in Murari (3.5.4–5) and in the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 7.96). Bhaktisiddhanta also mentions it in his summary (en/42).

6. The toll-collector (dani) took payment from travellers on roads and at ferries. Vv. 96–114 — cf. Murari 3.5.7–9; the Chaitanya-bhagavata (Antya 2) also tells of toll-collectors on the way to Puri.

7. The Moon of Nilachala is Jagannatha: the toll-collector recognizes in the Lord the Lord of Nilachala Himself.

8. "Vain" (michha) means "futile", not "unreal" (en/37, note 14). The 1983 edition reads "the feet of Radha" instead of "the feet of Gauranga."

9. The story of the broken staff is told by Murari (3.5.10–21), in the Chaitanya-bhagavata (Antya 2) and in the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 5): there Nityananda breaks the staff into three pieces and throws it into the river Bhargi. In Murari, Nityananda first excuses Himself by saying he stumbled; in Lochana Dasa He says plainly that he could not bear the sight of the Lord with a sannyasi's staff.

10. A sannyasi's staff is held to be the abode of the gods (cf. Murari 3.5.16–17).

11. Cf. the teaching that the Lord's name is more merciful than His form (Rupa Gosvami, Namashtaka 6).

12. The Lord's anger is lila: in Murari (3.5.18–21) the Lord, setting aside His anger, admits that Nityananda has fulfilled His own intention, and embraces Him; Bhaktisiddhanta, in the edition's table of contents, calls this episode "the manifestation of the pastime of anger" (krodha-lila). Nityananda, the Lord's eternal servant, only carried out His hidden will.

Madhya-khanda, part 21 (portion 44)

The section "Meeting with Sarvabhauma" (beginning): Tamoluk, Gopala at Remuna, the Vaitarani, Varaha, Yajapura and Viraja; a toll-collector binds Mukunda, and the Lord appears in a dream to his chief; Ekamra (Bhubaneshvara) and the hymn to Shiva; the conversation of Murari and Damodara on the remnants of offerings to Shiva

Meeting with Sarvabhauma

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. Sriman Mahaprabhu, passing on the way through Tamoluk, bathing in the Brahma-kunda and seeing Sri Madhusudana, came within a few days to Remuna. There, having seen Sri Gopaladeva, installed by Uddhava, He spent that night absorbed in prema in dancing and singing. The next day, having bathed in the Vaitarani and seen Lord Varaha, He came to the village of Yajapura, saw many lingas of Shiva and joyfully beheld Viraja. There the Lord bathed in the Brahma-kunda, [made offerings to the forefathers at] Nabhi-gaya and from there came to a great holy place, the town of Shiva. [There] a toll-collector mistreated Mukunda, and Gaurahari appeared at night in a dream to the chief of the toll-collectors in the form of the One who lies on the Ocean of Milk and rebuked him for mistreating His devotee; he, frightened, surrendered at the Lord's feet. Then the Lord came from there to Ekamra-kanana, saw ten million lingas of Shiva, Mahesha and Parvati, recited many hymns of praise to Shiva and spent that night there. Next, in the conversation of Murari and Damodara, the question whether Shiva's prasada is worthy of a Vaishnava's respect is settled: it is established that the remnants of offerings to Shiva worshipped by non-devotees are not to be accepted. Then, [passing] Kapotesvara, He came to the river Bhargavi, bathed there, and, going a little farther and seeing the pinnacle of the temple of Sri Jagannathadeva, fainted in prema; on regaining outer consciousness He bathed again and, offering praises and prayers, came to the house of Sarvabhauma. Sarvabhauma, seeing His form and mahabhava, surmised that He was Bhagavan and told his son to take Him to see Jagannatha. The Lord, standing behind the Garuda pillar, beheld Jagannatha and, absorbed in prema, danced and sang with the devotees; then He was brought from there back to Sarvabhauma's house. After this are described: Sarvabhauma's questions about the Lord, the taking of mahaprasada, the glorification of prasada, another darshana of Jagannatha, Sarvabhauma's [concern] for the Lord's [keeping of] sannyasa, the Lord's questions to Sarvabhauma, the showing of the six-armed form to Sarvabhauma, and so on.¹

Raga bhatiyari; disha: "Brothers, sing, O sing the glory and the virtues of Gora Gosani! (murchha) O brothers, my dear brothers, harbour no worldly desires: as long as you live in the world, do not leave the feet of Mahaprabhu!"

