“Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta”

Antya-līlā

Chapter 19

The Ravings of Separation, the Rubbing of His Face against the Walls, and Other Pastimes

(English translation from the Bengali, following the Gauḍīya Maṭha edition and the Anubhāṣya, 2026)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya

Summary. Inspired by His devotion to His mother, every year the Lord sent Jagadānanda Paṇḍita to Śrī Navadvīpa with cloth and sweets that were prasāda. One year Jagadānanda went to Navadvīpa in this way and brought back a riddle in the form of a tarjā (tarjā-prahelī) written by Advaita Ācārya. When Mahāprabhu read it, His condition grew ever deeper, and the devotees began to think, “Mahāprabhu will probably soon depart from this world.” The Lord’s state became such that at night He rubbed His face [against the walls], and blood flowed from the wounds on His body. To prevent this, Svarūpa Gosvāmī had Śaṅkara Paṇḍita sleep in the Lord’s room. Once, on the full-moon night of the month of Vaiśākha, the Lord entered the garden of Śrī Jagannātha-vallabha. Manifesting various feelings, under an aśoka tree He suddenly saw Kṛṣṇa. Then, maddened by the fragrance of Kṛṣṇa’s body, He began to manifest [divine] feelings.

Obeisance to the Lord, who is full of incomparable tenderness towards His devotee — His mother — and absorbed in mahābhāva in the Jagannātha-

vallabha garden —

বন্দে তং কৃষ্ণচৈতন্যং মাতৃভক্তশিরোমণিম্ ।

mātṛ-bhakta-śiromaṇim of those devoted to their mothers the crown jewel pralapya mukha-saṅgharṣī raving His face rubbing madhudyāne lalāsa yaḥ in the spring garden sported who

1 I bow down to Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya, the crown jewel of all who are devoted to their mothers — to Him who, raving in His divine madness, rubbed His face against the walls and sported in the spring garden.[1]

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
I bow down to Kṛṣṇa Caitanya, the crown jewel of all who are devoted to their mothers. While speaking incoherently (pralāpa), He rubbed His face against the walls of the house; and to show His longing for love of Kṛṣṇa, He sported in the spring garden (madhūdyāna), the garden of Jagannātha-vallabha.

Anubhāṣya.
mukha-saṅgharṣī (He whose habit is to rub His face) yaḥ (Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanyadeva) pralapya (speaking incoherent words and so on) madhūdyāne (in the grove of spring pastimes called Jagannātha-vallabha) lalāsa (sported), taṁ mātṛ-bhakta-śiromaṇim (the crown jewel among those devoted to their mothers — Him, the ornament of the head, the best of the best, Kṛṣṇa Caitanya) ahaṁ vande.

জয় জয় শ্রীচৈতন্য জয় নিত্যানন্দ । জয়াদ্বৈতচন্দ্র জয় গৌরভক্তবৃন্দ ॥ ২ ॥

jaya jaya śrī-caitanya jaya nityānanda glory glory to Śrī Caitanya glory to Nityānanda jayādvaita-candra jaya gaura-bhakta-vṛnda glory to Advaitacandra glory to Gaura's devotees host

2 Glory, glory to Śrī Caitanya! Glory to Nityānanda! Glory to Advaitacandra, and glory to all the devotees of Gaura!

The Lord's divine madness —

এইমতে মহাপ্রভু কৃষ্ণপ্রেমাবেশে । উন্মাদ-প্রলাপ করে রাত্রি-দিবসে ॥ ৩ ॥ ei-mate mahāprabhu kṛṣṇa-premāveśe in this way Mahāprabhu for Kṛṣṇa absorbed in love unmāda-pralāpa kare rātri-divase mad ravings makes night and day

3 In this way Mahāprabhu, absorbed in love for Kṛṣṇa, raved night and day in divine madness.

The virtues of Jagadānanda Paṇḍita —

প্রভুর অত্যন্ত প্রিয় পণ্ডিত-জগদানন্দ । যাহার চরিত্রে প্রভু পায়েন আনন্দ ॥ ৪ ॥

prabhura atyanta priya paṇḍita-jagadānanda to the Lord very dear Paṇḍita Jagadānanda yāhāra caritre prabhu pāyena ānanda in whose conduct the Lord finds joy

4 Jagadānanda Paṇḍita was very dear to the Lord, who delighted in all his ways.

As every year, the Lord sends the Paṇḍita to Navadvīpa to convey to His mother words of incomparable tenderness —

প্রতিবৎসর প্রভু তাঁরে পাঠান নদীয়াতে । বিচ্ছেদ-দুঃখিতা জানি' জননী আশ্বাসিতে ॥ ৫ ॥

prati-vatsara prabhu tāṁre pāṭhāna nadīyāte every year the Lord him sends to Nadīyā viccheda-duḥkhitā jāni' jananī āśvāsite
by separation grieved knowing His mother to console

5 Every year the Lord sent him to Nadīyā to console His mother, for He knew how she grieved in separation from Him.

নদীয়া চলহ, মাতারে কহিহ নমস্কার । আমার নামে পাদপদ্ম ধরিহ তাঁহার ॥ ৬ ॥

nadīyā calaha, mātāre kahiha namaskāra to Nadīyā go to Mother tell My obeisances āmāra nāme pāda-padma dhariha tāṁhāra in My name the lotus feet touch her

6 "Go to Nadīyā and convey My obeisances to Mother. Touch her lotus feet on My behalf.

কহিহ তাঁহারে — 'তুমি করহ স্মরণ । নিত্য আসি' তোমার বন্দিয়ে চরণ ॥ ৭ ॥

kahiha tāṁhāre — 'tumi karaha smaraṇa tell her you please remember nitya āsi' tomāra vandiye caraṇa
every day coming your I worship feet

7 Tell her: 'Please remember — every day I come and bow at your feet.

যে-দিনে তোমার ইচ্ছা করাইতে ভোজন । সে-দিনে অবশ্য আমি করিয়ে ভক্ষণ ॥ ৮ ॥

ye-dine tomāra icchā karāite bhojana on whatever day your wish to feed (Me) se-dine avaśya āmi kariye bhakṣaṇa on that day surely I do eat

8 Whenever you wish to feed Me, I surely come and eat.

Even Bhagavān, who loves His devotees (bhakta-vatsala), considers Himself unfit to serve His devotee, speaks humbly, and begs forgiveness —

তোমার সেবা ছাড়ি' আমি করিলুঁ সন্ন্যাস ।
'বাউল' হঞা আমি কৈলুঁ ধর্ম্মনাশ ॥ ৯ ॥

tomāra sevā chāḍi' āmi karilum̐ sannyāsa your service giving up I took sannyāsa
'bāula' hañā āmi kailum̐ dharma-nāśa
a madman becoming I made of duty ruin

9 I gave up serving you and took sannyāsa. I became a madman and abandoned My duty.

এই অপরাধ তুমি না লইহ আমার । তোমার অধীন আমি — পুত্র সে তোমার ॥ ১০ ॥ ei aparādha tumi nā laiha āmāra this offence you not take My tomāra adhīna āmi — putra se tomāra on you dependent I son indeed your 10 Do not hold this offence against Me. I am dependent on you — I am your son.

The Lord lives in Purī by Śacīdevī's order —

নীলাচলে আছি আমি তোমার আজ্ঞাতে । যাবৎ জীব, তাবৎ আমি নারিব ছাড়িতে ॥ ১১ ॥

nīlācale āchi āmi tomāra ājñāte in Nīlācala stay I your by order yāvat jība, tāvat āmi nāriba chāḍite as long as I live so long I cannot leave

11 I stay in Nīlācala by your order, and as long as I live I cannot leave it.' "

At Paramānanda Purī's request the Lord sends cloth and prasāda to Śacīdevī in Navadvīpa —

গোপ-লীলায় পাইলা যেই প্রসাদ-বসনে । মাতারে পাঠান তাহা পুরীর বচনে ॥ ১২ ॥

gopa-līlāya pāilā yei prasāda-vasane in the cowherd pastime received which prasāda cloth mātāre pāṭhāna tāhā purīra vacane to Mother sends that of Purī at the word

12 At the request of Paramānanda Purī, the Lord would send His mother the cloth prasāda He had received at the festival of Jagannātha's cowherd pastime.

Anubhāṣya.
Cloth that is prasāda from Śrī Jagannāthadeva's dress as a cowherd boy (gopa-veśa).

জগন্নাথের উত্তম প্রসাদ আনিয়া যতনে । মাতারে পৃথক্ পাঠান, আর ভক্তগণে ॥ ১৩ ॥

jagannāthera uttama prasāda āniyā yatane Jagannātha's best prasāda bringing with care mātāre pṛthak pāṭhāna, āra bhakta-gaṇe to Mother separately sends and to the devotees

13 He also took care to obtain the best of Jagannātha's prasāda, and He sent it separately to His mother and to the devotees.

Bhagavān is subject to transcendental parental love (vātsalya-prema) —

মাতৃভক্তগণের প্রভু হন শিরোমণি । সন্ন্যাস করিয়া সদা সেবেন জননী ॥ ১৪ ॥

mātṛ-bhakta-gaṇera prabhu hana śiromaṇi of those devoted to their mothers the Lord is the crown jewel sannyāsa kariyā sadā sevena jananī sannyāsa having taken always serves His mother

14 The Lord is the crown jewel of all who are devoted to their mothers. Even after taking sannyāsa, He always served His mother.

Anubhāṣya.
The mother gave this material body and raised and nourished it. If one who bears it engages it in serving Kṛṣṇa, that alone — through the worship of Hari — is the purest and best service to one's mother.

The Paṇḍita goes to Navadvīpa and gives Śacīdevī the sweets and other things sent by the Lord —

জগদানন্দ নদীয়া গিয়া মাতারে মিলিলা । প্রভুর যত নিবেদন, সকল কহিলা ॥ ১৫ ॥

jagadānanda nadīyā giyā mātāre mililā Jagadānanda to Nadīyā going with Mother met prabhura yata nivedana, sakala kahilā
the Lord's as many messages all told

15 Arriving in Nadīyā, Jagadānanda met Mother Śacī and gave her all the Lord's messages.

After staying in Navadvīpa and Śāntipura, he asks leave to go —

আচার্য্যাদি ভক্তগণে মিলিলা প্রসাদ দিয়া । মাতা-ঠাঞি আজ্ঞা লইলা মাসেক রহিয়া ॥ ১৬ ॥

ācāryādi bhakta-gaṇe mililā prasāda diyā the Ācārya and other devotees met prasāda giving mātā-ṭhāñi ājñā lailā māseka rahiyā from Mother leave took a month staying

16 He also visited Advaita Ācārya and the other devotees and gave them prasāda. After staying a month, he took leave of Mother Śacī.

আচার্য্যের ঠাঞি গিয়া আজ্ঞা মাগিলা । আচার্য্য-গোসাঞি প্রভুরে সন্দেশ কহিলা ॥ ১৭ ॥

ācāryera ṭhāñi giyā ājñā māgilā of the Ācārya to going leave asked ācārya-gosāñi prabhure sandeśa kahilā Ācārya Gosāñi for the Lord a message gave 17 He went to the Ācārya to take leave of him, and Ācārya Gosāñi gave him a message for the Lord.

Through the Paṇḍita, Śrī Advaita Prabhu sends Mahāprabhu a riddle (prahelikā) —

তরজা-প্রহেলী আচার্য্য কহেন ঠারে ঠোরে । প্রভুমাত্র বুঝেন, কেহ বুঝিতে না পারে ॥ ১৮ ॥

tarajā-prahelī ācārya kahena ṭhāre ṭhore
a tarjā riddle the Ācārya speaks in hints prabhu-mātra bujhena, keha bujhite nā pāre
the Lord only understands anyone understand not can

18 The Ācārya spoke in riddles and veiled hints (tarjā-prahelī), which only the Lord could understand — no one else.

প্রভুরে কহিহ আমার কোটি নমস্কার । এই নিবেদন তাঁর চরণে আমার ॥ ১৯ ॥

prabhure kahiha āmāra koṭi namaskāra to the Lord tell my ten million obeisances ei nivedana tāṁra caraṇe āmāra this submission His at the feet my 19 "Convey my countless obeisances to the Lord, and lay this submission of mine at His feet:

A hint that the purpose of Mahāprabhu's descent has been fulfilled and that it is time to wind up His pastimes —

বাউলকে কহিহ, — লোক হইল বাউল । বাউলকে কহিহ, — হাটে না বিকায় চাউল ॥ ২০ ॥

bāulake kahiha, — loka haila bāula to the madman tell people have become mad bāulake kahiha, — hāṭe nā vikāya cāula to the madman tell in the market not sells rice

20 Tell the madman (bāul) that the people have gone mad. Tell the madman that rice no longer sells in the market.

Anubhāṣya.
A variant reading: "Tell the madman (bāul): people have become āul." The word āul means ātura, overwhelmed [with feeling] — that is, full of love. Some also take it to mean "slack" or "incoherent." The word āul also means niṣkiñcana (one who owns nothing), ārta (afflicted), ātura (distressed), and so on.