Shesha-khanda, part 1 (portion 46)

The beginning of the Shesha-khanda: the Lord sets out for the South; the brahmanas Kurma and Vasudeva at Kurma-kshetra; at Jiyada-Nrisimha the Lord tells the tale of the cowherd Punda who wounded the Boar, of the Deity rising from the earth as milk was poured, and of the merchant Jiyada, after whose name Nrisimha is called; the meeting with Ramananda Raya at Kanchi: the Lord appears to him in meditation and reveals His form of Krishna

The Lord's Journey to the South

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. Sriman Mahaprabhu, after staying some time in Puri in the bliss of kirtana together with Sarvabhauma, went to the southern lands to see Setubandha. From there, having shown mercy at Kurma-kshetra to a certain brahmana named Vasudeva and having instructed him that the dharma of the Kali age is the holy name of Sri Hari alone, He arrived at Jiyada-Nrisimha. Here, in the course of the narrative, the author relates the ancient history of Jiyada-Nrisimha.

From Jiyada-Nrisimha Sriman Mahaprabhu came to Kanchi-nagara, to Ramananda, and, having shown him the form of Rasaraja and Mahabhava¹, went by way of the Godavari to Panchavati; there, absorbed in prema, He saw all the places where Ramachandra had performed His various lilas during His exile in the forest, and came to Sri Ranganatha on the bank of the Kaveri. There He showed mercy to Trimalla Bhatta and spent the period of chaturmasya in his house. After that He met Paramananda Puri, the disciple of Madhavendra Puri-pada. Remembering the prophecy about the descent of Sriman Mahaprabhu [that he had heard] from the lips of Madhavendra Puri-pada, Paramananda Puri understood that the Lord was Bhagavan Himself and offered Him many hymns and prayers.

Word for word: raya ramanande ara prabhute milana — the meeting of Ramananda Raya and the Lord; gora-guna-gatha — the song of Gora's virtues; gaya — sings; e dasa lochana — this Lochana Dasa

114. The meeting of Ramananda Raya and the Lord —
a song of the virtues of Gora; this Lochana Dasa sings it.

1. Rasaraja ("king of rasa", Krishna) and Mahabhava (Radha) in one form. According to the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 8), at the end of the talks on the Godavari the Lord showed Ramananda just this form; in Lochana Dasa (vv. 105–110) the Lord shows the form of Krishna, and in the 1983 edition Krishna with Radha.

2. On Narahari and Gadadhara see en/24, v. 1. In the 1983 edition the Shesha-khanda is divided into chapters; chapter 1 bears the same title as Bhaktisiddhanta's section: "The Lord's Journey to the South."

3. Kurma-kshetra (Shrikurmam) is a shrine of Vishnu in the form of the Tortoise on the coast south of Orissa. Vv. 3–14 — cf. Murari 3.13–3.14.13–20 and the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 7); the brahmana Kurma receives the Lord at his home, and the leper brahmana Vasudeva is healed by His embrace. Lochana Dasa does not mention leprosy; "became pure" (v. 6) may hint at the healing.

4. Cf. Murari 3.14.19 and the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 7.128): "Whomever you meet, instruct him about Krishna."

5. Jiyada-Nrisimha is the Deity of Varaha-Nrisimha at Simhachalam, near Vishakhapatnam. The Lord tells the tale of this Deity (vv. 16–81) also in Murari (3.14.21–32), more briefly; in the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 8) the Lord only visits Him.

6. "Punda" — in Murari (3.14.23) "Pundaya"; it may be not a name but the name of a caste. The words "shasa" (in the 1983 edition "shasha", apparently cucumbers) and "mayambu" (so too in Murari) are unclear; they are given as they read.

7. Vv. 22+1 — 22+2 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them only in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript. The 1983 edition reads the second line of v. 22: "To whom shall I entrust the guarding of the crop?"

8. Vv. 23+1 — 23+3 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them only in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript.