বাউলকে কহিহ, — কাযে নাহিক আউল । বাউলকে কহিহ, — ইহা কহিয়াছে বাউল ॥ ২১ ॥

bāulake kahiha, — kāye nāhika āula to the madman tell in work is not the āul bāulake kahiha, — ihā kahiyāche bāula to the madman tell this has said a madman

21 Tell the madman that the āul — the one mad with love — is no longer engaged in worldly affairs. Tell the madman that a madman has said this."

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

(Śrī Advaita Prabhu sent these words through Jagadānanda Paṇḍita:) "Tell Mahāprabhu that people have gone mad with love (prema), and in the market of love there is no longer any place to sell the rice of love. Tell Mahāprabhu that the āul — that is, the bāul mad with love — is no longer engaged in worldly affairs. Tell Mahāprabhu that Advaita has said this, being himself mad with love." The import is this: the purpose for which the Lord appeared has been fulfilled; now let whatever the Lord wishes be done.

Anubhāṣya.

"kāye nāhika āula" (there is no more āul in the work) — some explain it this way: there is no longer any disorder in the work of preaching love[10].

Hearing this, Jagadānanda laughs and, coming to Purī, relates it to the Lord —

এত শুনি' জগদানন্দ হাসিতে লাগিলা । নীলাচলে আসি' তবে প্রভুরে কহিলা ॥ ২২ ॥ eta śuni' jagadānanda hāsite lāgilā this hearing Jagadānanda to laugh began nīlācale āsi' tabe prabhure kahilā to Nīlācala coming then to the Lord told

22 Hearing this, Jagadānanda began to laugh. Then he returned to Nīlācala and told the Lord everything.

Hearing this, the Lord smiles and falls silent —

তরজা শুনি' মহাপ্রভু ঈষৎ হাসিলা ।
'তাঁর যেই আজ্ঞা' — বলি' মৌন ধরিলা ॥ ২৩ ॥ tarajā śuni' mahāprabhu īṣat hāsilā

the tarjā hearing Mahāprabhu slightly smiled
'tāṁra yei ājñā' — bali' mauna dharilā his whatever order saying silence kept

23 Mahāprabhu heard the tarjā, smiled slightly and said, "That is his order." Then He fell silent.

Śrī Svarūpa asks its meaning —

জানিয়া স্বরূপ গোসাঞি প্রভুরে পুছিল ।
'এই তরজার অর্থ বুঝিতে নারিল' ॥ ২৪ ॥ jāniyā svarūpa gosāñi prabhure puchila learning (of this) Svarūpa Gosāñi the Lord asked

'ei tarajāra artha bujhite nārila' this of the tarjā the meaning to understand I could not

24 Learning of this, Svarūpa Gosāñi asked the Lord about it: "I could not make out the meaning of this tarjā."[2]

The Lord explains the riddle by a hint —

প্রভু কহেন, — 'আচার্য্য হয় পূজক প্রবল । আগম-শাস্ত্রের বিধি-বিধানে কুশল ॥ ২৫ ॥

prabhu kahena, — 'ācārya haya pūjaka prabala the Lord says the Ācārya is a worshipper great āgama-śāstrera vidhi-vidhāne kuśala of the Āgama scriptures in the rules and regulations expert

25 The Lord said, "The Ācārya is a great worshipper, expert in the rules and regulations of the Āgama scriptures.

26 For worship he invokes the Deity, and keeps Him present as long as the pūjā lasts.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
āvāhana — invoking the Deity before worship; nirodhana — keeping the Deity present for as long as the worship continues.

পূজা নির্ব্বাহণ হৈলে পাছে করেন বিসর্জ্জন ।

28 The Ācārya is a great master of yoga, skilled in veiled sayings. Even I cannot fathom the meaning of his tarjā."

The devotees' amazement; Svarūpa's sadness —

শুনিয়া বিস্মিত হইলা সব ভক্তগণ । স্বরূপ-গোসাঞি কিছু হইলা বিমন ॥ ২৯ ॥

śuniyā vismita hailā saba bhakta-gaṇa hearing astonished became all the devotees svarūpa-gosāñi kichu hailā vimana
Svarūpa Gosāñi somewhat became downcast

29 Hearing this, all the devotees were astonished, and Svarūpa Gosāñi became somewhat downcast.

The Lord's separation from Kṛṣṇa grows ever stronger —

সেই দিন হৈতে প্রভুর আর দশা হইল । কৃষ্ণের বিরহ-দশা দ্বিগুণ বাড়িল ॥ ৩০ ॥

sei dina haite prabhura āra daśā haila that day from of the Lord another state arose kṛṣṇera viraha-daśā dviguṇa bāḍila of Kṛṣṇa separation's state doubly increased

30 From that day the Lord's condition changed: His feeling of separation from Kṛṣṇa grew twice as strong.

31 Night and day He behaved and raved like one mad. Absorbed in the feelings of Rādhā, He felt the separation grow keener every moment.

The Lord's udghūrṇā and incoherent words (pralāpa) —

আচম্বিতে স্ফুরে কৃষ্ণের মথুরা-গমন ।
উদঘূর্ণা-দশা হৈল উন্মাদ লক্ষণ ॥ ৩২ ॥

32 Suddenly Kṛṣṇa's departure for Mathurā rose before Him, and He was seized by udghūrṇā, a symptom of divine madness.

35 "O friend, where is the moon of Nanda's line? Where is He who is adorned with a peacock feather? Where is He whose flute sounds so deep, whose lustre is like the sapphire's? Where is He who dances, enraptured by the taste of the rāsa? Where is He — the medicine that saves My life, My treasure, My dearest friend? Alas, alas! Fie on the Creator!" (Lalita-mādhava, 3.25)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

O friend, where is that moon of Nanda's dynasty? Where is Kṛṣṇa, adorned with the peacock feather (śikhi-candraka)? Where is Kṛṣṇa, whose flute sounds softly[9]? Where is Kṛṣṇa, lustrous like the sapphire (indranīla)? Where is He who dances, enraptured by the taste of the rāsa-līlā? Where is Śyāma, the medicine that protects life? Where is My treasure, My dearest friend? Alas! Alas! Fie on the Creator!

Anubhāṣya.