9. The boar is the Lord Himself in the form of Varaha; by the name of Rama which He utters the cowherd recognizes Bhagavan (v. 30). Cf. Murari 3.14.24–25.

10. The sense of the first line is not quite clear; we understand: "you wounded Me, and I ate your crop — we are quits."

11. Vv. 41+1 — 41+2 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them only in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript.

12. Vv. 42+1 — 42+2 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them partly in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript. "Your body is My body" are words of the Lord's love for His devotee (cf. Bhagavata 9.4.68: "The sadhus are My heart, and I am their heart"), not a doctrine of the identity of the soul and God.
13. Vv. 59+1 — 59+5 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them only in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript. The thought that a devotee is not judged by birth is constant in Lochana Dasa and in all Gaudiya Vaishnavas.
14. Cf. Murari 3.14.26–28: at the Lord's word the place is sprinkled with milk, and He reveals His form. The body of the Deity rises out of the earth up to the knees; the feet remain hidden.
15. Vv. 71+1 — 71+4 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them only in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript.
16. Vv. 72+1 — 72+12 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them only in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript. Cf. the wives of the brahmanas (yajna-patnis) who went to Krishna in spite of their husbands' prohibition (Bhagavata 10.23): devotion to Krishna stands above worldly ties, and a righteous husband accepts it as his good fortune.
17. V. 77+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives it only in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript. The tale of the wives who turned to stone at the feet of the Deity is a local legend; in Murari (3.14.29–30) the merchant comes with one wife, and nothing is said of her fate. Attaining Krishna as Husband (pati) is no worldly bond: Krishna is the true Lord and Beloved of every soul.
18. So too in Murari (3.14.31–32): the merchant asks that the Lord bear his name — "for Hari is ever subject to His devotees."
19. So in A and C and in Murari (3.15.1). The 1983 edition reads Vidyanagara (in v. 84 too), as in the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 8), where Ramananda is governor of a province on the Godavari under King Prataparudra, and the Lord meets him on the bank of the Godavari. Kanchi (Kanchipuram) lies much farther south; in Lochana Dasa the Lord only afterwards goes "by way of the Godavari" to Panchavati (v. 116).
20. Vv. 85+1 — 85+2 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them only in a footnote (after v. 86), as an additional reading of one manuscript.
21. Ramananda Raya, son of Bhavananda Raya, was a high nobleman of Orissa; Lochana Dasa calls him now "prince" (rajaputra), now "king".
22. While remaining at the gate, the Lord at the same time appears to Ramananda in the inner apartments: He can be present in many places at once (cf. Krishna's presence in every palace of Dvaraka, Bhagavata 10.69). "Portion" (amsha) here is not a part cut off from the whole: the Lord is fully present in each of His manifestations.
23. Vv. 96–99 — cf. Murari 3.15.2–3: having finished his worship of Krishna, Ramananda contemplates the son of the king of Vraja and three times sees the form of Gauranga, and on opening his eyes he sees Him before him.
24. Vv. 104+1 — 104+2 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them only in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript and of a printed edition. In Murari (3.15.4) the Lord says: "How is it that you do not remember, O bee at the lotus feet of Sri Radhika?"
25. The 1903 edition gives vv. 107–110 only in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript and of a printed edition. The kanada flower is apparently a dark-blue flower (commelina) to which Krishna's colour is compared. According to the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 8), Ramananda first sees the Lord as a dark cowherd boy, and then the Lord reveals to him the form of Rasaraja and Mahabhava — Krishna and Radha in one body.
26. Vv. 112+1 — 112+4 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them in a footnote, as an additional reading of one manuscript (with one more couplet about the weeping queens). The vision of Radha and Krishna on a throne in the jewelled temple of Vrindavana is a vision of the eternal, transcendental lila of the Divine Couple. Red garments are the garments of a sannyasi.
27. Vv. 113+1 — 113+4 are found only in the 1983 edition; they are absent from the 1903 edition. In the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 8) the Lord likewise spends several days and nights with Ramananda in talks about Krishna, and Krishnadasa Kaviraja relates these talks in detail.

Shesha-khanda, part 2 (portion 47)

The end of the section "The Lord's Journey to the South": Panchavati; Ranganatha and Trimalla Bhatta; the meeting with Paramananda Puri and the prophecy of Madhavendra Puri. The section "The Lord Sees Vrindavana": the deliverance of the seven palms, Setubandha, the return to Puri; Nrisimhananda paves a road in his mind; the journey to Mathura through Kashi and Prayaga, the meeting with Rupa and Sanatana; the brahmana Krishnadasa and his account of the twelve forests

Raga shri; disha: "He takes away sins, torments and the fear of Yama. Glory to the son of Shachi, glory, glory!"

The Lord Sees Vrindavana

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. On the way to Setubandha Sriman Mahaprabhu showed the lila of delivering the seven palms. The ancient story of the seven palms [is this]: seven gandharvas, cursed by a sage, became trees; now, by the touch of the Lord, they attained liberation. Arriving at Setubandha, He, absorbed in prema, chanted the names of Rama, Lakshmana, Sita, Hanuman and others; then, having spent the chaturmasya on the bank of the Godavari, He returned again to Utkala, to Alalanatha. There He accepted as His own a devotee named Vishnudasa and, coming [to Purushottama], He stayed there and [spent] several months with the devotees in the bliss of kirtana. After this, setting out to see the Mathura-mandala, He met Rupa and Sanatana. Coming to Mathura, He, together with a devotee named Krishnadasa, absorbed in prema, saw on the eastern and western banks of the Yamuna the twelve forests, the prison of Devaki and Vasudeva, the houses of Kamsa, Ugrasena and others — countless places of Krishna's lilas⁸.

205. Thus Krishna's pastimes, place by place, Gaura sees with joy," says Lochana.

1. That is, though He is Krishna Himself, the Lord seems not to know His places and questions Krishnadasa.

2. Vv. 88–95 — cf. Murari 4.04. Vasudeva carries the newborn Krishna from the prison to Gokula; the "place where He passed water" (mutra-sthana) is a shrine of Mathura.

3. Uddhava is Krishna's friend and counsellor in Mathura; Krishna sent him to Vraja with a message to the gopis (Bhagavata 10.46–47). The Lord speaks as Krishna Himself, from memory.

4. The Vishranti-ghata is the "ghata of rest", where Krishna rested after killing Kamsa; Gatashrama ("He whose weariness is gone") is the Deity of Vishnu at this ghata. Vv. 101–114 — cf. Murari 4.04: the houses of the washerman, the garland-maker, Kubja, Vasudeva and Ugrasena, the arena, the twelve ghata, Kamsa's well.
5. V. 128+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; it is absent from the 1903 edition.
6. Vv. 116–130 — cf. Murari 4.05. Radha playfully teases Krishna: in the play of love the gopis deliberately refuse to acknowledge His greatness. According to Gaudiya Vaishnava teaching, Krishna is the original Bhagavan, and Rama is His manifestation; in answer to Her mockery He builds the dam. The Setubandha-sarovara is a lake near Kamana (Kamyavana).
7. Vv. 132–136 — shrines of Mathura; cf. Murari 4.04. The Saptasamudraka-kunda is the "pond of the seven seas"; by tradition, at this place Kamsa killed Devaki's children. Patala is the underworld.
8. Vv. 142–158 are a brief retelling of the Bhagavata (10.1–10.11): Narada's prophecy, Krishna's appearance in four-armed form, Vasudeva carries Him to Gokula, Yogamaya in the form of Yashoda's daughter goes up into the sky, the slaying of Putana, Shakata, Trinavarta, the universe in the Child's mouth, the stealing of butter, the Damodara-lila, the Yamala-arjuna trees, the fruit-seller. The she-jackal showing the ford is a Bengali tradition.
9. Gopeshvara is Shiva, who by tradition took the form of a gopi to enter the rasa dance. Ayana (Abhimanyu) is by tradition Radha's husband; Gaudiya Vaishnavas teach that this marriage is only an appearance created by yogamaya for the sake of parakiya-rasa. "The cowherd Sundara" — so in A and C; the 1983 edition reads "Nanda-gopa". On "Ravana's forest of austerity" the 1903 edition gives in a footnote the reading: "where Ravana of Lanka performed austerities."
10. Vv. 164–168 — a tradition (known from the Garga-samhita and the Brahma-vaivarta Purana): Nanda entrusts the infant Krishna to Radha in the Bhandira forest (in Lochana Dasa, in Bilvavana). Lochana Dasa tells it briefly and frankly. According to Gaudiya Vaishnava teaching (Bhaktisiddhanta), the love of Radha and Krishna is wholly transcendental (aprakrita): Krishna is ever Radha's Beloved, and His pastimes in the form of a child are not to be measured by worldly standards; these lilas must not be understood after the pattern of worldly relations.
11. V. 175+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; it is absent from the 1903 edition.
12. Vv. 159–176 — cf. Bhagavata 10.11 (the move to Vrindavana because of the troubles in Gokula). Bhadra and Bhandira are two of the twelve forests.
13. The Lord, in the mood of a cowherd friend (sakhyabhava), calls Shridama and Sudama, and also the cows. In the 1983 edition the cows are Dhavali and Shangali (cf. en/23). "This is He — the hero of the Yadus": Krishnadasa recognizes in the Lord Krishna Himself.
14. Vv. 190–200 follow the Bhagavata (10.11–10.20): Aghasura, the stealing of the calves by Brahma, Dhenuka, Kaliya, the forest fire, Pralamba. Pralamba was killed by Balarama in the Bhandira forest; "the death of Aghasura" in v. 200 (so in A and B) is apparently a slip for Pralamba.
15. Vv. 201–204 follow the Bhagavata (10.19): the cows strayed into the reed thickets, and a forest fire broke out; Krishna told the boys to close their eyes and swallowed the fire.