> (Lalita-mādhava 3.25; Śrī Rādhā's words to Viśākhā)

sakhi (O friend [Viśākhā]), nanda-kula-candramāḥ (Nanda — "he who gladdens"; he is like the ocean of milk, and the moon born in his line is the moon of Nanda's dynasty) kva (where [is He])? śikhi-candrakālaṅkṛtiḥ (He whose ornament is the peacock feather) kva (where does He stay)? mandra-muralī-ravaḥ

(He whose flute sounds deep) kva (where is He)? surendra-nīla-dyutiḥ (He whose lustre is blue like the surendra gem, that is, the sapphire [indranīla]) kva? rāsa-rasa-tāṇḍavī (He who in the rāsa sport dances with rapture [tāṇḍava, dance]) kva? jīva-rakṣauṣadhiḥ (He who is like a medicine that guards and saves life) kva? mama suhṛt-tamaḥ (dearest) nidhiḥ (the source of all riches) kva? bata (expresses grief) hā hanta, vidhim (on the Creator) dhik.

The meaning of the verse: Śrī Rādhā, tormented by separation from Kṛṣṇa, describes the qualities of Kṛṣṇa, the life of the people of Vraja — [Any rāga as suits (yathā-rāga)]

ব্রজেন্দ্রকুল — দুগ্ধসিন্ধু, কৃষ্ণ — তাহে পূর্ণ ইন্দু, জন্মি' কৈলা জগৎ উজোর ।
কান্ত্যমৃত যেবা পিয়ে, নিরন্তর পিয়া জিয়ে, ব্রজ-জনের নয়ন-চকোর ॥ ৩৬ ॥

vrajendra-kula — dugdha-sindhu, of the king of Vraja the dynasty the ocean of milk
kṛṣṇa — tāhe pūrṇa indu, Kṛṣṇa in it the full moon
janmi' kailā jagat ujora being born made the world illumined kānty-amṛta yebā piye,
of lustre the nectar who drink
nirantara piyā jiye, constantly drinking live
vraja-janera nayana-cakora of Vraja's people the eyes cakora birds

36 "The line of Vraja's king is an ocean of milk, and Kṛṣṇa is the full moon within it: by His birth He has lit up the world. The eyes of the people of Vraja are cakora birds: they drink the nectar of His lustre constantly, and only by drinking it do they live.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The dynasty of the king of Vraja is like the ocean of milk; Kṛṣṇa, like the full moon, was born in it and lit up the world. The eyes of the people of Vraja are like cakora birds, and they receive a nectar — Kṛṣṇa's lustre. Only one who constantly drinks this nectar remains alive.

ujora — illuminated (ujjvala).

Śrī Rādhā, thirsting to see Kṛṣṇa —

সখি হে, কোথা কৃষ্ণ, করাহ দরশন ।
ক্ষণেকে যাহার মুখ, না দেখিলে ফাটে বুক, শীঘ্র দেখাহ, না রহে জীবন ॥ ৩৭ ॥

sakhi he, kothā kṛṣṇa, karāha daraśana O friend O where Kṛṣṇa let (Me) see kṣaṇeke yāhāra mukha,
for a moment whose face
nā dekhile phāṭe buka,
not seeing breaks the heart
śīghra dekhāha, nā rahe jīvana quickly show not remains life

37 O friend, where is Kṛṣṇa? Let Me see Him! If I do not see His face even for a moment, My heart breaks. Show Him to Me quickly, or I cannot live![3]

Kṛṣṇacandra, the treasure of the gopīs' lives —

এই ব্রজের রমণী, কামার্কতপ্ত-কুমুদিনী, নিজ-করামৃত দিয়া দান ।
প্রফুল্লিত করে যেই, কাঁহা মোর চন্দ্র সেই, দেখাহ, সখি, রাখ মোর প্রাণ ॥ ৩৮ ॥

ei vrajera ramaṇī,
these of Vraja the women

own of the rays (hands) the nectar giving as a gift
praphullita kare yei, blossoming makes who
kāṁhā mora candra sei,
where My moon that dekhāha, sakhi, rākha mora prāṇa show O friend save My life

38 The women of Vraja are night-blooming lotuses scorched by the sun of loving desire (kāma). Where is that moon of Mine who makes them blossom with the gift of the nectar of His rays — His hands? O friend, show Him to Me and save My life!

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

To the women of Vraja, who are like night-blooming lotuses (kumudinī) scorched by the sun of loving desire (kāma), He gives the nectar of His kara (hands) — that is, the nectar of His rays.

Anubhāṣya.

The gopīs' loving desire (kāma) is like the sun (arka), and the gopīs' hearts are like night-blooming lotuses (kumudinī): the gopīs' hearts, burned by their desire [to meet] Kṛṣṇa, are like lotuses scorched by the sun's rays. The word nija points to Kṛṣṇa's own kara, that is, His rays or His hands: Kṛṣṇacandra (Kṛṣṇa, who is like the moon) gives those nectar-like rays — or hands.

Description of Kṛṣṇa's form in separation from Him —

a new cloud surpassing the dark body

39 Where is the beauty of His crown, with its waving peacock feathers, like a rainbow in a fresh cloud? His yellow garment is a flash of lightning, His pearl necklace a line of herons, and His dark body outshines a new rain cloud.

Anubhāṣya.
baka-pāṅti — a line, or row, of herons.

a body is not of the seyākul a thorn

40 Once Kṛṣṇa's body has met someone's eyes, it lives on in that heart for ever, clinging like the sap of the mango tree. It enters a woman's mind and will not come out, however hard she tries. It is not a body — it is a thorn of the seyākul bush!

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

"tanu nahe — seyā-kulera kāṅṭā" (it is not a body but a thorn of the seyākul): Kṛṣṇa's body can be compared to a thorn of the seyākul bush. Its nature is that once it catches, it is hard to get free of it.

Anubhāṣya.

āmra-āṭhā — the sap of the mango tree: once it sticks somewhere, it is hard to remove, and where it sticks it may even cause a sore.

41 His lustre, like a sapphire's, outshines the dark tamāla tree, and with it He maddens the world. With all his skill the Creator fashioned Him: he strained out the very essence of the rasa of love and mixed it with moonlight.[4]

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
chāni' — straining; sāni' — mixing.

Description of Kṛṣṇa's lustre —

কাঁহা সে মুরলীধ্বনি, নবাম্বুদ-গর্জ্জিত জিনি',

42 Where is the sound of that flute which surpasses the thunder of a fresh cloud and draws the whole world to hear it? At its sound the people of Vraja rise and run like thirsty cātaka birds, and come to drink the streams of the nectar of His lustre.

Anubhāṣya.
navāmbuda — a new cloud.