Shesha-khanda, part 4 (portion 49)

The section "The Lord Sees Vrindavana" (continued): Krishnadasa shows the Lord the places of Krishna's pastimes — the stealing of the clothes, Govardhana, the places of the nauka-lila and the dana-lila, the ponds; the ashoka grove blossoms at the Lord's glance; at the place of the rasa the Lord is in ecstasy, and Krishnadasa tells the rasa-lila (with passages found only in the 1983 edition)

1. Vv. 316–322 follow a Vraja tradition about the Khadira-vana. Madana-Gopala — "the Gopala [who conquers] Madana," the Deity of Krishna in Vrindavana (Madana-mohana). The love of Radha and Krishna is transcendental (aprakṛita); cf. en/48, note 10.

2. Vv. 323–335 follow the Bhagavata (10.34–10.37): the deliverance of the vidyadhara Sudarshana, who swallowed Nanda in Ambika-vana; the killing of Shankhachuda, Arishta, Keshi and Vyomasura; Narada reveals to Kamsa the secret of Krishna's birth. Cf. Murari 4.10.

3. The "sliding stone" (phisalani-shila) is a holy place of Kamyavana; the Pavana-sarovara is a pond at Nandagrama (Nandishvara).

4. Vv. 339–353 follow the Bhagavata (10.38–10.39): Akrura comes to Vraja on Kamsa's order, sees the marks of Krishna's feet, at night tells of Kamsa's design; Krishna and Balarama leave for Mathura; the gopis lament; in the waters of the Yamuna Akrura sees Vishnu on Ananta. Cf. Murari 4.11.

5. Cf. the Bhagavata 10.39.35 and 10.46–10.47 (the message sent with Uddhava).

6. Vv. 354–360 follow the Bhagavata (10.43.17): each one sees Krishna in the arena according to his own disposition. Vv. 356–360 are absent in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them in a footnote as an additional reading of one manuscript. In the 1983 edition vv. 380–411 (the way to Mathura, the washerman, Kubja, the bow, the elephant) stand before v. 354, which is more consistent; we keep Bhaktisiddhanta's order. Cf. Murari 4.12.

7. According to the Bhagavata (10.44.39), Kamsa, who thought of Krishna incessantly, though in fear and enmity, attained liberation. Gaudiya Vaishnavas explain that enemies slain by the Lord receive liberation, but not prema.

8. In the Bhagavata (10.44) it is Krishna who consoles Kamsa's wives.

9. That is, that Krishna sent Nanda and the cowherds back to Vraja and Himself remained in Mathura (Bhagavata 10.45): for the Vaishnava poet Vraja's separation from Krishna is the bitterest thing of all.