43 He is My moon, the treasury of all arts, the great medicine that saves My life. O friend, He is My dearest friend. Yet My body lives on without Him — fie on such a life! What a mockery the Creator has made of Me!

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
"deha jīye tāṅhā vine" (the body lives without Him): [fie on this life] because the body, parted from Him, has remained alive for so long.

Anubhāṣya.
kalā-nidhi — the reservoir of the sixty-four arts; in the other sense [of the moon], full in all sixteen digits (kalās); viḍambana — deceit, trickery.

45 “O Creator, there is no mercy in you anywhere! You join embodied beings in friendship and love, and then, before their desires are fulfilled, you pointlessly separate them. Your doings are like the play of a child.” (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 10.39.19)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

O Creator, you have no mercy! You join embodied beings through friendship and love (praṇaya), and while they are still unfulfilled you separate them again. Such deeds of yours can only be called a child's doings.

Anubhāṣya.

> (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 10.39.19)

The gopīs of Vraja, whose lives were given to Kṛṣṇa and who were Kṛṣṇa's beloveds, heard that Śrī Akrūra had come to Vraja only to take Rāma and Kṛṣṇa to Mathurā. Then, fearing the coming separation from Kṛṣṇa, they weep and lament in great grief:

aho (expresses grief) vidhātaḥ, tava kvacit dayā na (asti, there is not, yataḥ, because) maitryā (by friendship — by acting for their welfare) praṇayena (by affection — by tender love) dehinaḥ (embodied jīvas, one with another) saṁyojya akṛtārthān (even though they have not yet tasted the happiness [of union]) tān ca viyunaṅkṣi (you separate); te (your) viceṣṭitaṁ (deeds) arbhaka-ceṣṭitaṁ (what a child does out of foolishness) yathā (as, [so]) apārthakaṁ (are without reason).

47 O Creator, you are very cruel! You bring together in love those who are so hard for each other to win. Why then do you part them before their desires are fulfilled?[5]

Anubhāṣya.

"datta-apahāra" — to give something to someone and then take it back is dattāpahāra; it is one of the sins that require atonement (prāyaścitta).

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
O wicked Creator, if you say, “Akrūra has committed the offence — why are you angry with me?” then here is what I say.

Reproaching her own ill fate (citra-jalpa)

50 But it is the fault of My own deeds — why should I be angry with you? There is nothing between you and Me. It is Kṛṣṇa, the Lord of My life, from whom I was never apart, who has become so cruel!

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Reproaches to Kṛṣṇa in loving anger (praṇaya-roṣa) —

51 He whom I serve, having renounced everything, kills Me with His own hand. Kṛṣṇa has no fear of killing a woman. I am dying for Him, yet Hari will not even turn back to look at Me. In a moment He has broken our love.

Again reproaching her own fate —

কৃষ্ণে কেনে করি রোষ, আপন দুর্দ্দৈব-দোষ,

52 But why should I be angry with Kṛṣṇa? It is the fault of My own ill fate: the fruit of My sins has ripened. Kṛṣṇa is subject to My love, yet My mighty misfortune has made Him indifferent to Me!"

The Lord, seized by divine madness in the mood of the gopīs —

এইমত গৌর-রায়, বিষাদে করে হায় হায়,

53 In this way Gaura Rāya cried in grief, "Alas! Alas! O Kṛṣṇa, where have You gone?" With the feelings of the gopīs in His heart, He lamented in their words: "O Govinda! O Dāmodara! O Mādhava!"

Svarūpa consoles the Lord with songs suited to His feelings —

pūrve vidure yena śrī-śuka varṇila long ago of Vidura as Śrī Śuka described

69 So he became known as "the pillow for the Lord's feet", just as Śrī Śuka once described Vidura:

Maitreya speaks to Vidura, who served as a pillow for Kṛṣṇa's feet — (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 3.13.5)

being urged the sage began to speak

70 "So spoke the humble Vidura, the pillow for the feet of the thousand-headed Lord; and the sage Maitreya, urged on by him to speak of Bhagavān, began to speak, the hair on his body standing on end with joy." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, 3.13.5)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

The humble Vidura was the pillow for the feet of Kṛṣṇa, the Thousand-headed Puruṣa. When he spoke thus, the sage Maitreya, his hairs standing on end with the bliss of speaking about Bhagavān, began to speak.

Anubhāṣya.

The great-souled Vidura asked the mahā-bhāgavata sage Maitreya about the deeds of Svāyambhuva Manu, the best of Hari's devotees, and of Śatarūpā. In reply Maitreya spoke about Hari, and Śrī Śukadeva is relating that account to Parīkṣit:

(śrī-śuka uvāca —) bhagavat-kathāyāṁ (in describing the qualities of Śrī Hari) praṇīyamānaḥ (urged on by Vidura) prahṛṣṭa-romā (he whose hairs stood on end) muniḥ (Maitreya) iti bruvāṇaṁ (to the one asking) sahasra-śīrṣṇaḥ (of the Thousand-headed One, Śrī Kṛṣṇa) caraṇopadhānaṁ (the one on whom the feet are placed, that is, the one on whose lap Śrī Kṛṣṇa lovingly stretches out His feet) vinītaṁ (humble) viduraṁ abhyacaṣṭa (spoke).

It is said that Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa came to Vidura's house, rested both His feet on Vidura's lap and fell asleep (see the Sārārtha-darśinī commentary).

Śrī Raghunātha describes the Lord's divine madness in his own book — kṣatotthaṁ gaurāṅgo hṛdaya udayan māṁ madayati from wounds arisen Gaurāṅga in my heart rising me maddens

76 "In separation from His own Vraja, dear to Him as millions of lives, He raved constantly in His divine madness, His mind bewildered. Again and again He rubbed His moonlike face against the wall, and it was covered with blood from the wounds. That Gaurāṅga, rising in my heart, makes me mad with joy." (Caitanya-stava-kalpavṛkṣa, 6)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

In separation from Vraja, which was as dear to Him as countless lives, the incoherent words of madness arose in Him, and this state kept growing stronger. Therefore Gauracandra, His mind agitated, rubbed His moonlike face against the wall day after day and bore the blood that flowed from the wounds. This Gaurāṅgadeva, rising in my heart, is driving me mad.

Anubhāṣya.

svakīyasya (His own) prāṇārbuda-sadṛśa-goṣṭhasya (of Vraja [goṣṭha], which is like myriads [arbuda] of lives, that is, as dear as countless lives) virahāt unmādāt (because of divine madness) satatam (constantly) ati-pralāpān kurvan vikala-dhīḥ (agitated in mind) bhittau śaśvat (unceasingly) vadana-vidhu-gharṣeṇa (by rubbing the moon of His face) kṣatotthaṁ rudhiraṁ dadhat (bearing) gaurāṅgaḥ hṛdaye udayan māṁ madayati.

That Madana-mohana of Mine deepens the longing of My nostrils." (Govinda-līlāmṛta, 8.6)

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
The fragrance of His body conquers musk, and by its waves He draws the hearts of women to Himself. From the eight parts of His body, the eight lotuses, He spreads the fragrance of a lotus mixed with camphor. He is anointed with the scents of musk, camphor, sandalwood and aguru. O friend, this Madana-mohana is increasing the longing of My nostrils.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
hema-kīlita — set in gold; curi — concealment (hiding).

Anubhāṣya.
carcā — anointing. Variant readings: mili' ḍākā yena kaila curi ("mingling, it stole like a robber") and kāma-devera mana kaila curi ("it stole the mind of Kāmadeva").

The fragrance of Kṛṣṇa's body maddens the hearts of the gopīs —

96 The fragrance of Kṛṣṇa's body steals the bodies and hearts of women; it sets their nostrils reeling, loosens the knots of their garments and undoes their braided hair. First it drives the women of the world mad, and then it makes them dance — such a robber is the fragrance of Kṛṣṇa's body!

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.
bāurī — maddened.

The hearts of the gopīs, longing to taste the fragrance of Kṛṣṇa's body —

Anubhāṣya.

jagan-nārī-grāhake lobhāya — in this world He entices the women of Vraja, the gopīs, as customers[15].

The Lord's madness —

101 His devotion to His mother, His ravings, His rubbing His face against the walls, and His divine dancing when the fragrance of Kṛṣṇa appeared to Him — these are the four pastimes that Kṛṣṇadāsa, the servant of Rūpa Gosāñi, has sung in this chapter.

Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

kṛṣṇadāsa rūpa-gosāñi-bhṛtya — Kṛṣṇadāsa, the servant of Rūpa Gosvāmī. Reading this line, many think that Śrī Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī was a disciple of Rūpa Gosvāmī who received mantra from him. But when one reads other passages, it is hard to reach that conclusion. Here Śrīla Kavirāja Prabhu unfolds rasa by following the teaching of Śrī Rūpa's Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, and so he may have taken only Śrī Rūpa's name. Or the meaning may also be this: the author, Kṛṣṇadāsa, the servant of the Gosvāmīs, composed this line.

Thus ends the nineteenth chapter of the "Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya."

The transcendental Kṛṣṇa, beyond the senses (adhokṣaja), and the pastimes connected with Kṛṣṇa (kārṣṇa-līlā) are beyond the reach of those who follow the path of argument — those who think themselves scholars, are intoxicated with material learning and rely on knowledge gained through the senses —

of Śrī Rādhā the ravings in the Bhramara-gītā

107 Evidence of their truth is found in the Śrī Bhāgavatam: the ravings of Śrī Rādhā in the Bhramara-gītā.

Anubhāṣya.

(a) Śrī Rādhā's incoherent words, as in the Bhramara-gītā: see Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 10.47.12–21. Namely:

"O bee, friend of a cheat! Do not touch my feet with your whiskers, smeared with kuṅkuma from the garland crushed on my rival's breast. Let the Lord of Madhu please those proud women; He whose messenger is such as you will be mocked in the assembly of the Yadus." (1)

When Uddhava came to Vraja, the maidens of Vraja sang about Kṛṣṇa, wept and shed garlands of tears. Then one gopī, turning her gaze to a bee and meaning Uddhava by "messenger," remembered her Beloved and said: "O bee, you are the friend of a cheat. How strange is your way of touching feet! Your obeisances will never win my favour. On the tips of your whiskers I see traces of kuṅkuma. Kṛṣṇa's forest garland lay on my rival's breast, and seeing the crushed kuṅkuma, I burn. Mādhava, the friend of the people of Mathurā, is busy winning the favour of proud women. He no longer has any need of the forests of Vraja and no reason to please the gopīs. You are the messenger of the Lord of the Yadus; what business have you here? Because of you Kṛṣṇa will be put to shame in the assembly." (1)

"Only once did He make us drink the enchanting nectar of His lips[11], and then at once He abandoned us, as you abandon flowers. How then does Padmā serve His lotus feet? Alas, her mind too must have been stolen by Uttamaḥśloka's false words." (2)

What offence did Kṛṣṇa commit against the gopī that her heart is so burdened? Hear the reason. Kṛṣṇacandra made her drink His enchanting nectar of the lips, stole the gopī's heart and at once abandoned her. Just so a foolish one like you leaves a lovely flower and flies off, its mind already elsewhere. This is how Kṛṣṇa has dealt with us. Why then has the artless Padmā still not left Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet, and why does she serve them so carefully? Padmā has believed Kṛṣṇa's false words. But the gopīs are never as unknowing as Padmā. (2)

“O six-legged one! Why do you sing so much here, before us homeless women, about the Lord of the Yadus? To us it is an old song. Sing about Him to the friends of Arjuna’s friend: His beloveds, whose burning at the breast He has soothed, will give you what you desire.” (3)

The bee is singing about Kṛṣṇa to please the gopī. Understanding this and hearing its sweet tune, the gopī says: “Listen, bee: Kṛṣṇa has no home. The Lord of the Yadus has long been known to us. We have heard about Him many times and have come to know Him; we will listen to no more songs. Go to those who are now dear to Kṛṣṇa and sing to them. Those wise ones who have gained Kṛṣṇa’s embrace are free of the burning in the breast and full of love for Kṛṣṇa. Those fortunate ones, His beloveds, will hear your song about Kṛṣṇa, welcome you and give you honour.” (3)

“What women in heaven, on earth or in the lower worlds are beyond the reach of Him whose brows play above His deceitful, charming smile? Śrī herself worships the dust of His feet — what are we? Still, the name ‘Uttamaḥśloka’ befits only one who is merciful to the wretched.” (4)

“O bee, do not tell me that Kṛṣṇacandra remembered the gopīs and, tormented by the pain of Anaṅga, anxiously sent you as a messenger to console me. I can say this: all the women in heaven and on earth are within Kṛṣṇa’s reach. Seeing Kṛṣṇa’s brows shining above His deceitful, charming smile, Lakṣmī serves Him constantly. Beside Lakṣmī-devī we are nothing. Though Kṛṣṇa is deceitful, He is sometimes suddenly generous. Tell Him: the name ‘Uttamaḥśloka’ belongs to one who is merciful to the wretched.” (4)