10. Vv. 379+1 — 379+3 are absent in Bhaktisiddhanta's edition (1922); they are found in the 1903 edition (here, after v. 379, with a new raga) and in the 1983 edition (before v. 412, since vv. 380–411 are moved earlier there). Cf. the Bhagavata 10.45 (Vasudeva performs the sacred-thread ceremony for his sons).
11. Vv. 380–411 go back to the arrival of Krishna and Balarama in Mathura (Bhagavata 10.41–10.43): the washerman, Sudama the garland-maker, Kubja, the bow, the elephant Kuvalayapida, the challenge to the wrestling; cf. Murari 4.12. The washerman's name (Durmukha) is not given in the Bhagavata.
12. Lochana Dasa speaks plainly of Kubja's desire. Gaudiya Vaishnavas (following Rupa Gosvami) distinguish Kubja's love, which contains a desire for her own pleasure (sadharani-rati), from the selfless love of the gopis (samartha-rati); cf. en/49, note 11.
13. Vv. 396–400 (Kamsa's high platform, the platforms for Vasudeva and Devaki, the well) are details not found in the Bhagavata; cf. the Bhagavata 10.42.26–38 (evil omens, the preparation of the arena).
14. Lochana Dasa returns to the story of Gaura: that same Krishna, the Lord of Vrindavana, appeared in the Kali age as Gaura.
15. V. 423 is absent in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition puts it in brackets as the reading of some manuscripts.
16. A spiritual experience is meant (the Lord revealing Himself in the heart), not a worldly feeling: the residents of the Mathura-mandala, seeing Gaura, experience Krishna's lilas — one sees the Child, another the Youth, another hears the flute.

Shesha-khanda, part 6 (portion 51)

The section "The Lord's Return to Nilachala" (ch. 3): mercy to the cowherd; the Lord at Kulia and Navadvipa — Shachi's lament and the Lord's instruction; kirtana at Advaita's house in Shantipura; by way of Tamoluk to Puri; mercy to King Prataparudra: the sannyasi in Jagannatha's place, the six-armed form, the instruction to the king

The Lord's Return to Nilachala

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. Having seen the places of Sri Krishna's lilas in the Mathura-mandala, Srīman Mahāprabhu wished to return to Nilachala. On the way He walked so fast that His companions could not keep up with Him and fell behind. The Lord was going alone along a forest path; meeting a cowherd boy on the way, He asked him for some buttermilk and, telling him to take the price of the buttermilk from the people coming behind, set off again. A little later the companions arrived there; the cowherd boy told them how the Lord had drunk the buttermilk and asked for payment — but the very next moment he saw that his pot was full of priceless treasure. Thus Srīman Mahāprabhu, as if for the sake of the buttermilk, showed mercy to this cowherd boy and, continuing on His way, came to Navadvipa. The people of Navadvipa ran like madmen to see the Lord. Mother Shachi came to the Lord weeping and began to tell Him the grief of separation. Then Mahāprabhu said to Mother Shachi: "I abide near whoever serves Krishna," and, instructing her in the service of Krishna, spent a day in the bliss of kirtana in the house of Acharya Gosani at Shantipura, and then by way of Tamoluk reached Nilachala and showed mercy to King Prataparudra.

Word for word: shuna sarvajana — hear, everyone; gorachandera prakasha — the manifestation of Gorachand; anande kahaye guna — joyfully tells [His] glories; e lochanadasa — this Lochana Dasa

joyfully this Lochana Dasa tells His glories.

1. Vv. 1–21 — cf. Murari 4.13 ("Mercy to the Cowherd"). In Lochana Dasa, as in Murari (4.14–4.15), the Lord goes from Vrindavana through Bengal (Kulia, Navadvipa, Shantipura) to Puri; according to the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 16–18, 25), the Lord visited Kulia and Shantipura on the way to Vrindavana and returned from Vrindavana by way of Prayaga and Kashi.

2. Vv. 9+1 — 9+2 are found only in the 1983 edition; they are absent in the 1903 edition. The end of v. 9+1 is unclear; translated by the sense.

3. V. 13+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives it in a footnote as an additional reading of one printed edition.

4. Vv. 22–69 — cf. Murari 4.14–4.15 (Kulia, the meeting with Shachi, Advaita's house, the return to Puri).

5. "Vain" (michha) — cf. en/37, note 14. The Lord speaks as a sannyasi-teacher, addressing the whole world through His mother. Shachi's love itself is no worldly attachment: in the Gaudiya Vaishnava teaching Shachi is the Lord's eternal associate (Yashoda), and her motherly love (vatsalya-prema) is spiritual; Shachi herself answers that she knows this "maya of affection" of the Lord from the scriptures (v. 46), and the Lord admits that He is "captive to her virtues" (v. 53).

6. "Maya" here is Shachi's motherly love, to which the Lord Himself submits (cf. v. 46).

7. Vv. 53+1 — 53+3 are found only in the 1983 edition; the 1903 edition gives them in a footnote as an additional reading of a printed edition. The Lord reminds Shachi that she is His mother in many descents (as Kaushalya, Devaki and Yashoda, Aditi, Devahuti); in the Gaudiya Vaishnava teaching all avatars come from Krishna, who has appeared as Gaura.

8. Cf. the Lord's farewell to Shachi in Murari (4.14).

9. Vv. 70–125 — the mercy to Prataparudra; cf. Murari 4.16 (the king sees Gaura and Nityananda in kirtana and then, in dreams, as Krishna and Balarama). According to the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 11–14), the Lord long refused to meet the king, saying that a sannyasi should not see a king (cf. vv. 103–104), and received him during the Ratha-yatra, when the king, dressed as a simple Vaishnava, recited the Gopi-gita. Lochana Dasa's account is different.

10. The padichha is the superintendent of the Jagannatha temple. The king sees Gaura in Jagannatha's place: Gaura is non-different from Jagannatha (cf. en/45, note 15, on the Daru-brahman; below, v. 85: "This Jagannatha is that very sannyasi-avatara").

11. The garden (tota) is the Lord's residence in Puri; Govinda is His servant; Puri Gosani (v. 92) is Paramananda Puri. In the 1983 edition vv. 87–88 are in a different wording, one couplet longer: "There is no one in the garden... The king, beside himself, lost his senses. The king pleadingly says to Govinda: 'How may I see the Gosani's feet? Tell me the means for it, great one,' — so he says again and again."

12. The six-armed form (shadbhuja) — by tradition, with the arms of Rama (bow and arrow), Krishna (flute) and the sannyasi (staff and water-pot). By tradition, the Lord also revealed the six-armed form to Sarvabhauma (en/45, vv. 243–245 and note 22).

13. That is, whoever sees in others what he sees in himself — their joy and sorrow — is a true servant of Krishna.

Shesha-khanda, part 7 (portion 52)

The section "The Final Pastimes": the poor brahmana from Dravida and Vibhishana — the end of the text in Bhaktisiddhanta's edition. Chapter 4 (only in the 1983 edition): the concealment of the Lord — He enters into Jagannatha; the devotees' grief; Lochana Dasa's closing word about himself

The Final Pastimes (Shesha-lila)

Summary by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati. Shortly before Sriman Mahaprabhu withdrew [from mundane sight], a poor brahmana from Dravida, tormented by want, came to Purushottama and fasted seven days to obtain the mercy of Sri Jagannatha-deva; not obtaining it, he resolved to give up his life in the ocean. Then, on the ocean shore, by providence he met Vibhishana, and Vibhishana, instructing him: "A living being experiences joy and sorrow according to the fruits of his karma; therefore one should worship Jagannatha-deva, remaining indifferent to joy and sorrow," went on his way; but the brahmana did not leave him and together with Vibhishana came to Sriman Mahaprabhu. [Mahaprabhu, having granted him wealth through Vibhishana,] instructed him in [the service of] Krishna and showed him mercy.

*Thus ends the Shesha-khanda of the "Sri Chaitanya-mangala," composed by Sri Lochana Dasa Thakura. The "Sri Chaitanya-mangala" is complete*¹⁵.

1. Vv. 1–94 — cf. Murari 4.21 (the poor brahmana from Dravida and Vibhishana at Gaura's feet). Vibhishana is Ravana's brother, a devotee of Rama, by tradition immortal (chiranjivi); in Puri it is said that he comes to see Jagannatha.