“Take your head away from my feet! I know you are skilled in coaxing: you have come from Mukunda with a messenger’s flattering words. For His sake we gave up our children, our husbands and everything else in this world and the next, yet He, whose heart is fickle, has abandoned us. How can we make peace with Him?” (5)

Seeing the bee at her feet, as if it had fallen at her toes to beg pardon for an offence, the gopī says: “Take your head away from my feet, clever bee! Tell me, what has Mukunda taught you? I have understood in my heart, bee, that you are skilled in sweet words, in pleading and in a messenger’s duty. Do not say, ‘What fault has Mukunda?’ — you wicked bee. I gave up husband and son and even my duty towards the next world; I have no work but service to Kṛṣṇa. Yet Kṛṣṇa, whose heart is fickle, has easily forgotten [us]. There is no need to speak of Him any more; I will not even raise the matter of making peace.” (5)

“Like a hunter, He cruelly shot the king of the monkeys. Conquered by a woman, He disfigured another woman who came to Him with desire. Having accepted Bali’s gifts, He bound him like a crow. Enough, then, of friendship with the Dark One! Yet it is hard to give up talk of Him.” (6)

“O bee, when the gopīs remember Kṛṣṇa’s former incarnations, they grow afraid. When Hari came as Rāma, like a hunter He killed Vāli cruelly and without a thought. When Śūrpaṇakhā came to Rāma full of desire, He, obedient to Sītā, cut off her nose and ears. In the form of Vāmana, Hari received offerings of worship from King Bali, and then, to deceive him, this ‘virtuous’ one bound him like a crow. Friendship with Him is no good, O bee. Yet I know how hard it is to give up the wealth of talk about Him, and so I admit that I have no strength to give it up.” (6)

“Many who even once taste with their ears a drop of the nectar of His pastimes cast off duality — attachment and aversion — and are ruined. At once leaving their wretched homes and families, they become destitute and live by begging, like birds.” (7)

“We know how powerful talk of Kṛṣṇa is: it destroys the creeper of the three aims of life (trivarga) — dharma, artha and kāma. Having drunk with their ears a drop of the nectar of Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes, people become free of attachment and aversion and give up everything. Renouncing enjoyment, they live by begging like birds, and suddenly abandon their homes and kin, full of misery as these are. Even if this is fitting, we are not able to do it.” (7)

“We believed His false words as truth, as a foolish doe believes the hunter’s song. And again and again we, Kṛṣṇa’s beloveds, have felt the sharp pain of love from the touch of His nails. O messenger, speak of something else.” (8)

“O messenger, just as a foolish bird trusts the hunter’s song and suffers with an arrow in its heart, so we trusted Kṛṣṇa’s words and have found pain. The sharp pain of love (Madana) from the touch of Kṛṣṇa’s nails is burning me — speak of something else.” (8)

“O friend of my Beloved, have you come back? Has my Beloved sent you? You are worthy of honour, dear one: ask for whatever you wish. But how will you take us to Him, from whom it is so hard to part? For on His chest, O gentle one, His consort Śrī always dwells.” (9)

Having heard all this, the bee flew away and then came back. Seeing this, the gopī, after reflecting in her heart, says: "You are the friend of my dear Kṛṣṇa; at Kṛṣṇa's bidding you have come here again from there. So you are worthy of my honour, best of messengers. Tell me your request — what do you wish? Śrī Kṛṣṇa will never give up union [with Lakṣmī]. Why, then, should you now take the gopīs away? I tell you: Śrī Kṛṣṇa's consort Lakṣmī stays on the Lord's chest and now serves Him constantly." (9)

"O gentle one! Alas, Nanda's son now lives in Mathurā. Does He remember His father's house, His kinsmen and the cowherd boys? Does He ever speak of us, His maidservants? When will He place on our heads His arm, fragrant as aguru?" (10)

Addressing the bee as "gentle one," the gopī, overflowing with emotion, says: "Having returned from His teacher's house, the Ārya-putra now lives happily in the city of Mathurā and has forgotten the maidens of Vraja. Does He not remember His father's home? We were His maidservants — has He forgotten us so completely that He never speaks of us? When will He consider me worthy of His care and touch me? When will He place His hand, fragrant with aguru, on the gopī's head?" (10)

Even the greatest scholars whose knowledge comes from the senses — those bent on pleasing their own senses, who think themselves learned and are intoxicated with material learning — are unable to understand the transcendental rasa of separation (vipralambha) —

108 So too with the songs of the queens at the end of the Tenth Canto: scholars do not understand their special meaning.

Anubhāṣya.

(b) The songs of the queens, as at the end of the Tenth Canto: see Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 10.90.15–24. Namely:

“O kurarī! At night, when the whole world sleeps and the Lord sleeps with His awareness hidden, you do not lie down: sleep has left you and you lament. Can it be, friend, that your heart too, like ours, has been deeply pierced by the generous, playful glance of the smiling Lotus-eyed One?” (1)

Having finished their water pastimes, the queens, their hearts absorbed in thoughts of Kṛṣṇa, sank into reflection: “O friend kurarī, now, at night, the Lord sleeps, while we stay awake for Kṛṣṇa. His sweet sleep is broken; seeing what has become of us, you weep. Why do you not sleep? Are you wholly absorbed in thinking of Kṛṣṇa, or has His smiling glance pierced you?” Kṛṣṇa’s sweet smile, a heart pierced by His glance — such are the feelings of the queens. “Everything that happened to us has happened to you,” the queens all say to her together. (1)

“O cakravākī! At night you do not see your companion; you close your eyes and cry piteously. Or, like us, have you become a maidservant of Acyuta, and do you wish to wear in your braid the garland His feet have touched?” (2)

“O cakravākī, at night you do not see your companion; you do not open your eyes, and in grief you cry piteously. Or are you remembering something and longing to place on your head the garland that Acyuta’s feet have touched and that delights the queens? Tell us plainly, cakravākī, why you weep, so that the queens may understand.” (2)

“O ocean! You roar all the time; sleep does not come to you, and you stay awake without end. Or has Mukunda taken away your marks, and have you, like us, fallen into a hopeless state?” (3)

“O ocean, it is not written in your fate to sleep at night or to know happiness. Staying awake and weeping is your lot: your heart is broken, like ours. Mukunda carefully wiped away the marks of kuṅkuma and the rest from the queens. Has He not dealt with you in the same way, ocean, and have you not come to the same state?” (3)

“O moon! A grave consumption has seized you: you have wasted away, and with your rays you do not dispel the darkness. Or, like us, have you forgotten Mukunda’s words, so that you seem to us to have fallen silent?” (4)

“O moon, consumption has stricken you badly, and with your radiance you cannot dispel the darkness. Or have you lost your way singing of Kṛṣṇa and stopped spending words? We see that you belong to our circle.” (4)

“O breeze from the Malaya hills, how have we displeased you, that you kindle love in our hearts, already pierced by Govinda’s glance?” (5)

“Listen, Malaya breeze: what is so wrong in our conduct? Our hearts are pierced by Govinda’s glance, and you, so skilled at sending Kandarpa — are you taking revenge on us?” (5)

“O handsome cloud! Surely you are dear to the Lord of the Yādavas, and, like us, bound by love, you think of Him who bears the mark of Śrīvatsa. Like us, you are full of longing, your heart is troubled, and remembering Him again and again, you shed streams of tears. Association with Him brings only sorrow.” (6)

“Listen, cloud, friend of Kṛṣṇa: like the queens bound by love, you think of the Śrīvatsa mark. You meditate on Kṛṣṇa’s company, die of longing and grief, and seem to shed streams of tears.” (6)

“O sweet-voiced cuckoo! With a voice that revives the dead you repeat the sounds of my Beloved’s voice. Tell me, what can I do today to please you?” (7)

“Listen, sweet-voiced cuckoo: you imitate so skilfully, and your speech revives the dead. Tell us how the queens may please you, and we will do just that.” (7)

“O wise mountain! You do not move or speak — surely you are pondering something great[12]. Or, like us, do you wish to hold the feet of Vasudeva’s son to your breast?” (8)

“O wise mountain, you are motionless, the best of silent ones, absorbed in thoughts of something great. Like us, you have vowed to keep the feet of Vasudeva’s son in your heart.” (8)

“Alas, O rivers, wives of the ocean! Your pools are drying up; you have grown thin and lost the beauty of your lotuses — just as we, not receiving the loving glance of the Lord of Madhu, our dear husband, have wasted away with hearts laid bare.” (9)

“O rivers, wives of the ocean, I see that your water has dried up and the beauty of the lotuses is gone. You have grown thin, lost your joy in the summer heat, and no longer increase the ocean’s happiness. All the queens are wretched: their hearts are parched, their bodies wasted; they are deprived of the love of the Lord of Madhu. Are you not the same — without water, robbed of beauty, deprived of His loving glance?” (9)

“Welcome, swan! Sit down, drink milk and tell us, dear one, about Śauri. We know you are His messenger. Is the Unconquerable One well? Does He, whose friendship is fickle, remember the words He once spoke to us? Why should we serve Him? O servant of a petty master[13], call Him here, the fulfiller of desires — but without Śrī. Is she the only woman wholly devoted to Him?" (10)

"Welcome, swan; we greet you warmly. Drink milk and tell us Kṛṣṇa's message. We have always known you as Kṛṣṇa's messenger. Has Hari sent us any word? We want to know: is Kṛṣṇa happy? Does He not remember us at all? Lakṣmī alone serves Him, and we are maidservants. Why should we choose one who spends words but does not fulfil desires?" (10)

Faith in the Lord's transcendental pastimes of separation awakens only by the power of the mercy of the servants of the guru (Nityānanda) and of Gaurāṅga —

মহাপ্রভু-নিত্যানন্দ, দোঁহার দাসের দাস ।

Mahāprabhu Nityānanda of the two of the servant the servant
yāre kṛpā karena, tāra haya ithe viśvāsa on whom mercy bestow his is in this faith

109 Only one who receives the mercy of Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda, or of the servant of Their servants, comes to have faith in this.

Only by following the mood of separation (vipralambha) born in the Lord from separation from Kṛṣṇa does one become free of anarthas and attain love for Kṛṣṇa —

শ্রদ্ধা করি' শুন ইহা, শুনিতে মহাসুখ । śraddhā kari' śuna ihā, śunite mahā-sukha faith having hear this in hearing great joy khaṇḍibe ādhyātmikādi kutarkādi-duḥkha will destroy spiritual and other of false arguments and others sufferings

110 Hear this with faith: there is great joy in hearing it. It will free you from the threefold miseries and from the pains that false arguments bring.

Notes

1. So in the edition: «মধুদ্যানে» (madhudyāne); by the rule of sandhi (madhu + udyāna) — «মধূদ্যানে», as in the Anubhāṣya. The sense is the same: "in the spring garden". ↩

2. So in the Gauḍīya Maṭha edition: jāniyā (“learning [of this]”). Other editions read jāniyāo, “though he knew [the meaning]”: “Though Svarūpa Gosāñi knew it, he still asked.” ↩
3. In the edition this verse is marked as the refrain of the song (ধ্রু). ↩
4. So in the edition: «জানি'» — a participle, “knowing”: the Creator, knowing his art, fashioned Him. Without the apostrophe («জানি», “I know”) the line would read: “surely the Creator fashioned Him”. ↩
5. In the edition this verse is marked as the refrain of the song (ধ্রু). ↩
6. “Lalita-lavaṅga-latā” is Jayadeva’s spring song from the Gīta-govinda (first canto), about Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes with the gopīs. ↩
7. In the edition this verse is marked as the refrain of the song (ধ্রু). ↩
8. The verse is the same as Madhya 23.36 (there the edition reads «নবপ্রেমা»; the Anubhāṣya refers there as well); the translation follows the revised text. ↩
9. The edition has মন্দমুরলীধ্বনিকারী, “who makes the soft (manda) sound of the flute”; the verse has mandra, “deep,” and so does the Anubhāṣya (gambhīra). The verse translation reads “whose flute sounds so deep.” ↩
10. The verse translation (following the Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya) understands it differently: “the madman is no longer occupied with worldly affairs.” ↩
11. The edition has সুরাং (surām, “wine”), a misprint for সুধাং (sudhām, “nectar”), as in the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; the translation follows the correct reading. ↩
12. The edition has হমান্তমর্থম্ (hamāntam artham), a misprint for মহান্তমর্থম্ (mahāntam artham, “something great”); the Bengali paraphrase likewise has mahad-artha. ↩
13. Otherwise (as the Bengali paraphrase below understands it): kṣaudrālāpa (“petty talk”) refers to Kṛṣṇa — “why should we serve one who spends words but does not fulfil desires?” ↩
14. The verse translation is broader: “…He draws women to Him.” ↩
15. The verse translation reads differently: “…entices customers, the women of the whole world.” ↩