2. The brahmana threatens to die at the Deity's door, so that the sin of killing a brahmana would fall on the Lord Himself. Lochana Dasa himself below (vv. 57–61), through the Lord's words, censures this disposition — blaming the Lord for the fruits of one's own karma.

3. V. 29+1 is found only in the 1983 edition; it is absent in the 1903 edition.

4. A finger to the nose is a gesture of astonishment: Vibhishana is surprised that the brahmana is still following him. At the gate Govinda sees "two young brahmanas" (v. 50): Vibhishana appears in the guise of a brahmana.

5. Cf. the Chaitanya-charitamrita (Madhya 22): even when He is worshipped for other desires, Krishna grants the petitioner His feet, and in time that person gives up other desires.

6. V. 86 is spoken by Puri Gosani (Paramananda Puri), who tells how he ventured to ask.

7. Here the text in Bhaktisiddhanta's edition ends; what follows is a chapter found only in the 1983 edition (in the 1903 edition, in a footnote).

8. This chapter is absent in Bhaktisiddhanta's edition (1922): his text ends with v. 94 of the section "The Final Pastimes" and the colophon (see the end of this portion). The chapter is translated from Haridasa Shastri's edition (1983), where it stands as chapter 4 of the Shesha-khanda (we have transcribed its text from Devanagari into Bengali script, see bn/52). The 1903 edition gives it not in the main text but in a footnote after v. 94, with the editor's remarks on the sources, with variant readings and several additional lines (these, being absent in the 1983 edition, we do not translate). The numbering continues that of the section: 94+1, 94+2...

9. The sense of the couplet is unclear: apparently the Lord, in separation, cannot be satisfied with seeing Jagannatha and resolves to unite with Him for ever.

10. Lochana Dasa writes that the Lord "entered into Jagannatha" (literally, "became lina," "merged"). In the Gaudiya Vaishnava understanding (Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati), the Lord's departure is antardhana-lila: He only withdrew from mundane sight, just as He appeared by His own will; His body is sach-chid-ananda, not material, and there is no death for Him. The "merging" here is not the impersonal dissolution of a jiva in Brahman: the Lord re-enters His own form — the Deity of Jagannatha, non-different from Him (cf. en/45, note 15, on the Daru-brahman and en/51, v. 85). Other traditions tell of the departure differently: Jayananda (Chaitanya-mangala) speaks of a wound to the foot from a brick during the Ratha-yatra; according to another tradition the Lord disappeared in the temple of Tota-Gopinatha; the Chaitanya-charitamrita gives no account of the Lord's departure. The traditional date is 1533 (Shaka 1455).

11. The Gunjabadi is apparently a room or courtyard in the Jagannatha temple; the exact meaning is unclear. The padichha is the temple superintendent (cf. en/51, v. 75).

12. The list is poetic: according to the Chaitanya-charitamrita, Haridasa Thakura departed before the Lord (Antya 11), and Sanatana Gosvami lived in Vrindavana. Gauridasa is apparently Gauridasa Pandita of Ambika (Kalna); Govinda is the Lord's servant (or Govinda Ghosha).

13. Vv. 94+39 — 94+69 are Lochana Dasa's closing word; they are found only in the 1983 edition (in the 1903 edition, in the same footnote, with variant readings and with additional lines on Narahari Sarakara, Raghunandana and others that are absent in the 1983 edition). Lochana Dasa was a vaidya and lived in Kogram (now in Purba Bardhaman district, West Bengal); his mother was Sadanandi, his father Kamalakara Dasa; his maternal grandfather Purushottama Gupta, his grandmother Abhaya Dasi; his guru Narahari Sarakara Thakura of Shrikhandia.

14. Murari Gupta is the author of the Sanskrit poem Sri Krishna-chaitanya-charitamrita (Murari's "Kadcha"), on which Lochana Dasa relies (see our translation in murari-gupta/).

15. The colophon of Bhaktisiddhanta's edition — there it stands directly after v. 94 of "The Final Pastimes." In the 1983 edition, after chapter 4: "Thus ends the Shesha-khanda of the book 'Sri Chaitanya-mangala.'"
